PUBLISHERS FOREWORD

It is just twenty years since the first edition of this Handbook appeared, inspired by the need of a guide book for parents. Previously they had no means of comparing the private schools and their relative merits in a large way. This apparently unprejudiced guide was hailed with praise and from the comments received in the first three months, a sixty-four page pamphlet was published.

PUTTING THE PARENT IN TOUCH

This book, to perform its function as a guide to the selection of the school environment to which a particular boy or girl will respond most beneficially, must open up broader horizons and wider vistas. It must help parents to visualize personalities and decide which of the many schools apparently suitable for their children will promote the most healthful all-round growth and develop the best habits—moral, physical and intellectual.

Merely to list schools in the order of their wealth, their social snobbishness, or of the approbation given them by colleges and universities who look upon them favorably because of their servility to the academic dead hand, would be a poor and inadequate service to the parents and advisers of the coming generation.

It has been a difficult task to deal both critically and appreciatively with the personalities that have made and still dominate the schools, but that has been our first purpose. An interpretation of the psychological slants and attitudes, the prejudices or principles of those who control, with reference to their outlook on the developing adolescent, has been the desideratum.

Parents who use this Handbook will, it is hoped, feel in touch with present conditions in the schools. Here they may discern those who are living on their reputation, on the stir made by their radical founders three or four generations ago, schools that appeal to social climbers and those in which there is anxiety and instability. They may detect also, it is hoped, those schools where there are real educational leaders who are still carrying on the private school tradition of making sound what was untested, of making an ideal actual, working out their individual experiments which when fully demonstrated will be clamored for by the taxpayers and eventually introduced into the public schools. With this understanding of the school, the parent will be the better able to select the environment suitable for his particular need.

HOLDING UP THE MIRROR

The private school people themselves were perhaps even more interested in the first edition of this Handbook, for here was a mirror held up to them. The frank and critical treatment created a little ripple in the educational world. This was the first time that they had seen all the schools of the nation brought together and presented with some sense of proportion. For there had been no association that had brought them all together, no publication that represented them. Each school head working in his own narrow rut, serving a particular clique or clientele, was conscious of little other than the competing schools that appealed to the same sect or set, or prepared for the same college

AN EDUCATIONAL COMPENDIUM

Incidentally, the Handbook has come to be a compendium of available and useful knowledge of trustworthy character on the best ideas and facilities that exist for the greatest advancement of our own favored children. With the necessary data, interpretations may be more discerning, discriminations more meticulous, horizons broader, out of vision may come inspiration, and more extended views may lead to brighter futures.

The nineteen editions of this Handbook constitute by far the largest body of printed matter on the Private School in America. These Handbooks, in their conspicuous red binding, are a familiar sight in every educational office and information bureau. Their sale to parents, direct and through bookstores, is evidence that parents need and appreciate such a guide.

EDITORIAL PREFACE

In this Nineteenth Edition we record more changes than have taken place for many years past. These are not only in the schools themselves and their policies but also in the underlying ideas and ideals of educators and scientists and those on the frontiers of thought who inevitably are changing the direction of education.

CHANGES IN EDUCATION

Every year in the first hundred introductory pages of this Handbook we endeavor to give some general impression as to what is happening in education as a whole, and particularly on the frontiers. Within the year there has been a revolutionary change in the phraseology of educators addressing educational associations, in the books they put forth. We hear school men talking of "the changing world" of "education for a new social order" of "social reconstruction." One is justified in suspecting that these phrases too may become fad words like the 'apperception', 'integration', 'evaluation', 'correlation', and other Latinities that speakers used to mouth at educational meetings and in the up to date books of other years.

But the growing field of knowledge and the need for orientation within it calls for a redirecting of education. This has been brought up on us by the breakdown of our economic and industrial systems in which we once had such implicit faith. The books that in this seeming chaos give us extended horizons, we consider of educational import. For that reason they are given extended space in this volume in the belief that they are most likely to be fundamental in affecting opinion and action in the educational world in the coming years.

CHANGES IN THE SCHOOLS

Economic and social conditions have resulted in more important change in schools, their executives, policies, fees and courses offered, during the early part of 1935 than in any similar period. There are new schools that have been opened throughout the depression by men and women of courage, but not so many as usual. The greatest increase has been in the southwest where the desert and ranch schools continue to gain in popularity. More schools have been closed, especially the more expensive types. European schools appealing to Americans show the most notable decrease. "Most of the Paris finishing schools have closed," writes the head mistress of one which has not, March 27, 1935. But some of them will again open when Continental conditions seem more secure and American incomes are restored

GETTING THE INFORMATION

Collecting, arranging and editing detailed information on the private schools occupies the entire time of a staff twelve months in the year as well as the attention of a much larger editorial staff part of each year. Contacts are maintained and information secured in many ways,—through direct visits to schools by members of the staff, visits of school people to our offices, reports of parents and pupils recommended or sent to the schools; through teachers who use our placement service, through trustees and donors who consult us, as well as through the more usual methods of studying everything that is put in type either by or about the schools.

The statistical data is printed in general as reported by the schools. The number of pupils taking College Entrance Board examinations is taken from the report of the board. The figures in regard to enrollment, faculty, rates, courses, naturally have to be accepted from the school. The questionnaire cautions, "see that your statistics are correct,—as they actually are, not as you would like to have them." But occasionally the figures sent in to us seem questionable. In such cases blank spaces carry their own implication.

To maintain the independence of our descriptions of the schools and their value for parents we invariably follow the rule of never printing anything that a school sends in exactly as it is submitted. This is quite essential for our own self respect and for the reassurance of parents, as is the similar rule to never accept a fee or commission from any school for a pupil enrolled.

But even after twenty years some head masters fail to appreciate that in the case of their own school their puffery and pollyanna optimism toward the things close at hand may not be substituted for this critical attitude. One head mistress writes recently "I am simply amazed that we have evidently no authority to change copy that we do not like. . . I definitely dislike the last sentence. . . You will notice that I have emphasized the present. . . I want to make it clear that I do not wish the copy as in last years Handbook to appear and in its place trust that I shall see the copy which we are once again submitting today. . . It mustn't go in again."

SELECTING THE SCHOOL

Before deciding on a school this year it will be well to ascertain what changes have taken place in its policies and personnel. Some of the oldest and best established schools as well as many another have completely changed. The school may not prove to be as it was recently.

An Advisory Service for Parents has grown out of the publication of this guide book. There was no thought of this when the first edition was produced. But parents buying the book in bookstores, consulting it in their libraries and clubs, referred to it by those who knew about it, came to Mr. Sargent in person or wrote for further detailed advice about just the right school for their boy or girl. By 1930 the number of families that appealed for educational information or assistance had grown to twelve hundred annually. In the early years of the depression this number dropped to eight hundred but now is again about a thousand.

THE PARENTS PROBLEM

In the more densely populated and highly socialized countries the state has taken over many of the parents functions. That seems to be the more or less inevitable tendency. But in our country though the state provides schooling for all, the parent is still responsible for the existence of the child, his proper nourishment, physical and mental, and to a considerable extent for the environment in which he develops. For those who are privileged to select a school for their children the choice is by no means easy. It calls for wide knowledge and deep understanding, not only of schools and their traditions, atmosphere, the class of boys and girls; of teachers and their methods, but of the families that patronize them and the personality of those who control. The environment, the associations in which your child spends his most impressionable years is of vastly more import to him than the terms of your will. The first determines and fixes his habits, his attitude toward life, the nature of man he is to be. And yet how few parents give as much thought to these early years, or engage equally good counsel and advice. What more important function has the parent to perform?

Fortunately private schools differ widely in type as well as in their clientele, atmosphere, methods, expenses and in the personality of those who control. Boys and girls will continue to be born different and while most of these individual differences are inevitably ironed out by the various institutions and mores which make up our culture, still it is desirable that some, at least to a certain extent, be permitted to develop their own best qualities in an environment that makes this possible

But most parents still go about the choosing of a school in a haphazard way. They take the school prescribed by their friends and neighbors. Some pick 'the proper school' in the process of keeping up with the Joneses. Others gravitate to the school nearest them. A good Episcopalian family is almost necessarily limited to a choice of a few church schools. A family of social prominence has its choice similarly restricted and some poor little rich children are condemned to go to a school because their fathers or mothers did, without any thought of its suitability. But even the conscientious open-minded parent, intent upon finding the best environment for his child encounters difficulties which usually force him back into the traditional rut. School catalogs and school advertisements have improved greatly in the last few years and are much more reliable than they once were. But seldom can either of these be relied upon to give the parent the information he needs. They furnish little more than clues for further investigation or verification.

HOW THEY FACE IT

More and more parents, conscious of things that never troubled their parents, are seeking the environment that will be most beneficial for their boy or girl. They know an ill adapted environment or an mimical personal relation between teacher and pupil, may vitiate otherwise favorable conditions and result in maladjustment which will bring about failure and may even develop into psychoses. For a particular boy or girl the atmosphere or the personnel of a well-nigh perfect school may prove unfavorable to his best development.

A thoughtful father writes, "Can you suggest a school for my son about whom I consulted you before? He is now eighteen years old, and feels the weight of years upon his shoulders and the burdens of the world. The school would have to be very flexible, and it would have to have some man with a sympathetic understanding of the boy, and one whom he could respect. Now if you can find me a school so exceptional in its breadth and freedom and adaptability that it will be a congenial place for a boy of severe moral integrity and passionate earnestness of purpose, who is a near-genius in some subjects, and who regards himself as a tragic failure in others, you will be doing me and the boy a great service."

Year after year parents return for help. Here a father writes, "I may be coming to you again very soon as we have another daughter, aged ten in October. She goes to an extraordinarily good school but gets through next year. She is a venturesome littlesoul, made very good at camp this summer, and would not be at all averse to going to boarding school a year from this fall if there were anything suitable of the sort for one of her age and capabilities. The way your Bolshevik idols in Washington and elsewhere are tearing the economic structure to shreds, it is quite possible that in a year's time one will not be wanting, much less able, to live in a good-sized house and hire servants and governesses. With the two older children away at school, a good boarding school might be a happy solution to our problem in more ways than one."

Another worried correspondent writes "My grandson is frankly not a student and only gets by on a small margin. We have the feeling that if he could go places and see things while studies went on that his interest might be more aroused. He is nineteen and interested in all outside things which the covers of books do not contain. Sports and mechanical things interest him and he has an intelligent knowledge of the latter. We are groping in the dark and are asking help and advice from you."

HOW IT WORKS OUT

A serviceable working knowledge of the relative merits of schools can only be arrived at by comparative methods,—the intimate experience of many who pool their knowledge. Such a group cooperating and working harmoniously may neutralize each others prejudices. Even then, year after year, attitudes, opinions arrived at, must be constantly tested and revised in the light of new information. And this requires an organization with adequate contacts and competent reporting. Representatives should visit schools, and school people should visit the advisers office. It is through knowledge gathered in this way that Mr. Sargent is able to solve parents problems as many enthusiastically attest.

A mother writes, "I feel that my daughter's experience has been not only extremely happy but of untold good to her. She has developed so much and has learned to adjust herself in a way I could not have hoped to accomplish. I feel very thankful that we sought and acted upon your very sound advice."

"May I take a moment to express my appreciation for your kindly interest. Parents cannot always be sure of what is in the child's mind, and whether the child is actuated by desires other than those which appear on the surface. But I am persuaded that as the result of my daughters talk with you, she is convinced that college is out. She is now definitely resolved to follow a musical career. You have, I am certain, helped crystallize her ideas and mine, too." Thus writes a father.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS IN CHANGE

Things are looking up a little in the private school world. A spirit of optimism, not unjustified, pervades in spite of the uncertainty and chaos of the economic world. Parents are making inquiries about schools and camps earlier, and definite enrollments are reported far ahead of last year. About twelve per cent more parents appealed to us for educational advice between October 1, 1934 and January 1, 1935 than in the corresponding months of the previous year.

NOT DEPRESSION PROOF

Five years ago private schools were entrenched. The great schools on solid foundations, buttressed by increased endowments, had just completed great building programs. Solid, conservative, they were looking confidently ahead. Up to 1931 the majority of the good private schools were filled,—hardly touched by the depression. They had remained as unconscious of the depression as President Hoover himself. They considered themselves depression proof.

When in the fall the depression hit the private schools it was tragic in its suddenness. Many had reported that they would open with large enrollments but a few weeks later enrollments were seriously depleted by cancellations. Many schools failed to open, others hung on for a time. Nearly all schools, through concessions or decreases in their tuitions, showed a large falling off in income.

Fashionable schools found their boasted 'waiting lists' vanishing. Such as remained were made up mostly of the new born. Schools that in the past had snobbishly turned down applicants, found themselves in distress. Among schools of lower type some openly adopted cut throat methods of slashing prices, underbidding for pupils already enrolled in other schools. But the greater number of substantial schools maintained self-respecting practices while endeavoring to fill their schools, avoid a deficit and still meet existing conditions.

By 1935 scores of schools had been discontinued, their faculties footloose, the remnant of their enrollments snapped up by other schools. Proud schools were forced to cut salaries. One blow after another fell on the faculties of some well-known schools, cuts in one case adding up to 76%.

The majority even today are just getting by. There are local day schools that have struggled through the depression to arrive at the spring of 1935 only to close their doors. Others, more stable, are making salary cuts this year for the first time. Only he occasional school which has made its special appeal to meet the times has prospered.

REDUCED INCOMES

The private schools must look for support to families whose income is $5000 or more. While the bull market lasted more than a million individuals reported a Federal Income Tax of $5000 or over. The latest published Federal Income Tax figures, for 1933, show that the number of families that can support the private schools has continued to diminish. In the three year period from 1931 to 1933 such families with children of school age dwindled in number from 92,686 to 53,417. Even more sharp was the decrease of similar families with incomes of $10,000 or more. The 14,000 reported in 1931 dropped to 8,000 in 1933,—almost halved.

VANISHING ENDOWMENTS

But it is not only in income from tuitions and in numbers enrolled that the schools have been hit. In the 15th edition of this Handbook, 1930-31, we reported somewhere between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 available for private school construction and equipment. Great endowments were listed, $17,000,000 for one school, $16,000,000 for another, $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 for one New England Academy, $7,000,000 for another. The incomes from even these huge endowments has dwindled today so that they scarcely provide wherewithal for the upkeep of the shells of brick and stone which they raised in boom days. More modest amounts have faded quite away. One old New England Academy with a comfortable return from its endowment in 1931 conservatively invested by the local bankers in real estate and bonds today finds its assets frozen hard, producing no income.

Invested funds no longer yield as they once did. The dead hand that provided so firm a foundation cannot stay the erosion of the flow from watered stocks. Some of the recent foundations whose millions of invested funds astounded the educational world only a few years ago have witnessed a shrinkage to a fraction of the pre-crash figures.

UNSTABLE FOUNDATIONS

Even in some of the most strongly entrenched and heavily endowed schools there is change and uncertainty. Readjustments are resulting from the dissatisfaction of school masters with their trustees who, nervous at continued deficits, call for resignations. One great school, offering what no other school can offer, with unequaled equipment and opportunities, is tied up by the impotence of a medieval, guildlike local board who hamperingly and trivially determine policies by a five to four vote, paralyzing the faculty and diminishing the vigor and influence of the school

Characteristic of the chaos is the condition in an ancient school of great wealth. The able president of the board dying, the head master a good mixer, devoting his attention to cultivating alumni, leaves the bookkeeper to become business manager, treasurer, dominating,—the Czar. In another great endowed school the trustees, divided into two factions, drive the nervous, idealistic head master to resign. In many another school with real estate complications and increasing bonded indebtedness, the head master has lost control and has or is about to be forced out by the bond holders.

HOPEFUL LEADERSHIP

Amid the encircling gloom the watchman discerns in the night evidences of new and youthful leaders aware of their opportunities. He sees inspired idealistic individuals on their own initiative compelling the support of trustees and leading their ancient schools on into new educational territory.

Notable is the head master of one old school which was once dominated by a board, autocratically controlled. Its new head leads boldly, sets new ideals and standards for the endowed college preparatory schools.

And here's another ancient institution with a new head who, true to the traditions of the school which has seen many an overturn and upturn in its century of existence, is impressing his ideals and personality on the school.

In still another in the middle west, where it is patriotic to support the public schools, almost treason and snobbish to patronize the private, a great and growing head master has used these depression years to successfully develop a plan of education which has made nationwide appeal and has been widely copied.

The world needs leadership and that is what the private school needs. Why shouldn't one come out of the other? Why shouldn't it be the chief purpose of the private school to scrap everything that suppresses and leads to conformity, to develop the individual and so save us from becoming white ants?

THE PERMANENCE OF CHANGE

"Nothing is so enduring as change", a wise man remarked long ago. That does not mean that change is constant. Water inevitably runs down hill but it may be dammed in quiet pools. But there must be an outlet by gravity or through evaporation, else some cloudburst may cause destruction. Change, too, is so continuous about us that like a smooth flowing river it does not trouble us until its course is obstructed.

OBSTRUCTING THE INEVITABLE

Scientific research, a development of our ancient questing mind, is at ever accelerating rate increasing our store of tested knowledge. Yearly we gain new data from which to revise our understanding of the material universe, its extent, its elements, new understanding of life, of man and his ancestors, of the varieties of peoples and their political, moral and religious institutions. Out of this has come and should come further and deeper understanding of the development of the individual,—child, savage or politician, and what determines his personality and behavior.

If the new technology and scientific knowledge available could be applied to the wise use of our resources there would be work and satisfactions for all and the course of things would run more smoothly. The failure to use this new knowledge to our needs, makes for the chaos about us.

It is fear that prevents the use of this knowledge and the even flow of the inevitable social change that would come from it,—fear on the part of the privileged individuals and classes that they may lose what they now have. And it is their opposition to the inevitable that sometimes results in violence.

C. F. Kettering, famed research man of the General Motors organization, says, "In applying these new facts in the future, we will have to use more intelligence. . . . We must plan for change, for change is our only constant!"

IDEALS AND INSTITUTIONS

Out of the knowledge of the world about him man in his past experience has set up ideals and standards. And out of these have grown institutions to preserve and render them permanent. Where our vision is short we easily fall into the error of believing that such ideals and codes and institutions are immutable. But no institution stands today as it did 3000 years ago, and that is but a passing hour in the million year history of man. Even the Roman Catholic Church, the greatest and hoariest institution in our western world, unable to prevent change has skilfully adapted its policies to conditions as they change with latitude and time

Even "the unchanging East", to one who knows it, is a kaleidoscope of migrations, civilizations and religions. Its arts and techniques so characteristically change over a range of thousands of years that the archæologist has no difficulty in dating any fragment turned up.

Looking back over a long period of time or surveying diverse peoples of common origin it is apparent that in nothing is change more marked than in those things that man has held to most steadfastly,—his convictions which he believed eternal and for which he was willing to die. Few of us today would fight for what men have cherished and fought for in the past. Nor would we stand for the ethics of Abraham, human sacrifice even of his own son, or for the methods of our grandfathers with the Indians or with their own children.

CHANGING HUMAN NATURE

'You can't change human nature' is one of the oldest bromides. To those blinded by self interest, or who are not alert enough to see minor changes continually contributing to great results, human nature seems ever the same.

"It is human nature to change itself. If it is to be changed at all it is only in ways that will leave it more completely satisfied," writes Professor Ernest B. Hocking in "Human Nature and Its Remaking". "Human nature is undoubtedly the most plastic part of the living world, the most adaptable, the most educable. Of all animals, it is man in which heredity counts for least, and conscious building forces for most. . . . His infancy is longest, his instincts least fixed, his powers of habit making and habit changing most marked."

From the moment a child is born his unconditioned reflexes undergo continuous conditioning, month after month, until no unconditioned human nature remains. If conditioning factors remain unchanged, because of our institutions and what we call our civilization, then there will be little change in human nature.

The greatest experiments in changing human nature that the world has seen have been going on these last few years. Hitler in a few months changed a kindly, down-trodden and depressed youth into one of cruel, blatant confidence. A hundred and sixty million Russians, superstitiously religious, ignorant and lazy, are now rationalistic, hard-working, ardent for learning. In Italy Mussolini has "de-wopped the wop", transforming a disunited, improvident and importunate people into a united, disciplined, aggressively confident nation.

OUR WASTEFUL SOCIAL SYSTEM

If we were all getting what we wanted, if we were free from economic pressure, the world would be more stable. It is becoming more and more apparent even to the common man that our modern methods of production and technology might supply his wants, enough to go around, if there were not so much greed, so much waste, so much war.

WASTED WEALTH

Since he was driven out of the garden, man, by the sweat of his brow, has brought forth from the soil the things he needed and the little surplus wealth that the acquisitive have accumulated. The uncontrolled greed, corruption and crime of our present regime is wasteful of life, wealth and opportunity. It is this wastefulness that leads to recognition of the needless causes of deprivation, destitution, and dissatisfaction, and drives us to strive for something better.

Of the billions of wealth destroyed in the last war, of the millions of lives lost and ruined, we are tired of reading. The figures are so vast they dull the intellect. And then we are reminded that in our own country more deaths have resulted from the automobile than from war and that crime costs as many billions as war. But of the thirty billions that have been spent for war purposes since the Kellogg Pact was signed, one third went to the profiteers, the promoters of this war expenditure. And our own country has spent more than any one other.

THE GREAT WASTE

This squandering of accumulated capital and manpower is not, however, the great waste. Enormous as it is, it is not the essential waste. Greatest is the waste of human energy and initiative, that finds no impelling force, drive or opportunity for utilization.

In this age of machine tenders, of armies of clerks of great corporations, of standardized procedure in chain stores, there is little opportunity for the feeble initiative of the little man. Harassed by standardizing influences he is frustrated, discontent. He finds no compensation in his daily life and is ready to explode on slight provocation.

Wars have been possible only because the populace could be stirred to hatreds, the repressed energies of the individual tapped. The 'old men' working for their own enrichment or aggrandizement knew that if war resulted they could always count on lives so thwarted, pent-up energies bursting for escape, that even war offered hope of release and compensation

A great reservoir of dammed up energy that finds no outlet has been created by our present social system. This pent up energy has been released by Mussolini, Hitler, Lenin, and Stalin. They have given each individual the feeling that he is an integral part of a greater whole. And so they have become leaders who can count on the fealty of their followers.

It is the frustrated individuals, not merely the unemployed, but the unhappily employed, those who are getting no kick out of their daily life, no sense of achievement, of fulfillment, who make possible the next war. The danger lies not in the accumulation of chemical explosives and machines for projecting them but in the vast reservoir of human explosives whose starved lives may find compensation in the excitements of war. When the drums beat it is their feet we hear march down the street.

THE BURDEN ON YOUTH

It was the 'old men', not youth, that started the last war. Some of them satisfied their pride of statesmanship, some their greed or lust. But it was youth who bore the burden, and youth who must eventually pay. We borrowed most and spent most when our income was highest. A trillion dollars, Senator Thomas tells us, the coming generation will be called upon to pay for debt now incurred, and in planning these debts and issuing the bonds we have craftily made some of them run four hundred years and longer.

Those of us who have income or property complain about taxes. But we don't worry about the payments we left to future generations. Taxes in England take twenty-two per cent of the national income, in Italy and Germany more and in Russia practically all. In this country at present only fourteen per cent of the whole income is taken by the government.

The one way in which youth can get back at the 'old men' is by paying only cents on the dollar, scaling down the debt. We call it inflation. Compared with the pre-war standard our dollar is fifty-nine per cent, the franc twenty-five per cent, the mark nothing. Senator Thomas looks forward to a twenty-five cent dollar and Superior Court Justice Reynolds sees the time when a dollar will be worth ten cents or less. And we force youth to it.

SOCIAL OBJECTIVES

Great thinkers, men of vision, building on new knowledge, may see clearly new goals to be reached. But while those who hold power are content their preaching avails little. Dissatisfaction must necessarily precede change. New social objectives can be made to appeal to the discontented. Today limitations in our initiative, the failure of opportunity to satisfy the urge within, makes for discontent.

In the search for remedial change demagogues and quack panaceas get a hearing. To the surviving conservatives of the confident, comfortable Victorian era, all the clamor and the changes about them are bewildering. To such it seems we are on the road to ruin. Once we have wiped the windshield and gotten a clear vision ahead we can better steer our way through the mazes of the present chaos.

THE BREAKDOWN OF LEADERSHIP

If we had had competent leadership our democracy would be working better. We might have kept education to its original purpose of training for intelligent citizenship. The plunderers and the grafters would have been barred from their easy opportunity and the demagogues whose millions of adherents now threaten our future would have been less heeded. In an acquisitive and profit making society where there are natural resources and opportunities for monopoly, large prizes to be won, business will control government unless government controls business.

Rugged individualism, promoted by our environment, made us pioneers, takers of the wilderness, exploiters of the Negro and the Indian and our natural resources. But it has not promoted much intense thinking on theories of government or social organization, which have occupied the more highly socially organized European countries. Inherited ideals of democracy, vague and confused, have prevailed. The people have been permitted to hold these ideals while those who knew what they wanted held the reins. So the ballot has become the means by which, through the precinct captain, monopoly and privilege are entrenched, with the aid of political leaders who take their gleanings from graft and crime.

COLLECTIVISTIC TENDENCIES

In our democracy functions that could best be performed collectively have from the first been undertaken by our local, state or national governments. And they have continued to take over additional functions as unrestrained and unregulated profit making has brought private management into disrepute. So by general consent government has taken over roads, sewage, water systems, hospitals, and the transportation of letters and packages.

It is our tendency to bind the future to our ideals. Just as our founding fathers put the Constitution into writing, just as our bankers in the twenties mortgaged our future through bonded indebtedness, so our intelligentsia today would mortgage the future through commitment to a fixed and definite plan,—socialist, fascist, communist. Each has the conviction that his is the only way. The scared conservative fascist forces label the others 'reds', and stimulate mass and mob hysteria against them. The idealistic element, always ready for martyrdom, offers an easy mark, fair game. Old Mother Nature millions of years ago perfected much more successful societies than anything she has yet achieved with the human species. The ants and the bees had no blue prints. With them it was trial and error, experimentation and failure, extinction or survival. That called for initiative, courage to meet disaster, and persistence in success.

PLANS FOR GROWTH

Our democracy was originally planned for a growing people. We scrapped our Articles of Confederation for a new Constitution which, as it provided, received many amendments in the first few years. Town and community planning prevalent in the early days has only recently been revived. Too long the taming of the continent and the plunder that could be accumulated turned planning to the plotting of real estate sub-divisions and the laying out of sales campaigns.

Now that we have again taken up social planning we are inclined to follow the method of the engineer or the architect. Each planner has a 'blue print' of the future. But planning for an organic, growing thing is different from engineering or architecture where all the parts stay put and remain unchanged. In growing things all the parts are constantly changing in themselves and in their relations to each other, and at different rates. Consequently any social plan must be not merely flexible and adaptable but it must constantly change.

To be successful with growing things we must get a common-sense, biological point of view. If our democracy, our government, our education are to survive, they cannot remain static. They must be alive and grow. We can preserve the qualities that are characteristically American only through continued adaptiveness to changing conditions. Only then can we be what the Founders were,—one hundred per cent American.

REDIRECTING EDUCATION

As originally conceived the whole purpose of our school system has been to provide an enlightened citizenship that would make democracy workable. John Adams demanded: "We must have a system of public schools devoted to instruction in moral and civic duties," and Charles E. Hughes said when governor of New York, "The people must be taught continuously to maintain a defense against party machinery controlled by a few." Under the leadership of Richard Welling, New York City lawyer, The National Self Government Committee is today devising ways and means to bring the schools back to the fundamental purpose of providing a means of improving the government, of making the schools as Benjamin Rush insisted "the sole instrument whereby government may be improved."

EDUCATION AND DEMOCRACY

As our school system developed, it, like our government, came under the control of those who had greatest influence. And so the program and curriculum of the schools became divorced from anything that had to do with civic or social needs or governmental defects. The corruption and destruction of democracy has been ignored, the attention of the pupils throughout their school years kept from almost everything that had bearing on their lives, present or future.

The schools of America have been used as a bulwark to preserve the status quo. The training in citizenship has too often stood for blind acceptance of the control that existed, ignoring the failure of democracy, the corruption of local government and the control of our economic life by selfish interests. As Heinrich E. Bucholz wrote in "U. S., a Study in Democracy" "School gives the child a fanciful picture of public government. . . . As a matter of fact it is an oligarchy."

In the recent past the public utilities, using modern methods of publicity in the schools and colleges, retaining professors, subsidizing textbook writers, and employing public relations counsel, flooded the schools with their propaganda and denounced their opponents as Bolsheviks. In their avaricious blindness they overreached themselves and are now whining at the revulsion against them.

Today there is a new understanding and awareness of what our ignorance has permitted greed to do in stultifying education and corrupting democracy. It is the failure of the leaders of the twenties that has brought Dewey down from the clouds and Counts up from the earth to salvage education.

SCHOOL AND SOCIETY

When John Dewey forty years ago began, in Chicago, to establish some relation between education and life, he produced his first great book entitled "School And Society." It was a queer sounding name in that "Age of Confidence," for what had school to do with society? Did this have something to do with the people you read about in the Sunday newspapers or was it an euphemism for some heretical socialistic doctrine? Meaningless to some, revolutionary to others, the phrase lived on in books. The always alert and incisive J. McKeen Cattell seized upon it for the title of a journal which for forty-one years has held high aloft a steady beacon flame.

Later we began to hear of the "social studies." But to our elders this "social" stuff applied to other than afternoon receptions or to church get-togethers was a little suspicious. For the "socialists" to their minds were akin to the anarchists who threw bombs at the Czar. Still later the propagandists for the pyramided utilities found in the "social studies" opportunity to plant their doctrine of the wickedness of local governments, monkeying with electricity, and to promote that horror, the spectre of communism.

It remained for the American Historical Association to accept the challenge of the time and show how education should be reconceived, revolutionized, replanned for the building of a new and better social system.

A NEW SOCIAL ORDER

Educational objectives will always be determined by those who control. In times of release of the old controls like the present, there is opportunity for anyone to announce new educational objectives. The conservative forces are reduced to using Hearst, the Legionaries and the Daughters as the repressive forces. But the objectives of education will always be determined by those who control. It is easier to see this at a distance as in Japan, Russia or Italy than it is at home.

It is not likely that our progressive educators will become our rulers or our permanent leaders. For intellectual leadership can never do more than give an impetus or a direction to those who sway the mob or lead the armies.

"Teachers cannot build a new social order," said Professor Howard E. Wilson of the Harvard Faculty of Education, "but if their teaching is to be at all vital or significant they cannot remain aloof from realities. . . . Teachers can be much more aggressive than they commonly are on all matters about which the community has not crystallized an opinion. . . . They can teach more of the unpleasant truths about war."

THE CHALLENGE ACCEPTED

"Since the present economic collapse is a challenge to every institution in our present civilization, it surely is also a challenge to our schools. One of the functions of education is to equip individuals to see the moral defects of existing social arrangements and to take an active concern in bettering conditions. Our schools have failed notably and lamentably in that regard."

It took courage to thus challenge American educators,—a courage shown by the educational pioneer John Dewey speaking before the National Education Association in February 1932, as reported in the 17th edition of this Handbook

THE NEW BATTLE CRIES

Only recently has the challenge been accepted. Within the year the gage of battle that Dewey threw down has been taken up by leading educators. Instead of the old shibboleths, "integration" and "evaluation," today we hear of the "changing social order," "education for a new society," "redirecting education." We hear these from speakers before educational associations and a whole series of new books bear such titles. In the list of educational books for 1934 compiled by the Enoch Pratt Free Library of Baltimore, these and similar titles seem to predominate. Even the ex-president of Harvard, Abbott Lawrence Lowell, in reprinting addresses of the past ten years, finds it necessary to adopt so militant a title as "At War With Academic Tradition."

But the most inspiring new slogans have come from the American Historical Association's Commission on Social Studies most of whose sixteen volume report has recently been published. Education is defined as "a form of action on the part of some particular social group." Our present system of education serves privileged interests which are passing

THE NEW EDUCATIONAL JOURNALISM

Nothing could be more stultifying than the educational periodicals of the last thirty years. And there are 282 of these listed by the U. S. Office of Education in its Educational Directory for 1932. They have dealt with the trivialities of methodology and administration, avoiding anything that was alive or vital. In them is preserved for all time a picture of the intellectual sterility and spiritual aridity that has characterized our schools for the past two generations.

But within the year there has been an entire change. An old journal like the formerly prosy Historical Outlook has changed its tone, format and its title to Social Studies Educational Method, too, under the same management has become what would once have been considered radical.

Scholastic reaching nearly 300,000 high school pupils, under the editorship of Harold G. Rugg of Columbia has become a leader in virile thought that must be shocking to the Legionaries and the Daughters, and their patron saint, William Randolph.

Even the official journal of the Federal Office of Education, School Life, has undergone a similar transformation and is publishing material that in President Wilson's and George Creel's time would have barred it from the mails.

But Social Frontiers, a journal of educational criticism and reconstruction, started in the fall of 1934 by George S. Counts, takes a bold and positive attitude for a new social order and new educational objectives. Believing that our present social system is crumbling and that collectivism is coming, it stands for preparing the children of the nation by indoctrination for cooperation for the common good.

INDOCTRINATION

The so-called "Social Frontier" group have come out boldly and with doubtful salesmanship for indoctrination. (Of course they mean indoctrination with their own ideas of collectivism or cooperation. But indoctrination is as dangerous a game as intolerance. There are times to be intolerant. There are times in the presence of proved evil to indoctrinate a child, in the presence of immediate and proved danger,—crossing streets or railroad tracks. But indoctrination is so suggestive of our early Puritanism, of Roman Catholic educational methods, of Russian education, and it has been so characteristic of American education of the past generation, that the open minded must revolt at it. The whole plan of Americanism and the teaching of patriotism, so called in the schools, has been to indoctrinate children with ideas or lack of ideas, held by Legionaries and Daughters.

It may not be too late to return in our educational methods to what is truly American, the individual, and to permit him to grow and develop with knowledge and understanding which will lead him to cooperate. In the early settlements in America, in the primitive life, and in our farm communities, the individual was developed and recognized, but cooperation was essential and required. It was community spirit, community sharing and common ownership.

WHAT EDUCATION MIGHT DO

In baccalaureate sermons, graduation speakers exhort youth to go out and win "Now go to it, but be a good citizen, don't disturb the status quo." Some, blind to the opportunities the world offers, lacking better things to do, find compensation in "making money." Others less ruthless are reduced to "making a living"

INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT

In our acquisitive society the aim has been the development of rugged individualism. But the result has not been the maximum development of the varied powers of the individual. Our education might more fully equip youth to see and understand and appreciate the everyday things in the world about, which would open up to him larger opportunities.

It is such a paltry thing to make a living. There is something creative in most of us until it is killed. If what we wanted to do brought a little recognition there would be less need for money compensation. But there are few schools which endeavor to preserve this best side of us, this saving grace. Perhaps at Bennington, at Black Mountain College, in a few college courses, in a few progressive schools, such an attitude offers the needful opportunities.

Hugh Mearns of Lincoln School, followed by numerous progressive educators in many countries, has shown in exhibits of children's untutored art, their innate, ethnic perception of beauty in line and composition, which few have yet had an opportunity to express. But this is generally lost when drawn into the maelstrom of the school curriculum and college preparation. As we learn more about the untutored child's tastes and abilities, we better realize how much has been denied us by the limitations put upon our development and training by our mores and our institutions.

BETTERING SOCIETY

We have boasted of our training for citizenship but there is growing realization that we have fooled ourselves and our pupils to maintain the status quo. Education might do more to put its recipients in contact with the actual processes of government, to give them an understanding of the value of cooperation with their fellows, and to create in them a desire to play their part in raising the standards of living and justice.

As population becomes more dense and frontiers disappear, as natural resources diminish, more attention must be given to bettering conditions of group living. This is true in all societies. The ants mastered and perfected it millions of years ago. Now it is becoming increasingly important among men. All the fascist or the communist is aiming at in his blind or stupid way is to improve cooperation in an increasing population. Their panaceas would have little appeal if democracy were intelligently led and successfully applied.

Conceived by our fathers as an essential to the successful working of democracy, education has been scared and perverted by selfish and stupid interests. Our schools have dodged their primary responsibility of training their pupils to make democracy a success, to promote cooperation, and to inspire them with a desire for the betterment of social conditions, maximum development of the powers of the individual, or improvement of the race.

IMPORTANCE OF FEELING

It is not so long ago that, as a matter of duty, all feeling was suppressed or overridden by the will. The importance of feeling, the dominance of the emotions, the reality of their physical basis in our glands, the realization that here is something more fundamental than our more recently developed and little used brain belongs to this century.

Our pioneer ancestors learned by doing, the girls in the household arts, the boys on the farm. But our schools for several generations have been committed more and more to rote work, memorizing dead and unrelated facts.

Learning by doing, brought back to our schools by John Dewey, has been the great inspiration of the present century. So far has it been carried that we find in the schools today intelligent children "doing things" until it is a bore. But such blind following of the great leaders is all too human.

We have overlooked the importance of motivation which is dependent on feeling. We have taken it for granted that children would have ambition, that they would have mental hunger. Knowing that action tends to excite interest, we have elaborate "projects" without stimulating for them that feeling which is the very spring of interest and will. Just as soon as the individual has gotten the stimulus of achievement from success in doing and has the feeling that he wants to learn, then we may safely leave feeling to furnish the drive.

For feeling lies behind every effort. One can learn by doing, but one can learn without doing if the urge within is sufficiently strong. School masters of genius and intuition for years have known this. The school as an organization has not yet appreciated the importance of feeling.

WHAT IS FUNDAMENTAL?

Man in his long experience on this earth has tested many things and found some good. And to these he clings. To have and to hold, to satisfy this acquisitiveness, he has developed institutions and built civilizations. That he may pass on to his children these acquisitions, he has adopted codes and set up legal machinery to stabilize and stem the shifting sands of time. That his children may get ahead of their fellows in this acquisitive world he has devised a system of training which he has called education.

But all this acquisition has to do with the accumulation of material things. Our education and our institutions have to do almost wholly with improving the economic status of our children. Even when the study is of poetry or the fine arts, there is a latent, hoped for, economic value in the result. One may as a teacher or as a writer peddle this information for a price. One may raise himself socially and economically by the club he joins, or occupy a pulpit at a salary. It is true, every individual should be economically self supporting. That is only sane.

So the economic dominates our life, education, religion, government, trade and war. We accumulate, distribute or destroy wealth by taking something from one to give to another. When we see wealth displaced from one class to another, or wealth destroyed wholesale, as in war, we bemoan the passing of civilization. But civilization is merely a complex of mores and institutions, most of which will pass or will change in course of time. The average individual, from an economic standpoint, is just so much accumulated capital which has been put into him to bring him to his present growth and development.

Most men whose knowledge of world events is broad and whose judgment is to be respected look forward to another and an early war, which many think will be more disastrous than any we have seen. Our sons and our pupils may become mere cannon-fodder. But even if three-fourths of the people and three-fourths of the accumulated wealth of the world were destroyed there is hope ahead if one fixes his mind on fundamentals.

WHAT ENDURES

In his insatiable curiosity man has kept prying into the darkness and mystery that surrounds him. He has created myths, believed devoutly in untruths, worshiped false gods. But once he has become conscious of something not previously seen, be it the utilitarian use of fire or the color of a sunset, that consciousness has never been permanently lost. There are no lost arts except for limited times and spots. Truth may be suppressed but will rise again. What has been lost are the old untruths, the old myths, the old beliefs, once devoutly held.

Once an individual has been able to perceive and tell his fellows about some discovery he has made in the world about him, that knowledge lives. The books in which it is recorded may be destroyed. The peoples who have talked of it and preserved it in their traditions may disappear, but the attitudes and the practices that resulted from the new knowledge have been inevitably transmitted to other peoples and have lived on.

Once we get a new idea inside our skulls then the world that we see, looking out through our eyeholes, is a new world. Let a hundred men of different races look at the same scene and what they see is as different as the ideas that they have in their own heads.

NEW DISCOVERIES

With new ideas we have new vision and are prepared for new discoveries, and the results are accelerated and accumulated at an ever increasing rate. Our fundamental knowledge of things of real importance, our fellow men, ourselves, our glands, our brains, our past, our future, belongs almost wholly to this century.

Within thirty years, due to the careful study of anthropologists, of what before seemed hateful and loathsome, heathen and savage, we have come to understand other peoples, their ethics and their religions, and from this comparative study and understanding, we have learned of ways in which we may ameliorate some of the evils of our own ways. The old discoverers told in their books of new lands and the resources they were looking for. The new peoples were mere savages to be enslaved or slain. To-day almost any enlightened explorer finds real companionship, something to admire in the primitives he may encounter.

Something of this new world that is dawning upon the human consciousness and its meaning for each and every one of us is part of the rightful heritage of our children.

BOOKS AND READING

The number of books published each year and their character indicate something of the reading habits of the American public. Comparison, so far as it is possible, of publishers' statistics here and abroad, affords some basis for contrasting the reading habits of America with other countries.

The reading habits of a people are the result of their schooling. For teaching reading is one of the primary functions of the school. And reading is the one activity learned in school that most of us make use of in later life. For of the twenty million pupils that were in school twenty years ago how many today write a hundred words a year? The percentage is very small. Writing is confined to the few. The other ninety-five per cent write a few postcards during their two weeks vacation and sign their names a score of times each year. But millions read. Look at our newspapers.

As a measure of the success of the schools in inculcating good reading habits we have for many years in this Handbook annually studied book production. Reviewing these surveys for the past half dozen years one notes gradually increasing interest in books and improved taste as manifested by the best sellers.

In the last few years there has been a growing interest in the subject of the reading habits of the people. Articles and books have been published in increasing numbers. Private schools have taken a greater responsibility for creating keener interest in good reading. In this they have followed the lead of Oscar McPherson in his wonderful work at Lawrenceville.

WHY WE DON'T READ BOOKS

In the past year The Publishers Weekly has printed a number of articles on the failure of our educational system to develop book readers. M. Lincoln Schuster in his article "Can College Graduates Read?" in the February 24, 1934, issue elicited general agreement that colleges and schools have in the main failed to teach their students to read either for enjoyment or for profit. Charles B. Driscoll, editor of the McNaught Syndicate, laid the blame on the educational system. He wrote, "But why should you expect a college graduate to read? He isn't taught to read, either in college or in the pre-college schools." Clyde R. Miller, director of the Bureau of Educational Service of Teachers College, Columbia University, wrote, "Unfortunately most schools and colleges do very little to create the reading habit." And half a dozen others interested in reading sounded similar notes.

In a later issue May 26, Sanford Cobb, in an article "College Graduates Do Read—Some!" reported on the reading habits of Yale graduates and showed that while they spent 29 per cent of their leisure time reading, they spend 26 per cent of it in exercise, 13 per cent on theaters and the like, 10 per cent on conversation, drinking and social activities, and 8 per cent on cards

WE ARE NEWSPAPER READERS

As a people we are dependent on the daily press. Not yet have we learned how unreliable our newspapers are, that they have failed to bring out important news, that they suppress news in the interests of those who own or influence the owners of the newspapers. Consequently other classes of periodicals have taken over the function of supplying information to those who have a thirst for it. Live periodicals like Harper's, religious publications like The Churchman and Unity have taken the lead. The way for all these was shown by such pioneers as The New Republic, and The Nation. But still newer periodicals have come into existence. Men of vision like Luce and Hadden, actuated by ideals, have been inspired to establish a new journalism, to supply a broader outlook through Time and Fortune. Similarly Quincy Howe has made The Living Age an honest and discerning reporter on international affairs. So there are available, for those who seek, data on what is happening in the world presented against backgrounds that interpret. This new journalism presents news of the great economic factors that determine our contemporary life, of the great corporations owned by the people but controlled by the two thousand big business men.

OUR CHANGING READING HABITS

With less and less money available for books the demand grows greater. Unemployment, if not leisure, has afforded more opportunity for more reading. Some of this reading has been stimulated by the need of getting into a warm place, the public libraries, to keep from freezing. Exposure to books often results in contagion. Readers are developed. They had no such opportunity when they were wage earners or when they went to school.

Libraries, with their appropriations decreased by more than a half, are unable to supply their needs though their number of borrowers has increased by the million. At the high we spent thirty-two cents per capita for public library services, largely for salaries, but had available only six tenths of a book per capita, though actually two books per capita were lent.

WHO READS GOOD BOOKS?

Of particular interest at this time is the result of the research of Charles H. Compton, president of the American Library Association, recorded in Who Reads What? H W Wilson, 1934

We who pride ourselves on a certain superiority in education will be somewhat disconcerted to discover who reads the better literature. Questionnaires sent to borrowers at the St. Louis Public Library revealed that readers of such authors as Mark Twain, William James, Carl Sandburg, the Greek classics, Shaw and others were not so much the professional classes as printers, clerks, bookkeepers, salesmen, office workers, mechanics and common laborers. Evincing also in letters written to Mr Compton was not the desire for self improvement but the greater appeal of better literature

Titling his essays with such questions as "Who Reads Hardy?" "Who Reads the Greek Classics Today?" "Who Reads William James?" Mr. Compton presents statistics in a readable lively style together with quotations from interesting letters he has received, and his own conclusions, among them: "The masses do have a sense of abiding values," and, "as one measures their taste century by century they can be depended upon to choose books of permanent value."

BOOK PRODUCTION

Book production for the past year has remained below normal as for several years. The number of book titles produced during the year 1934 falls seven per cent below that of 1932 and is less than one and a half per cent above the 1933 total. There was a falling off in books on biography, technical and esthetic subjects, religion and philosophy, while there was an increase in fiction, poetry and general literature, sociology, economics and science. In England the output of books shows about the same tendencies as in our country and a similar slight increase. England produced 11,196 to our 8,198, about the usual proportion.

Disturbed conditions in Germany and most European countries have resulted in a considerable decline in the number of new titles published during the last three years. A notable exception is Spain which has shown a marked increase. And in Russia the demand for books increases. We hear of three hundred million copies of a series for children. Production is limited apparently only by the supply of paper and the capacity of the presses.

WHAT'S PUBLISHED

The significant books of this year fall readily into two classes,—those of escape, which help us to forget the chaos and perplexities we are in, and those which serve as guide posts or attempt to point the way out. The desire to get away from the present scene and present perplexities is evidenced by the great increase in so-called "detective stories" and in such best sellers as "Anthony Adverse" and "While Rome Burns," which headed the lists of fiction and non-fiction best sellers. It was the sale of such books that brought a slight note of optimism to the book trade. On the other hand, booksellers and publishers tell us that the standard authors and substantial contemporary novelists like Thomas Mann, Jules Romains and Romain Rolland have suffered in sales.

THE CHANGING EDUCATIONAL OUTLOOK

In educational literature, both periodicals and published books, there is a great change. Methodology has been the preoccupation of the educators for a generation or more. Now some are wondering what education itself is all about. To what end? So we have a tremendous number of books and articles on education that would have been considered "radical" only a few years ago.

Educational fashions change every few years. Fads in phraseology, "integration," "motivation," and "mental testing," have given place to new slogans, "education for a new social order" and "reconstruction of education." Much of it is thoughtless parroting, the mere swinging back of the pendulum.

But education, more than any other human institution, is immediately responsive to change, and at no time in the history of the world has that been more apparent than it is today. Who in 1914 could have foreseen that education today in Italy, Russia, Germany, would be dominated and directed by Mussolini, Stalin, Hitler? They at least stripped away the sham and looked at education realistically. They realized that the children in the schools will soon be soldiers in the ranks, that in these children lies their future power,—that education is and has been propaganda with the young, just as Loyola realized four hundred years ago.

BOOKS THAT GUIDE US

Most characteristic however of the new titles of the year is the great number dealing with the economic and political scene in a new and hopeful way, books that attempt to reveal new views, showing where we have been wrong and how we got that way, of the inanity of our shibboleths, the brainless ruthlessness of our former rulers, the faults of our social structure. Many of these books ring false, dwelling on new slogans and catch phrases, the "decline of capitalism," "building a new social order," the "reconstruction of education," and the like.

But others see contemporary events in relation to the whole stream of change and help us distinguish eddies and backwaters and point the way to the main channel

Hundreds of books have been published during the past year that would have been too "radical" to pass the censors or the mails only a decade or so ago. There is an activity of mind and thought apparent today that is almost wholly unhampered and unrestrained,—unsuppressed unless it serves to discredit some generally accepted myth or institution that has not yet been debunked

Much of this hopeful literature has been produced to supply a growing demand. Much of the writing about "the new social order" is as vague and fuzzy and futile as the hopeful writing of the nineties on "the evangelization of the world in this generation."

WHAT BOOKS FOR EDUCATORS?

Most of the writing on education like education itself has been barren, divorced from life. Most of the educational writings of recent time have been sterile, involved in methodology, with ends not worthy in themselves of attainment, in fact, perhaps injurious and destructive. Educators should be on the lookout rather for the book, the investigation, the thought, that will help them to understand and develop the individual to the maximum of his potentialities, that will contribute to an education which shall build an intelligent citizenry capable of administering and perfecting the process of democracy and individual freedom.

A great number of important books stimulated by our present predicament have been published and serve to give us a greater understanding of how it arose and how we can in future avoid it.

But quite aside from such thought, investigation, and writing as has been stimulated by our present plight, the march of the inquisitive intellect goes straight on, ever clearing the way for man's broader understanding of himself, how he came to be in all his varieties, with all his institutions, customs, beliefs, standards, myths.

The anthropologist's study of primitive peoples, their cultures, religions, gods, ethics has brought us new understanding of the value of ours, of wherein our civilization has failed, why we are a guilt conscious, frustrated people, and wherein lie the seeds of our decay.

The study of other than human societies, insect societies, the recognition that our society is an organic development, should be helpful to the socially minded. The highly evolved societies which came into existence millions of years ago, so illuminatingly portrayed by William Morton Wheeler and other entonologists, may well give pause to Marxians, Fascists and Democrats who envision the destiny of man as lying along their lines. The archæologist has turned back the pages of history and added prologue and preface that has made vital what was before meaningless.

Education, so long divorced from the subject of man, what he is and what he might become, has yet to inherit and utilize the result of all this investigation, this great body of knowledge, of fundamental significance, which is doubling every decade.

The biological approach to man and his problems is yet foreign to the school master and the school room. We turn our children over to those who have no knowledge and little interest in growing things, certainly no training in such matters, in fact, our knowledge of growth in children, even physical growth, is recent and still incomplete. But we know enough to know how important it is and that what we formerly ignored and considered of no importance may stultify, dwarf, atrophy, distort—or on the contrary enrich, inspire and vitalize—the developing personality of the individual.

So as we scout among these new books it is on these frontiers of knowledge that we find books of deepest significance for parents and educators.

RECENT BOOKS OF EDUCATIONAL IMPORT

What books are most freighted with implications for the education of the youth of today? What books are of greatest import in indicating what kind of education will be of most worth for those now being educated?

Whatever one's definition of education, whether it be preparation for life, transmitting accepted knowledge, what you will,—books that tell us of the world we live in must have the highest educational import.

New and tested knowledge, the result of scientific research, affords the foundations for new generalizations, new inductions, understanding new truths about ourselves,—how we came to be what we are, how we have learned through our senses, how our consciousness and understanding of things about us, of our fellows, is gradually enlarging

All new knowledge affects old knowledge relatively. Even fundamental mathematical principles have been to some extent, affected by the new knowledge of relativity. How much more then have our beliefs, however sacred, however long instilled, however cherished, been affected by new knowledge! Without such new knowledge there would have been no advance in social understanding, in feeling of fellowship and kinship, no change in the old austere religious beliefs of our fathers, in the rigid moral codes of the past.

All the changes in our economic, social, esthetic, religious and ethical life are due to new discoveries that have been made. But these discoveries are slow in reaching the people, though the process of humanizing science, of disseminating and interpreting the new knowledge gains momentum

THE NEW KNOWLEDGE

How immense is the recent accumulation of scientific knowledge in every phase of human investigation is immediately apparent to any one who goes into a library where the proceedings of scientific societies are kept. The volumes of research and new discoveries seem to multiply with every year. Each year the volumes become thicker. It is safe to say that more tested knowledge has been accumulated in this first third of the present century than all the centuries preceding

How revolutionary the development of science has been in affecting all our beliefs, attitudes, habits and customs in the past is made clear in such a comprehensive and up to the minute review as The Endless Quest, 3000 Years of Science,

Blackie & Sons, London, 1934, by F W Westaway This is the story of man's insatiable simian curiosity, his unquenchable thirst for new knowledge It is a history of science and philosophy "It holds up in relief such great exemplars of scientific method as Galileo, Newton, Faraday, Darwin, and Pasteur It stresses the need for a wider scientific outlook on the part of all persons in authority Admittedly the history of science is the history of the gradual development of some of the most fundamental ideas and conceptions of civilization."

"The true man of science is one who never says 'I know' but says 'I believe,' or 'the evidence seems to show'; who never makes pontifical announcements" Let us speed the day when schools and colleges may make us all "true men of science"

Beginning with Ancient Geography and Early Civilizations, Babylonian Astronomy, Egyptian Mathematics, the Greek and Roman sciences, the Hindus and the Arabs, the thread of the narrative runs The Renaissance, Great Men of Science from Copernicus to Faraday. The latter third of the book puts us in touch with the latest in geology, biology, anthropology, radiation, the quantum theory and relativity The final section deals with the relation of religion to philosophy and science.

How dramatic has been the advance of science within the last few years and how freighted with potential change in all our attitudes, theories and beliefs is made apparent in The Advance of Science, Doubleday Doran, 1934. This extraordinarily well written and beautifully illustrated book covers the whole field of advance knowledge. It is the product of the Science Service, Washington, edited by the director, Watson Davis, and the chapters, written by various members, have been critically contributed to by scores of working scientists.

Thirty-two chapters bear such colorful titles as "Unpuzzling the Universe," "Within the Atom," "The Changing Earth," "The Chemical Revolution," "Our Ancestors - - and Others," "The Future of Man." The frontiers of all knowledge are covered We measure the universe, count the galaxies, weigh the stars, examine the cosmic ray mystery, investigate the atom and its energy, explore the stratosphere, go with the geographic explorers We learn of the possibilities of future radio and transportation, of eliminating disease, the importance of glands, race betterment, human behavior. The story of man is carried back tens of thousands of years in America and hundreds of thousands of years in the world. The last chapter takes a glance at the effect of science on the future of our population.

Such new and revolutionary knowledge, if it were known, would affect our lives profoundly and change the conditions under which we live. But the victims of our educational system have little curiosity or interest in what's new or what's ahead.

So limited is their knowledge and their outlook that they fill the columns of the Harvard Alumni Bulletin with protest and lament at President Conant's modest step in relegating Latin a little further into the background.

THE CHANGING WORLD WE LIVE IN

Those of us who are alive and aware, no longer live in the world of twenty or even ten years ago though about us are living fossils who do. Much has been changed due to the new knowledge and understanding that's come to humanity through those who continue to inquire and discover. In every field of human interest a vast amount of new knowledge has been accumulated in the past decades, even in the past few years.

Our educational institutions, schools and colleges, act as a dam, holding back this stream of new knowledge from their pupils and students. Their minds are filled, their time is occupied, their energy is squandered on the old dead stuff that has been memorized by millions for generations. Only those whose intellectual curiosity has not been dulled and dwarfed, only those not stultified by our traditional educational processes, only those who have escaped the supercilious sophistication that characterizes college graduates, can benefit from this new revelation, this new endowment of humanity. To them come the fertilizing streams of new knowledge dammed off from the academic curriculum. From such few seminal minds, fertilized by the streams that come from the perennial font of new knowledge, come the fertilizing influences for the lives of their fellows which would otherwise be barren and sterile. These unacademic minded through their writings are the true carriers of our culture. It is theirs to carry on the never ending quest, to stimulate scepticism of the accepted, to enlarge our understanding of our fellows and the world about us. It is they who have changed our attitudes, our beliefs,—that have made us what we are and are making the new world in which we are to live.

The "humanizing" of science given an impetus by James Harvey Robinson twelve years ago has induced a flood of books that present the new revelations for popular understanding. The broad general views of fields of knowledge, formerly kept in academic watertight compartments, which followed the success of H. G. Wells' "Outline of History" have enlarged human horizons.

The modern group of writers following the lead of Mark Sullivan's "Our Times," by bringing vividly to mind what we have half forgotten, have demonstrated the inevitability of the onward march of change. Civilized Life, The Principles and Applications of Social Psychology, Williams and Wilkins, 1935, by Knight Dunlap, Professor of Experimental Psychology at Johns Hopkins, is his "Social Psychology" of ten years earlier rewritten. It is a noble attempt to bring into one volume an understanding of man in his varieties of race, his psychology and the institutions that he has developed in living gregariously. Written by a psychologist, the standpoint is that of an anthropologist. Here is comprehension and interpretation of how individuals and groups react to their environment under a great variety of conditions and of how they have developed their ideologies and institutions. On so great a canvas there must be brush strokes awry, details amiss.

This book in an interesting and popular way gives us a composite picture from the standpoint of all the biological and human sciences of ourselves, of the world we live in, and what we have made of it. It makes clear how complete should be one's understanding of man through all his history in all his varieties and all the variations of his institutions before one can arrive at any sound conclusion on some phase of the life or belief of a particular branch of the human race at any given time. Seen against such a background any political system, any ethical code, any religious creed, gains new significance. We see countless variations of the system, code or creed, in other tribes, at other times. Dogma cannot live in such a clarifying atmosphere. It fades like ectoplasm under a Klieg light.

So the chapters deal with Races and Civilization, The Family, Religion and Political Organization, and with such topics as Social Progress and Propaganda. Human psychology is defined as the "study of the processes by which man lives, of the conditions under which he lives in specific ways, and the results of his living." The book prompts one to quote and summarize.

What we call civilized life is a culture development capable of wide application and adjustment to change. In any dynamic society conduct can never be completely standardized, so there will always be violation of conduct. There is less of "crime" in a static or primitive society. "Flouting of conventions and infraction of laws seem to constitute the essential spirit of civilization. When a population shall have become universally law abiding, civilization will have died." Race and racial psychology mean little to the anthropologist who knows that every country is a "conglomerate" of many different original peoples. "Racial psychology is merely a mass of speculation on so slight a foundation as to be useless."

A critic of Freud, Dunlap does not underestimate the importance of the psychology of sex and presents in his chapters on "Sex Differences" and "Marriage and the Family" a realistic, sane and serviceable psychology of sex for the normal person.

From his anthropological study he arrives at the conclusion that religion originates in the failure of life to satisfy primary desires. The emotional side of religion provides vicarious satisfaction and sustains the individual against the world's injustice. So it has often been a means of keeping a people subservient. "Loosening the ecclesiastical bonds always accelerates the democratization of government, and vice versa."

Religion and morals should always be taught separately in the interests of progress. To combine them constitutes a serious and continuous danger. Religion will survive as it assumes more positively the function of directing and integrating the human desires.

As democracy which "assigns all ultimate value to the individual and the state is justified only insofar as it assures the greatest social liberty to the individual," leadership of the intellectually superior is necessary in the face of the menace of a majority of ignorant voters.

Either business will dominate government or government dominate business. Increasing socialization is the only alternative to Communism or Fascism.

The importance of propaganda in modern affairs is recognized. An understanding of what it is psychologically is essential for self protection as well as for putting over one's own convictions. And he summarizes the fundamental rules of propaganda, closing with: "For the most permanent eventual results, aim your propaganda at the children, mix it in your pedagogy. Follow the example, in this respect, of the successful propagandists of the past."

We have thought we were keeping our schools out of politics, away from propaganda. The effort has been to keep the school curriculum unrelated to life in any way.

UNDERSTANDING AMERICA

The schools have done relatively little to make us conscious of the world we live in, of our own country and its real significance and the part that we might play. It is only recently that it has been possible for educators to put in the hands of pupils books that would lead them to some realistic understanding of the economic, social and political systems under which they live.

But it is still a somewhat precarious practice, for Legionaries and Daughters, Fundamentalists and Catholics blindly worshipping the old myths still influence school boards. Even in March, 1935, in Quincy, Mass., where Colonel Francis Parker in the eighties introduced the first elements of progressivism into our public school system, the use of such enlightened books was forbidden in the public schools.

Understanding America, Harcourt Brace, 1934, edited by W H Cunningham of the Jamaica Plain High School, Boston, is a new kind of book for use in high schools. It has been tried out experimentally and cooperatively with thirty-seven teachers and a thousand high school students throughout the country. It consists of more than a score of articles and essays by leading recent writers. Mr. Cunningham's introductory essay which gives the title to the book puts one in touch with American life, customs, political and business control, and the recent writings in books and periodicals that reveal knowledge on these subjects, so long kept under cover.

The essays are arranged in groups, the first three, by Struthers Burt, Raymond D Fosdick and Lewis F Carr, giving us an understanding of the land and its peoples as they are today, as we might learn of them from reading live periodicals and recent books, not in a Pollyanna, blah-blah way as they are presented in the usual text books.

The second section deals with business and its practices in articles by Norman Thomas, Stuart Chase and John Flynn who explains "Who Owns America?" Under "Government and International Relations" Walter W. Liggett tells us about the corruption of our cities, and other sections deal with "American Culture," "Leisure" and "Changing America."

Each section is followed by a reflective essay by the editor with suggested topics for themes and outside reading from recent books and magazine articles. The editor's purpose is to "sting" the student into "awareness" of contemporary facts and at the end in his final essay he reminds us that this book is only a "springboard. From it you are expected to dive gracefully into the troubled waters of contemporary civilization." Dealing with actual living things, with contemporary conditions and problems, it is almost too much to believe that this book will be generally adopted immediately in school systems controlled by ignorant and reactionary boards, in conservative schools dominated by those whose only view is backward. It might be called a primer for those who face a changing world.

Another book of similar sort for use in the senior high school is Our Changing Social Order, An Introduction to Sociology, D C Heath, 1934, by Ruth Wood Gavian, formerly teacher of Science of the Sea Pines School, Brewster, Mass., assisted by A. A. Gray, head of the department of Social Science, Berkeley High School, California, and Ernest Rutherford Groves, Research Professor of Sociology, University of North Carolina.

The early chapters cover the whole early development of our human culture and how it has reacted on human nature. But the greater portion of the book deals with the development of social institutions and problems in America. Interestingly and sanelly presented are the negro problem, the national income, labor, regulation of business, the party system, democracy and war, war and education, education and public opinion,— elementary and fundamental knowledge still denied all but a few, but more valuable to the pupil than most of the dead stuff in which he is drilled

POLITICAL AMERICA

What have schools and educators to do with politics? On the surface until recently the divorce has been complete. But underneath, corrupt politicians have been mining away at the foundations and taking toll of the money set aside for our children. Only within a year or so have school men dared to face the situation. Today our educators are being directly charged with traitorous responsibility for the present rotten situation. Ignorant and fearful and timid, they have failed to train good citizens to take an intelligent part in government. Satisfied with shibboleths and myths they failed to see beneath the surface.

And yet our schools were established and have been maintained in the devout but ignorant belief that they exist for the purpose of training an intelligent citizenry to take an active part in perfecting the processes of democracy.

Only a generation ago politics were eschewed by respectable people,—“too dirty to indulge in.” Theodore Roosevelt was almost the first of the well born of his time to plunge into the political fray. A century before it was the aristocrats who held political office. It was not until Jackson’s time that the spoils system came in and not until the last of the Civil War that it became worth while for the rugged individualists building great fortunes, enterprises or industries to stand in with corrupt politicians, their political bosses, and so increase their power.

In Chicago Yerkes, inventing new ways of corrupting the elected to win franchises for his Utilities, Insull, perfecting the process, came to control the political situation, bankrupt the city so that teachers went unpaid and schools starved. And to a greater or lesser extent the same so-called politics has affected schools in every community. Yes, schools have to do with politics and have suffered from it.

Glenn Frank in America’s Hour of Decision, Whittlesey House, 1934, with inspirational fervor attempts to solve the philosophical dilemma of the liberal of today. He faces both ways and sees a great deal that’s disturbing. He becomes eloquent in his invective as to the conditions that exist. He propounds large and generous but generalized suggestions as to what should be done. He would have everything put to rights including “a clean-cut and comprehensive policy regarding the relation between government and private enterprise.”

Dr Frank leaves us with a sense of his futility, of his having become quite impassioned and wrought up without having contributed anything very definite or helpful

Walter Lippman's The Method of Freedom, Macmillan, 1934, is clearly and beautifully written for the reader of our metropolitan newspapers, the busy business man who needs to have his ego satisfied with well sounding sophistries but whose mind is not critically attuned to the quick adjustments of a changing world

Lippman performs a humanitarian task in bringing compensation and limited satisfactions to the backward looking and unadjusted prosperous beneficiaries of our economic system, and in a way prepares them for the new things just around the corner which they cannot yet understand or envision.

THE NEW DEAL DOMINATES

The game humanity plays calls periodically for new deals, particularly when the same crowd has held all the good cards too long Those who held the cards played them badly so we had an overturn and a new deal. This particular New Deal shows somewhat the patterns of Wilson's "new freedom," and Roosevelt's "square deal" and reflects even earlier periods of unrest and aspiration.

Fortunately the dealer is a genial aristocrat, Grotonian and Harvard man, whose political training serves well his humanitarian sympathies and broad reading Here are some of the plays of those about the table

Henry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, with heavy administrative responsibilities and thousands of miles of speaking itinerary, has in the past year produced many magazine articles and three small clear thinking volumes, one on religious values, one entitled "America Must Choose" and now New Frontiers, Reynal and Hitchcock, 1934

In this latest volume, though he states it was hastily dictated, he has produced a good book, not a mere collection of speeches, but well thought out, thoroughly human and written in fluid readable prose He speaks of it as just an "introduction" to another book which might be called "The Process of Economic Democracy." This volume is an explanation of the New Deal as an effort to articulate that process.

Wallace is not a politician He is fundamentally an ascetic, scientifically minded, with a strong sense of social justice Characteristic of him that, though he comes from a state that leads in the production of hogs, he is a vegetarian, but no crank. Though he comes from a family that has devoted itself for generations to agriculture he has breadth and vision. He has a trained mind and broad knowledge. He is a student of humanity and civilizations. He knows Spengler. He sees the Chinese as the most rugged individualists, who cut their forests, silted their streams and destroyed millions of acres of their lands by erosion.

The "new frontiers" which he describes are social, economic frontiers. The new world is a state of mind which calls for an adventurous spirit.

But the book treats realistically of present day conditions, the private ownership of government, the new conditions which we face, the new rules of the game. "If the full truth were ever known about the way in which government influence has been used by great corporations," he bursts out, "public indignation would know no bounds."

The heart of the book is given to the farmer's fourteen year struggle for survival and social justice. ". . . the average level of intelligence of the farmer committeemen, as displayed in their own county meetings, is at least as high as that of the directors of the one hundred largest corporations in the United States."

Wallace sees himself of the middle generation who must face both ways, forward and backward, and harmonize conflicting interests. This book reveals an honest, clear headed man whom one can trust. Though he may make mistakes it will be hard to point to one who in his position would not make greater

The New Democracy, W. W. Norton, 1934, is by Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior. Though he carries a heavier burden of work and responsibility than any other member of the administration, and through his intrinsic honesty has made endless enemies among those accustomed to political privilege, he presents forcefully the aims and achievements of the administration. He meets head on the rugged individualist who stands for "regimentation in mill, mine and factory so that a few may grow rich and powerful at the expense of the many."

Rexford G. Tugwell, administration favorite, whose clear incisive thought and outspokenness almost bars him from a political career, in his The Battle For Democracy, Columbia University Press, 1934, brings together public addresses and magazine articles commenting on the New Deal and its social and economic creed. His prose still wears the academic style until in the fire of battle and controversy he hits hard and straight from the shoulder.

His is an industrial democracy. He believes that "financial juggling, the exploitation of workers and consumers must be definitely ended once for all, and that the continuity of industry must be definitely assured by whatever political means can be found " The New Deal stands for a new individualism, for "freeing the many from the regimentation of the few "

Tugwell's sense of social justice stirs the feelings sometimes more than it stimulates the brain. Advocating and arousing opposition as he does, it would be well if there were more understatement at times, more light and less fire.

CRITICS OF THE NEW DEAL

The New Deal was welcomed as a plan of salvation when practically all was lost. But though the bankers were rescued they have not been hesitant in criticizing those who saved them. The most devastating attacks come from the left but many are well reasoned challenges.

Challenge to the New Deal, Falcon Press, 1934, edited by Alfred M. Bingham and Selden Rodman, the editors of Common Sense, contains contributions published in that lively periodical from more than thirty of our leading radical writers and thinkers. These for the most part are sketchy, rather irresponsible bits of journalism, which critically describe the scene under the first year of the New Deal. Many of these sketches and articles are good and stimulating reading, many of them justifiably point the finger and attract attention to the worst abuses which belong not to the New Deal but to our long inheritance, to our characteristic Americanism.

However deeply one may be stirred, however much one may sympathize with the intelligence, the indignation or the irony here displayed, one puts the volume down with a feeling of relief that these radical writers are not in control of the government, feeling that there would be many more collisions and overturns on the straightaways and on the curves if these speedsters were at the controls.

The book leaves one too with the feeling that it is well that all these radical visions, all this talk of revolution, all these Utopias should be spread upon the printed page and exposed to the sterilizing influence of public opinion, so largely characterized by 100% Americanism. But among all these hastily thrown off germinating ideas there may be some that will survive and grow.

WHO CONTROLS

Once blinded by shibboleths, satisfied with words like "divine right" and "democracy," we knew little and cared less of those who sat at the controls. The fathers of our republic had reason to be dissatisfied, rebellious toward those who controlled. "An old, mad, blind, despised and dying king, princes the dregs of their dull race" and those who surrounded and followed after drove them to rebel at personal control. And so they endeavored to establish a "government of laws, not men"

The rich plunder of an unexploited continent was a temptation to men to seize power and gain wealth, evading or negating laws. The apple of temptation, the economic urge to pelf or power still remains. The theory of economic determinism the Marxists have made all important, ignoring human factors.

Bertrand Russell in his latest book Freedom vs. Organization, 1814-1914, W. W. Norton, 1934, accepts the economic factors but emphasizes also the personal factors in control. He makes it abundantly clear that Europe just before the Great War was controlled by a group of men as narrow, as selfish, as ignorant, as those who controlled the Congress of Vienna after the Napoleonic Wars. Here he tells the story in a wholly new way of the hundred years in Europe between Napoleon and the World War.

The theme is given by Milton's lines on the title page: "Chaos umpire sits, And by decision more embroils the fray by which he reigns: next him high arbiter Chance governs all." His purpose is to "trace the main causes of political change during the 100 years from 1814 to 1914." The title has to do with the ideals of freedom inherited from the French Revolution, embodied in our Declaration of Independence and Jeffersonian democracy, and the organization, social and economic, that developed in the European countries as a result of the Industrial Revolution and the imperialism of the 19th century. In presenting it he has given us a new vision and understanding of western history from the end of the Napoleonic era to the outbreak of the war and has revealed the true causes of the inevitable war.

At the age of sixty-two Russell has produced his most important volume. Versatile, best known as a mathematician, in which he excels, his first book published in 1896 had to do with "German Social Democracy." This work, evidently projected as a political and economic history of the 19th century, is not all his own. Much of the writing and research, he tells us, was left to his assistant. It just misses being a masterpiece though it is written in his characteristic lucid prose and manifests his usual luminous logic and quiet irony.

The book opens with a series of marvellously realistic portraits of those in control just after Napoleon's time, and who at the Congress of Vienna set up the Holy Alliance, under the guidance of Metternich, vain and vapid, Talleyrand, "undeniably a scamp" who did less harm than the more righteous, Alexander of Russia, and the only respectable figure, Castlereagh, who dominated England's foreign policy. We get a vivid picture of the situation in England, the king insane, the Prince Regent licentious and lascivious. These are the men who organized the new Europe. The part played by individuals, exaggerated by Carlyle, unappreciated by Marx, is here brought out.

Against the social backgrounds he projects the philosophical radicals Malthus, Bentham, Ricardo, men without vision, arguing from false premises. We follow the picturesque career and the development of the collectivist ideas of Owens, Engels and Marx. We see Marx vividly, trace the source and development of his ideas, which are subjected to an admirable critical dissection. Russell recognizes the value of these ideas but wisely points out that chance and personality as well as economic factors enter into the history of the 19th century.

Part III digresses to "Democracy and Plutocracy in America." It is interesting to know how those who upheld slavery as a sacred institution harmonized it with the Declaration of Independence, to discover the influence of slavery on our ideals of freedom and economic organization. The picture continues to describe the development of economic control in America, the conquest of the continent, the importance of the coming of the railway and with it the appearance of the "robber barons," the builders of the country, Vanderbilt, Fisk and others, looting and plundering it of its spoils.

Part IV, "Nationalism and Imperialism," ends the book with a series of portraits of the arbiters of Europe, those who controlled just before the War, Nicholas in St. Petersburg, Wilhelm, Edward VII, Edward Grey, Jaurez and Delcasse. They are self revealed through quotations from their intimate letters. No wonder there was war.

It is a new way, a new type of book. It is modern, a new way of presenting a portion of history, man's story, in which Russell has combined with his own personal interpretation the thought of the time, the philosophy of the development of ideas, of liberty and the development of economic and social organization as influenced by the personalities in control.

Many of the reviewers have been captious, claiming that the book does not fit the title, that Russell does not know his French Utopians, that he underestimates romanticism, which lies back of so much of Carlyle, Disraeli, revived Catholicism, Methodism, and Utopian Socialism.

But defective and fragmentary though it may be, this is a great book, with interesting and novel treatment of old topics. It gives perhaps the most significant picture that has yet been presented of human affairs in western Europe for the past hundred years. With all its defects it reveals relations and purposes between thinkers and vested interests. It is too rich and fertile and provocative to yield to a complete review. It calls for careful reading and appreciation. Let those who can do better

Muckrakers bringing to light the hidden, reformers tearing away the curtain from the secret, will not go so far toward revealing who and what controls as the good reporter who naively and honestly tells what he saw of the events of recent history which we still recall in newspaper headlines.

Vincent Sheean in his Personal History, Doubleday Doran, 1934, is a good reporter who succeeds in making the reader see and share what he saw and in conveying the emotions of pity and terror, than which as Aristotle said, there is no higher art. His is the story of one of the lost generation, lost as a newspaper correspondent in Europe, in the Rif, in China, wherever news was making. His life and the risks he took are material for romance and many novels.

In the closing years of the war he found himself a student at Chicago University, drilled and disciplined. He had the sense to break away and go abroad. In Paris he got a job on the Times and learned the newspaper game. Like his fellow correspondents, by looking at the bulletin boards he learned what the news was and wrote the stuff up. Later he was on the Paris Tribune and the Paris Puck. For fifteen years following the war he was everywhere on three continents where things were doing, and he takes his reader with him behind the scenes to share his experiences.

A naive youth, untutored, but with a keen mind, he came in contact with the men who were making history and gives us pointed paragraphs on Poincaré, "insignificant figure with big light eyes and permanent prejudices," or Briand the theatrical, and all the puppets who played their part on the stage at Geneva at the League of Nations comedy. Then he went to the Rif and met real men, men soon to be dominated and subdued and exiled by the French Foreign Legion.

His real education and the great romance of his life he encountered in China in Hangkow when the Revolution was still an opening flower. He gives us intimate pictures of the Sung family, of the adventurer Chiang-Kai-Chek, of Borodin. He fell in love with a Chicago Jewess with red gold hair who was a flame and an inspiration to the Hangkow Communists. He followed her to Moscow where she died. At Palestine in 1929 he ended his career as a journalist by telling too much of the truth and inciting the enmity of the Jews, working for the North American Newspaper Alliance in Jerusalem.

We see events and peoples through his naive, crystal clear intelligence. We see the untutored boy educated, refined, in the crucible of political events which determined the fate of millions. He writes simply, convincingly, intimately. His is still a lambent untamed spirit that leaps from the burning dross toward truth. Thirty-four now, in the next thirty years he should be able to reveal much of the world to his ignorant fellows

His book contains the essence of romance, the spirit of curiosity and adventure, the "young man going places" and seeing things and taking risks and living a full life, like "Anthony Adverse" The narrative interest never flags

IN INTERNATIONAL POLITICS

Such a title seems far enough away from education and the concern of parents in the training of their children, but we have recently learned that little things in the international game may determine whether or not our sons are to be cannon fodder.

Diplomacy, once sacrosanct and still largely so in certain aristocratic families, was cracked wide open when the Russian Revolution revealing state papers gave us an inside view of how international affairs were controlled Sheean gives us a very intimate view of the control of international affairs in more recent times

Frank Kent in his regenerate days before he sold himself and a daily column of palaver to the newspapers that pander to disgruntled monopolists wrote a great book "The Great Game of Politics," under which pennant he still operates

In The American Diplomatic Game, Doubleday Doran, 1934, Drew Pearson and Constantine Brown perform a similar service for American diplomacy of the past five years. The former, now a columnist, was co-author of the "Washington Merry-Go-Round" and was fired from his newspaper job for it. Brown has been a foreign and Washington correspondent for American newspapers They are an alert, disenchanted and sophisticated pair who have watched the genesis and evolution of such diplomatic gestures as the Kellogg Pact and other peace plans.

Here they tell breezily and realistically of the individual parts played by Coolidge, Hoover, Dawes and Stimson with MacDonald, Briand, Laval and Herriot as they ignorantly blundered in the diplomatic game involving hundreds of millions for armaments and perhaps preparing the way for new wars.

We are taken behind the scenes to see how Levinson and Shotwell egged on the belligerent Secretary Kellogg to put across the famous pact whereby the powers of the world signed a paper for renouncing war as an instrument of international policy at the same time that contracts for new armaments were being signed.

Petty personal and psychological traits, antagonisms, jealousies, prejudices and delusions are shown to have been at the base of important international decisions. The authors cannot but regard cynically the gestures made toward promoting peace, all of which lead them to a final prognosis of the next war as a result of blunderings by men for whose ineptitude and prejudices we have paid and shall pay still more. The book convincingly demonstrates the great part played by individual ignorance and prejudice in the relations of great nations, in short, with how little system the world is governed.

WHAT CONTROLS

Men are but instruments. One falls, another takes his place. It matters little in the larger plan of things who controls but it does matter what ideals control him. The right men will control if the right ideals control their fellows.

New ideas and ideals in the minds of men bring on a French Revolution. Leaders fall, others succeed. It is the idea, the ideal, modified by personality and economics that furnishes the drive. Eventually this is crystallized, built into the organization, the social structure. Then new ideas from minds of new men like Bentham, Mill and Marx develop which are mimical to the organization and impel change. Freedom and organization are constantly in conflict.

From the University of Chicago by way of Whittlesey House comes a series of studies in political science. These attack the subject of human controls from new angles. Theorists like our own founding fathers who believed in the democratic ideals of the French Revolution, like the Marxists, who saw everything in economic determinism and war of the classes, have evaded the problems that are now being scientifically attacked. These studies seek to investigate and reveal what leads leaders to lead, control and dominate others, that is, here is an attempt to expose and expound the actual motives and mechanisms that have determined the kind of governor that governs.

POWER

The two volumes, long in the making, of Political Power, Its Composition and Incidence, Whittlesey House, 1934, by Charles E. Merriam, discuss, with psychological understanding such problems as the "birth of power," the opposition to it and the significance of propaganda.

Machiavelli's "Prince" was written to show how power might be acquired, held and used. Marx wrote a thick volume and

Lenin twenty volumes as an explanation of how the proletariat might seize power and use it

This is a revolutionary book, full of solid thought and quotable paragraphs. By power Merriam means control of others. But "power does not lie in the guns, or the ships, or the walls of stone, or the lines of steel. Important as these are, the real political power lies in a definite common pattern of impulse. If the soldiers choose to disobey . . . if the guns are turned against the government . . . then authority is impotent and may drag its bearer down to doom."

"The leader leads not because he is entirely different from the others, but because he is much like the others and may symbolize and fuse their aspirations and desires." He also notes that "it is important that leaders possess some facility in invention." Mussolini certainly qualifies in that way. Other expounders of power, Confucius, Pareto, Hitler, Stalin, are analyzed and measured.

Professor Merriam ranges over all countries and all human history. He finds the same desire in all people: to exploit their own superiorities. Through education, through systematic training of children the nationalistic myths are exploited. The struggle for power through control of the young is as significant as through control of the army, and more important in the long run.

But he finds the quarantine of ideas ineffective. The suppression of opinion and ideas adds an element of mystery and interest to their suppression and communication. "The power of the creative and constructive type is slowly being ground out with infinite pains and with vast and widespread accompaniment of effort, often with temporary disillusionment."

Here is discussion and analysis of war, liberty, rebellion, revolution, tyranny, punishment, justice and democracy. The cruder forms of force have disappeared. The whip is less used on wife and children. The Church lays less stress on terrors of hell. Flogging is outmoded in inducing work or army discipline. The whip, flogging and chains are less used in punishment of crime, the feeble minded and insane. In the rehearsing of all this we get a feeling of change, trends toward what we used to call "progress."

In the last chapter Dr. Merriam looks ahead to the probable development of science, of mind and society, to the profound changes in human nature already beginning and destined to go far. He looks "forward to fundamental changes in the political, the industrial, the religious, the scientific order, changes that will shatter many of the present-day and historic power structures beyond recognition and remake them in new forms that will be terrifying to those who love the status quo, either because it deals gently with them or because they fear the insecurity of change" But he is hopeful, for "the future belongs to those who fuse intelligence with faith and who with courage and determination grope their way forward from chance to choice, from blind adaptation to creative evolution" Here is a book to stretch the minds of those who still hold to beliefs earlier than 1929

An Introduction to Pareto: His Sociology, Knopf, 1934, by George C. Homans and Charles P. Curtis, Jr

This abstruse engineer and voluminous writer who died a decade ago has in recent years created a little stir in some academic circles at Columbia, Yale and Harvard. His four volume work is now being published This book, by two of the members of Professor Lawrence J. Henderson's seminar at Harvard, presents a little superciliously to the ordinary intelligentsia what they are not supposed to understand

In the present chaos of sociology Pareto's categories have been welcomed He recognizes two forms of human behavior, one experimental, the other non-experimental and also non-logical, deriving from the feelings, the latter being predominant as the greatest social influence. He arrives at a description of society which is antithetic to that of the Marxists and so Pareto has been hailed by the Fascists as their own. In developing his theory on the non-logical actions of man Pareto has served a purpose But meantime the anthropologist has given us a broader base for a comparative study of social structure.

CONSCIENCE

Beyond Conscience, Whittlesey House, 1934, by T. V. Smith is a scholarly, philosophical treatise intelligibly and well written The ethical beliefs of Plato, Kant, Rousseau, and Jefferson are examined that we may better understand Marx, Lenin, Hitler, Mussolini and our reactionary Supreme Court Justice Sutherland. Conscience, he concludes, may be efficacious but there is no metaphysical, scientific, or logical reason for believing that the acts dictated by conscience are any better than those prescribed by any other hunch or dogma Conscience is personal and esthetic We obey conscience not to improve the state of the world or our own characters but merely because of the pleasure we derive in doing what seems to us appropriate to that particular part of conscience that to us represents ourselves. Professor Smith deems the outwardly and blatantly selfish George Jean Nathan a more moral and humane person than Napoleon, Bismarck, and Gladstone, whose "defective" consciences led them to impose their own hard wills upon the lives and thoughts of weaker human beings

It was to prove that he could write a book which would be "if not as large then almost as dry as those of other philosophers" that Dr Smith undertook this study. There have been more profound treatises but he leaves us with an understanding that conscience is a part of our own ego to which most of us bend the knee in worship. Incidentally he touches on many other topics illuminatingly and entertainingly. The reflective reader will hereafter trust his conscience less and discipline it more severely.

PROFITS

The desire for profit that is, money profit, controls the actions of many who have been untouched by stronger incentives. No one works for money who has anything worth working for. Even among the most selfish and avaricious people, larger and nobler motives may be substituted. This has been demonstrated with a hundred and sixty million people in Russia in the last ten years. Just how the profit motive does work in a small way with small people and large plunderers here in this country has been the subject of many recent expositions.

The latest book on this subject which has touched many on the raw so that they have winced is Partners in Plunder, Covici Friede, 1935, by J. B. Matthews and R. E. Shallcross. Subtitled their book "The Cost of Business Dictatorship," the authors present a good deal of evidence for their belief that "the ordinary commercial methods of American business are essentially indistinguishable from the gangster methods of racketeering," that the Government as the defender of private property "is a partner in the plundered billions annually extorted from the American people."

Like James Rorty's recent book and articles on advertising the authors show through the mass of important and fascinating information just how the interests of the consumer are sacrificed to profit making. There is nothing new about it. It has been going on since the neolithic shaman deluded the primitive hunter into giving up his choicest spoils to him. But it is still news to the moronic ninety per cent to whom the advertiser appeals.

Dr T. Swann Harding hits hard but smiles as he does it in his The Popular Practice of Fraud, Longmans Green, 1935. His facts shriek for themselves. It is a convincing treatise on the art of duping the American consumer. The cosmetic industry is shown as being wholly parasitic, living on advertising bunk. Newspaper advertising contrasted with editorial comment on the Tugwell bill reveals a shameless and mercenary hypocrisy. This is a practical manual with names and instances showing just how the profit makers of today through fraudulent advertising prey upon the consumer.

PRODUCTION PLETHORA

Still dazed, the average citizen wonders what's happened. He hears of "over-production" and "under-consumption". What does it mean? A Robinson Crusoe on an island would labor only that he might enjoy, that he might eat. But in our modern society production, distribution and consumption have become vastly complicated. The great achievement of the last hundred years has been to improve methods of production. The best brains have gone into this. There has been concentration of interest and tremendous progress. The technocrats have told us that with modern methods and machinery we can supply every modern demand.

More recently we have begun to improve our system of distribution. Now the time has come for the best brains to go into the economics of consumption. The modern profit system with its hand maiden advertising as a means of stimulating consumption is today subjected to critical scrutiny on the part of consumers who are rapidly becoming organized.

Stuart Chase in his The Economy of Abundance, Macmillan, 1934, gives a dramatic picture of the vast possibilities of machine production. If our society were efficiently organized so as to make use of its machines a high standard of living for all would be possible.

In an endeavor to study this question scientifically The Brookings Institution, an endowed economic research organization, has produced three studies, financed by the Falk Foundation of Pittsburgh. The purpose of the investigation as a whole is to determine whether the existing distribution of income in the United States among various groups of society tends to impede the efficient functioning of the economic system and how the economic activities of the people might be organized to insure higher standards of living for all.

The first volume America's Capacity to Produce, Brookings Institution, 1934, by Edwin G. Nourse and Associates, is an endeavor to throw light on the theory that we overbuilt our productive capacity during the booming twenties. The Brookings staff have made an exhaustive survey of the period from 1900 to 1929 and their answer is no. They find that in 1929 we had capacity to produce only 19% more than the actual production. In the thirty years studied our national income increased five fold, but the per capita income increase was only 38%. The average annual per capita gain in production of wealth of this thirty year period was only 1.3%.

In 1900 53% of the national wealth was distributed in the form of wages, salaries and pensions. In 1929 this had risen to 65.1%. "Roughly eighty per cent of the national income in 1929 went to reward current effort and approximately twenty per cent to owners of property."

The proportion of the total public gainfully employed did not change materially but the hours of labor decreased. In 1929 a large proportion of the public did not have sufficient income for an adequate diet, decent shelter, or sufficient clothes. Our plant capacity would have had to have been greatly enlarged to meet the actual need. The study shows that under a thirty hour week with full use of our plant facilities and assuming a 25% increase in efficiency we would still have a productive output smaller than in 1929.

These views are in conflict with those of the technocrats of Columbia who are of the opinion that production could be increased 80% to 90% if equipment and management were brought up to the best current standards.

CONSUMPTION CONSTRICTION

Well, if we don't produce enough then we certainly could eat and use more. That's the conclusion of the next volume, America's Capacity to Consume, Brookings Institution, 1934, by Maurice Leven, Harold G. Moulton and Clark Warburton. In succinct form are presented the results of a comprehensive investigation of the nation's income, its source, its distribution and the character of group expenditures.

The chapter on family income is of special interest. The average family of two or more in 1929 received approximately $2800. The median family had an income of $1700, that is, there were as many families with incomes less than $1700 as there were with incomes in excess of that amount. Six million families, or 21%, had incomes of less than $1000. Eight per cent,—a total of about two million families,—received more than $5000, while 2.3% (about 600,000), had incomes of more than $10,000. The 21% of families at the bottom of the scale received only 4.5% of the total national income. One tenth of 1%,—with incomes over $75,000,—received as much as 42% of the families having less than $1500.

So the Brookings Institution leads us to believe that we must still work and labor to produce more, not merely to satisfy existing wants but to meet a decent standard of living.

THE AMERICAN TRADITION

How capital has accumulated here in America, a study of the mores or social customs of surplus wealth,—this is the subject of the third volume of the Brookings series, The Formation of Capital, Brookings Institution, 1935, by Harold G. Moulton. The traditional conceptions as to the forces which govern the growth of productive capital are challenged, the dependence of capital expansion upon consumptive demand is demonstrated; how excessive savings may produce financial disorder rather than new capital goods is disclosed. The fourth volume of this series is to deal with "Income and Economic Progress."

A thorough going American, a genuine hundred per center, capable of interpreting the American tradition, is Charles A. Beard, writer and economist. His writings have brought us understanding of how amid confusion and conflict the Constitutional Convention of 1789 gave birth to this republic and of the continuing conflict in the flow of events that have made its history. Failing to accept certain recent and prevalent fads of ignorant plutocrats he has sometimes been looked upon as radical though his radicalism goes so far back as to make him a conservative. His latest work, The Open Door at Home, Macmillan, 1934, is an outgrowth and interpretation of his previous book "The Idea of National Interest." This is perhaps the most searching analysis of the American situation we have yet had. Beard analyzes and finds unsound the various conceptions of national policy which have been advanced in recent time as a solution of our difficulties. He discounts the need of foreign markets, reduction of the tariff and international cooperation.

He would get away from the idea of producing and selling goods for profit, as distinguished from the production and exchange or consumption of goods to add to the pleasure and beauty of life. He believes foreign trade should be carried on not in the interests of private exporters but in the national interest and as such subject to government control.

On the basis of a sound critical historical review Dr. Beard outlines a safe domestic policy for the country. Security, stability and the highest practicable standard of living he regards as the most desirable goals. To achieve these we must first wisely develop our own resources with a wider distribution of wealth, keep American capital employed at home, avoid international complications. He would establish a division of national defense, within and subject to the State Department, in which would be consolidated the functions of the War and Navy Departments. That sounds sensible, bitterly as it would be opposed by the Generals and Admirals and their confreres, the munitions makers.

Dr. Beard's critics have denounced him as tending toward Fascism but in renouncing the liberal doctrine of internationalism he is following the same lead of Keynes the English economist The volume is a clear and statesmanlike exposition of ultimate values and worthwhile goals for our national life If these were clearly envisioned American initiative and vitality in the American tradition would quickly surmount intervening difficulties, so that we might with even greater zest salute the stars and stripes forever

DEMOCRACY AND CAPITALISM

Democracy works beautifully among people of approximate equality, particularly if there are not great incentives to plunder Where there is great economic inequality, where there are great prizes to be won through aggressiveness and greed, ballots as well as men's souls and women's bodies may be bought. So we have the political prostitute and the street walker

Formerly of Harvard, Yale, and half a dozen more of the world's great universities, and now Professor of Political Science in the University of London, Harold J Laski has written half a score of books on the theory and practice of government and has incisively investigated the theories and future of social organization

In his The State in Theory and Practice, Viking Press, 1935, he covers his old trail again Briefly, his thesis is that democracy, as we have known it during the last century, was a capitalistic democracy. While there was prosperity capital, controlling, could throw sops to democracy. Now, in this time of dearth it can no longer satisfy democracy this way and with increasing conflict must either give up its privileges or go Fascist to maintain them Such a view greatly simplifies our understanding of the political structure and the changes that are going on about us

Hitler haunts Laski. Hitler has made manifest the identity of state and government, executive and legislative, of politics and legality Fascism is the last stand of capitalism. The only possible defense against Fascism is a more highly socialized democracy But to save itself capitalism will destroy civilization and so destroy all. To save the future democracy may have to sacrifice much that it has held dear.

Here is impassioned liberalism retiring from a lost position, but still hoping to save something in the face of Fascism, of dictators powerful and unscrupulous. But it may yet prove that Mussolini and Hitler are only ruthless adventurers rather than chieftains of a decadent capitalism

While Mr Laski holds economic determination as the predominant factor he recognizes the influence of personality and tradition in the bringing about of change His study of political forces brought about by revolution does not lead him to say Farewell to Revolution" as Everett Dean Martin would like to, yet he is not so ruthless as John Strachey in his "Coming Struggle for Power." But Strachey is ready to bid good-bye to the existing social order.

The prolific Walter B. Pitkin's latest work Capitalism Carries On, Whittlesey House, 1935, like most of his books is excellent reading for the casual layman, befuddled by conflicting theories. Pitkin is a sane middle-of-the-road man espousing the cause of the middle class.

And who are they? He answers. "About one American out of every ten, at the most conservative estimate. Not more than one in seven, on the most liberal estimate. Let us say between twelve and eighteen millions. . . . The middle-class man is the meeting ground exceeding fine between the upper millstone of Croesus and the nether millstone of Cyclops."

The bankers, the railways, the very poor have drawn billions of their support from the government, "virtually every dollar of the tens of billions allotted to the powerful rich and the powerful poor! Scarcely a dime given to middle-class folk! But range to say, it is these same middle-class folk who are now being asked to pay most of the relief bills. Who else could pay them? Will they acquiesce? Should they? . . ."

He concludes, "Capitalism will carry on smoothly if it shows at least as clear a grasp of realities as the capitalists of fifty years ago exhibited. It will attain this clarity only if it retains both the loyalty and the services of the middle class. It will sustain both only if it abolishes fear of ruin and old-age poverty from middle-class minds."

THE FUTURE OF REVOLUTION

We Americans are a revolutionary people,—natural individualists, insurgents, dissenters, resenting limitations upon our freedom. Our government exists only through the consent of the governed. Our greatest statesmen, Washington, Jefferson and others have repeatedly maintained our right to change or overthrow it. The flexible unwritten English Constitution permits of continuous change and adaptation. Our Constitution supposed static has undergone almost equally great change. Fortunately the Supreme Court follows the elections.

Everett Dean Martin in Farewell to Revolution, W. W. Norton, 1935, reasons about revolution as pacifists reason about war,—both without reason, he regards them as unthinkable. He makes as clear a case against revolution "as a method for effecting any permanent change whatever" as did Norman Angell against war in his book "The Possibilities of War," produced in 1912. Between the introductory and concluding essays Mr.

Martin reviews the history of revolutions from classic times to the present. He tells us there has never been a revolution which could not have been prevented had people acted wisely.

His reasoning is entirely logical but his treatment is not soundly psychological. He points out that violence and revolution result only when needed change is too long resisted and that violent revolution always goes too far and is followed by reaction. But revolution occurs only when the dead conservative forces are strong enough to prevent change.

George Soule in The Coming American Revolution, Macmillan, 1934, has given a rather inflammatory title to a quietly philosophic book. For him violence comes only when there is strong opposition to the slow process of evolutionary change,—“violence occurs when those who have been thrust from power strive to regain it.” Revolution is merely a name for a single cycle in a long evolutionary process of human society.

Under our social system enormous changes are taking place technologically with lack of flexibility in human relations. First come “basic changes in ways of conducting affairs” then “a new alignment of social classes.” The result is a tension which sooner or later must lead to break-down and catastrophe. It is just this kind of break which has come upon us in this age. “The old is cracking, something new is rising to take its place. The first essentials of the long revolutionary process are present.”

He tells the thrilling story of the last five years, how the depression began before the crash, unknown to Hoover and those who controlled. His story of the New Deal is one of good intention and confusion, well-meaning improvisation, but with technique undeveloped. In another generation or so may come “the final disappearance of government by private profit-makers over the means of production, and a chance for social management to learn its task by experience.” But even this will not be Utopia. The best we can do in human affairs as the stress and strain increase under new conditions is to achieve a little better adjustment.

A SAD TOMORROW

In this acquisitive world of rugged individuals in which most of us have been brought up with an education that looked backward and divorced itself from the present, it is well that the dean of Princeton in looking ahead and writing for a university trained audience should call his book a primer. It is a stimulating and provocative book that Christian Gauss publishes as A Primer For Tomorrow, Being An Introduction to Contemporary Civilization, Scribner's, 1934. The author has a broad historical vision and a hard and fixed scientific perspective. But he lacks the biological point of view which would make for continuity in his understanding and vision. This becomes immediately apparent on the first page where he tells us that "the insatiable curiosity of mankind has so far discovered only two major fields of study," one, "the changeless realm of nature", the other, "the changing field of human endeavor." Had he more of the biological and anthropological point of view he would know that change did not begin with the genus Homo, that it began with our prehuman ancestors from whom we derive some elements of our religion. The discovery and mastery of fire is an achievement which our own species has perhaps not yet matched. His view of nature and prehuman things is that of the physicist, not the biologist.

This lack of biological understanding leads him into the error that "nature does not proceed on the basis of trial and error and imitation." The paleontologist could have told him much about Mother Nature's experiments, wasteful, futile, irrational, with the septa of the ammonites as with the horns and frills of the dinosaurs. And so he loses all sense of the unity of organic life, of the drive from within and of the varied environment which has made our countless experiments possible and brought us from the tree shrew through the simian to our present state.

Except for this one blind spot Dean Gauss is a grand interpreter of the human story and effort. One of the best points that he makes is that human effort has been more or less continuous. He rejects the cataclysmic change in interpreting human history as the geologists have in world history. He sees Greek paganism gradually giving rise with Oriental influences to medieval Christianity. He sees the Greek or Roman civilizations not overwhelmed but gradually transformed with survivals of pagan myths even in our modern world.

In beginning with the Nature of Civilization and showing that it must be creative, Dean Gauss discovers organic psychological causes for decline. Spengler's pessimism means nothing if a people still has the right emotional attitude, if it has faith in its civilization, its destiny. Laws and codes and social systems have changed and will change. Feudalism, capitalism and religions have risen and decayed, but wherever a people have maintained faith in their system, in their destiny,—their culture, their civilization has remained vital. No force could put it down.

The teacher of history will here get new conceptions of history. Why was it that 80,000 vandals with 20,000 fighting men from 406 to 455 A.D. could cross the Rhine, march through Gaul, leave their name in (V)Andalusia, rape Rome's African province, cross the Mediterranean and sack Rome, carrying away gold, silver, and the widow and daughters of the emperor? The Romans had lost faith in their destiny and the vandals had not.

Once a people's faith in its own destiny has been destroyed its future is sealed. This he illustrates by a waning tribe in Melanesia, by Rome, by our own peoples of today. His anthropology and psychology are sound. This idea, elaborated by Toynbee, is the beginning of a sensible application of the results of modern psychiatry and mental hygiene to the study of peoples of past times. Historians have heretofore denied them such human qualities. This is the beginning of understanding and wisdom in regard to those who have gone before.

In his chapter "The Reversal of the Time Sense" Gauss makes clear how man has always looked back into the past to his gods, to authority, until the present, when with the decay of the old religion and the old gods we have come to look to the future. But lacking clarity of vision and faith we have fallen into pessimism.

Nationalism once brought confidence through uniting smaller groups but today the size of the groups has made it perilous. Science brought increase in knowledge and material facility but no popular faith has yet been built on its new revelations. The old faiths have been destroyed, the new faiths are yet to be built, and without faith in itself a civilization must die. This lack of faith we find in our modern literature, he points out. Like Arnold he sees the world today as a place where "ignorant armies clash by night." He sees in Russia a people imbued with a new faith, confident of their new destiny. We in the west fear this confidence because we lack faith in our own system. If we believed in our own destiny, in the soundness of our own civilization, our own ethics, we would have nothing to fear.

Because Dean Gauss lacks the biological view, because he fails to see life as an organic whole, because he fails to feel the rhythm of life through millions of years, because his vision is limited to historic time, he has been unable to build a great faith. This is even more true of others who still give lip worship they within themselves know to be false, who still mouth precepts they know are hollow, who still give allegiance to gods they know are dead, because with narrow horizons and limited vision they are unable to see the continuity and rhythm of life and envision the possibilities of the species. Their faith is in institutions that must pass, in elements of our civilization that are dead or dying, and bewildered and unseeing, they can only express contempt for those who like Wells "stand tiptoe and reach out their hands among the stars." All honor to Dean Gauss for "standing tiptoe" though he cannot reach the stars.

"CONFIDENT MORNING"

In England they are ready for the Second Reader. The Federation of Progressive Societies and Individuals has issued Manifesto, Allen & Unwin, London, 1934, edited by C. E. M. Joad.

It is an attempt to unite the progressive thought of the world in a common creed. This ambitious organization of organizations which plans to remake the world includes in addition to the brilliant Oxonian Joad as president, among the vice-presidents, the two Huxleys, Vera Brittain, Beverly Nicols, Harold Nicolson, Bertrand Russell, Geoffrey West, Rebecca West, and other well known English brains

H. G. Wells in the Introduction in a few hundred words summarizes the common objectives of progressive world effort. About all he asks for is better development and distribution of the world's resources to provide a fuller possible life for the whole species, production on a larger scale competently and collectively controlled; a world system of money and credit; active creative work toward world peace, modernization of education to insure every human being the knowledge, ideas and habits for conscious, willing and competent cooperation in human betterment; greater measures of freedom in speech, publication and movement throughout the world. In his chapter "The Strategy of Progressive World Effort" he tells us how all this is to be brought about,—through a great variety of forces and a great variety of activities, not by any one organization. He would utilize to this end the natural resentment of the unprivileged classes as well as the passion for achievement and righteousness that actuates so many.

The Federation's program consists of economic and political planning both regional and for the whole world,—in education a universal system which shall inform youth of the new knowledge now denied them; in social affairs a change to rationality in civil and criminal law and greater civil and religious liberty. Allan Young writes on World Economic Planning, W. Arnold Foster discusses Peace, Disarmament and World Government, J. C. Flugel, Psychology For Progressives. It is all simple and rational enough. Why not?

In If I Were Dictator, Harper, 1934, Julian Huxley, biologist and scientist, co-author with H. G. Wells of "The Science of Life," shows what the trained, scientific, idealistic mind would do if in control. If he were dictator he would put into effect principles of scientific humanism. He would assist in the control over nature and man's destiny through scientific research. He would institute a planned economy. By planning he does not mean "grandiose schemes of paper organization" but "the patient and humble application of human reason and the scientific spirit to affairs."

From that point of view his chapter "On Being Business-Like in Business" is especially interesting in showing what business men do under our present system. He is not the only one who has failed to find business men business-like or who has discovered idealists who are great administrators and financiers. The business man whether tired or full of pep is no longer sacrosanct.

In treating education which he looks at from an English viewpoint, he has little new to say, but after he had reorganized it there wouldn't be much in the English educational system that one would recognize. He is most revolutionary and stimulating in his ideas as to the use of leisure. His purpose would be the enrichment of each individual's life, not merely in enjoyment of esthetic possibilities but through actual accomplishment. That might lead to mental health.

Mr. Huxley as dictator would be British and cautious, scientific and sensible. On the whole he would be more like Franklin D. Roosevelt than Upton Sinclair. He wouldn't be nearly as daring as his cousin Aldous. We might still be born in the old orthodox way instead of in test tubes.

TOMORROW WE DIE

Roy Helton does not believe in looking ahead. In his Sold Out To The Future, Harper, 1934, he makes a plea for living in the present, enjoying life as they did in Elizabethan times. He doesn't believe in doing so much for children. One might gather that Falstaff is his ideal. But he doesn't hesitate to reverse himself and take the other side.

His main thesis, that we should not mortgage the future generations, is a sound one and he quotes many cases to show how completely we have mortgaged the future of our children and their children's children through our selfish, present-day, wasteful, lustful, living and spending. He cites current non-callable issues of four per cent railway bonds on which the principal sum of fifty million becomes due for payment in the year 2361. It is as though we were now paying for bonds issued to finance Christopher Columbus' caravels. Though the average life of a pavement is ten years, Philadelphia and New York have issued fifty year paving bonds. Why pay for what you can put off on your grandchildren?

In the eight years from 1921 to 1929 we Americans borrowed and spent 99 million dollars. Our total borrowings today are probably 200 millions. That is not "selling out to the future," that is borrowing from the future to spend selfishly in the present.

Strongly as Mr. Helton believes in living selfishly in the present the future obsesses him. He cannot understand the future and believes it unpredictable, citing erroneous guesses as proof. But the wrong answer to the sum would not prove that it cannot be done. In the course of his book he takes many a vigorous whack at abuses due to those who devoutly believe they know the future. He deals our educators many a body blow for their acceptance of the traditional and their platitudinous writings But, obsessed with his idea, he maintains that the "enormous sums annually wasted on the adoration of youth" should be "retained for the cultural life of the mature and the extension of their leisure"

This vigorous stimulating inconsistent book brings to light many things that we should be conscious of, but it is marred by a number of obsessions stubbornly held to The author preaches "Eat, drink, and be merry" and then complains that others before him in order to do so have borrowed so much money that he has to pay interest

WATCHING THE PAGEANT

A ghastly tale of political and economic skullduggery in which the great names of recent history appear badly tarnished is World Diary: 1929-1934, Robert M McBride, 1934, by Quincy Howe What Sheean intimately contacts as a reporter Howe from his editorial eyrie sees in broader perspective For Mr Howe knows more than has appeared in the newspapers He has seen behind the scenes He remembers, and knows how to put two and two together He brings into focus hundreds of meaningless headlines and gives them significance With a mind impregnated with facts and philosophies he cannot be satisfied with the punctilious platitudes of academic scholarship

As editor of The Living Age he has made that periodical foremost in revealing what was actually happening in the European scene. He has discerned and published the significant follies of our statesmen and the traitorous profiteering of our industrial and financial masters long before Congressional investigators have forced newspapers or other periodicals to reveal them That work has uniquely prepared him for this book Half of the writing is his own. The other half is quoted from foreign commentators and the actors on the international stage The narrative shows month by month the doings throughout the world and there is appended a succinct chronology of more important events and an index largely of names familiar to newspaper readers.

As Bernard Shaw has said, "The man who writes about himself and his own time is the only man who writes about all people and about all time." Mr. Howe, who specializes in the study of international affairs, has made the experiment of setting down in almost day-to-day chronicle the chief political events upon this planet during the past five years—from the Wall Street panic of October, 1929, to the Saar plebiscite It is a chronology of five years of imbecile direction of world affairs and consequent misery of the people

THE MEANING OF THE YEARS

The first third of this century has seen the world's swiftest years. From production to human locomotion everything has been speeded up. For the first time in the history of man we find our fundamental ideas growing old and dying more rapidly than do our feeble bodies. Gerald Heard in These Hurrying Years, An Historical Outline, 1900-1933, Chatto & Windus, London, 1934, endeavors to interpret the meaning of these thirty-three years, more freighted with significance for the species than any hundred years before. Reviewing events he pauses in his relation to point out direction and meaning and to show that the profound changes he records have their roots far back in the past and their consequences in the distant future. The historical summary is interesting though it is only the framework. Frank Simonds writes a long diatribe against the book in The Saturday Review because in the rapid review of the war on which he, of course, is an authority, he finds some points to which he must take exception.

Mr. Heard encyclopedically reviews the advance in fundamental discoveries,—in physiology, birth control methods; in anthropology, various moralities among other peoples, in psychology, truth telling and lying, the varying ability to present things seen, in endocrinology, the function of the glands in our emotional and sex life, in economics, the restricted but definite place personal property need occupy, and the gradual assumption of personal functions by the community, in physics, the copiousness with which all our material wants can be supplied. All these call for a readjustment of our rules and sanctions for behavior and social action.

Ours, he points out, is the first age to suspect how much of the social order as well as the apparent natural order is made by ourselves and changed because of change in ourselves. We are living through what would have been a whole epoch of generations in the past. Daily, new powers unbelievable to our ancestors are put in our hands. Increasing consciousness of things about us and of ourselves is the one great thing that stands out in the chaos of modern events.

Economic and social events are but the "symptoms, a dust and debris screen behind which we have to detect those movements and heavings of deeper forces which fling the petty structures of our earlier making in ruins about us." The changes now going on come from man's ancient habits, his unselfconscious effort to satisfy his urges by causing changes in the world about him. Our future depends upon gaining better understanding and control over our own natures rather than increasing power over the outer world.

In the past generation there has been a great increase in sympathy and understanding where we thought no advance was possible. This is shown in our changing attitudes toward our fellow creatures. "Sympathy and compassion for animals is leading to change in sports. The blood sports are less popular. That compassion for animals is a symptom of some profound extension of human sympathy no one can doubt. In the evolution of sport—from a savage's carnivorous frenzy in running down his prey to the superb, elaborately controlled and formalised contests of, for example, the supreme sport of today, Lawn Tennis—can be seen the building up out of animal passion of a great work of dynamic art."

Anthropologists have shown us that there is no people or tribe that cannot be influenced to good by friendliness and courtesy. But we have to establish better understanding with ourselves. There is hope, the author holds, if we have courage to realize that our gain lies in understanding and benefiting our fellows, that the next stage of our development of ourselves is through greater cooperation with other individuals. This "may be a high fate, but surely one not too stern. Surely everyone who reflects wishes to be possessed of such powers and with them infinite achievement is possible."

NOSTALGIA

The present generation with their contempt for what they call "the gay nineties" think of that period when America in blindness trembled between the rural and the urban as a small town joke. Those of us who derive from the nineties must share with Henry Seidel Canby in The Age of Confidence, Farrar & Rinehart, 1934, something of his nostalgia for that time when youth faced life with confidence. Then we knew we were the sum of all God's creative efforts. We stood on the apex of a civilization with full confidence in the future. In our blindness we failed to see how the seeds of the future were being sown, we failed to detect the stresses and strains that were to bring breakdowns. Under the cloak of respectability, plundering and obscenities went on unknown, unspoken.

Dr. Canby writes his reminiscences of early life in Wilmington, Delaware, so as to bring back the atmosphere of that time, the family life, the community life, the restricted outlook, the depth of ignorance under prevailing surface respectability. Education then was formalized, in "complete isolation from the major problems of society." The banker and the business man were the idols of the people. The creative inventor, the scientist, the journalist were not in much repute. Idlers and radical thinkers were at the bottom of the scale and how we punished them! Now we reap the whirlwind.

This book is a literary contribution to our social and cultural history. It covers that period touched upon by Thomas Beer in "The Mauve Decade." It surveys and interprets a place and a period in an emotional and literary way somewhat as the Lynds more scientifically surveyed "Middletown" reviewed in the 13th edition of this Handbook.

GETTING SENTIMENTAL

E. Douglas Branch in The Sentimental Years, 1836-1860, Appleton Century, 1934, carries the story farther back, shows how we lived during that time in an atmosphere of deception and humbug. In a belief in perfectionism all held that things were getting better, and proceeded to make them so. There was even a suggestion to improve the Palisades by painting them white.

In that time the well to do were the virtuous. It was even argued "no man can be obedient to God's will, as revealed in the Bible, without becoming wealthy." Suspect was the idler, the thinker, the book reader. Coffee, tea and tobacco were little less immoral than hard liquor. There was no facing the facts of life. The girls in the Lowell mills worked twelve hours a day for $2 a week and were required "to be in bed at the respectable hour of ten, and at all times to observe specific rules of Christian decorum."

Mr. Branch sketchily and incompletely paints in the background of the time, touching upon religion and literature. The confident feeling of progress in a period of mechanical invention and industrial expansion took no cognizance of the overworked and exploited. Sweet charity dealt kindly with them. Aristocracy sopped the mob with philanthropy.

TOYNBEE'S HISTORY

History in our universities has for the most part been kept in sectional watertight compartments. The specialist in the history of a period and a place has been jealous of intrusions into his field, and if academically self-respecting, ashamed to be found straying in his colleague's field. History has been doled out to undergraduates in unrelated fragments in which minutiae were highly valued.

It was these academic specialists in trivialities who picked flaws in Wells' great sweeping pageant and it is to these petty souls of limited vision that Arnold J. Toynbee pays his respects in the Introduction to his first volume of A Study of History, Oxford University Press, 1934, 3 Vols. Issued under the auspices of the Royal Institute of International Affairs of which the author is director of research, the material was first presented as lectures at the Lowell Institute, Boston.

The first volume deals with types of civilization and their origin while the next two deal with the genesis and growth of specific civilizations. Volume II deals specifically with the range of challenge and response, the stimulus of art, of words, of new growths, of blows, of pressure, of penalizations. Volume III is concerned with the growth of civilizations. In the ten succeeding volumes he is to further expound his philosophy of history.

Five great recent and current societies of the same species, our Western, the Byzantine, Islamic, Hindu and Far Eastern are distinguished. But in wider range he finds twenty-one societies, described as civilizations to distinguish them from the larger number of primitive societies, all but seven extinct, and the majority of the seven in decay.

The Esquimaux, Nomads, Osmanlis and Spartans are revealed in new significance and a backward glance is taken at insect societies. Certain factors characterize and distinguish civilizations, the universal Church with a universal theology, as Hinduism dominates India, or a universal state as in the Roman Empire and Islam.

Each civilization is taken up successively with a wealth of erudition and allusion, apt poetic quotations, classical and modern, footnotes and citations from many languages. There is breadth of vision, a sense of humor. His range is wider than Bucholz, his view more realistic, less sentimentally pessimistic than Spengler. His synthesis of pertinent facts from all history has been reduced in the crucible of an acutely active mind of the highest generalizing power.

A general discussion of "The Nature of the Growths of Civilizations" is followed by a study of the process. He finds that increasing command of human over physical environment is not a vital factor but that what he calls etherealization and the transference of the field of action are. He goes beyond economic determinism and finds the interaction between individuals in growing societies often the important factor. There follows a study of individuals who have withdrawn from society and then returned to lead great movements. Two score such cases are studied including St. Paul, Buddha, Lenin and Garibaldi.

The study of history Toynbee recognizes "is governed by the dominant tendencies of the time and the place." And the dominant tendencies of recent time have been our industrial system and the complicated system of politics which we have called democracy. The true concern of history is "with the lives of societies in both their internal and their external aspects" and "the relations of particular societies with one another." "The unity of civilization," he declares, is a misconception of Western historians. And, "while the economic and political maps of the world have been 'Westernized' the cultural map remains today substantially what it was before our Western society ever started on its career of conquest "

The emergence of a civilization is a product of interaction between environment and race Toynbee's understanding of the growth of civilization takes into account some psychological understandings "Civilizations grow through an élan that carries them from challenge through response to further challenge, and from differentiation through integration to differentiation again "

It is the "dynamic movement" of "creative individual personalities" that distinguishes a growing civilization from static societies The "tiny creative minority" which has evoked in western civilization "the great new social forces of democracy and industrialism" is "wondering today whether it will be able to control and guide much longer these forces that it has let loose "

"The creative minority in the modern western world is in danger of seeing its advance brought to a standstill and the ground that it has conquered filched away by an act of betrayal that has prostituted the new-won powers and the new-made apparatus of this handful of pioneers to the anti-social function of debauching the rest of Society."

NEW VIEWS OF HISTORY

The Quennell series of illustrated history books for school children, which have sold in England by the hundred thousand, have remained almost unknown in this country. Mr. and Mrs. Quennell began them immediately after the war They run now to fourteen volumes and, under the title of "Everyday Things," deal with the life of people of the Stone Age, of Prehistoric Times, Greece, and Rome, with seven volumes on various periods of life in England They are written in a human lively way and are illustrated by more than a thousand pictures, drawings, photographs and plans, often in color, depicting the life of the period.

Moreover they are actuated by purpose and vision. Vividly and understandingly is presented the panorama of change. As they say in a preface, "We like our revolutions in this country to be peaceful ones, so if we can bring ourselves to regard certain changes as being necessary, then, with courage, we may be able to build a worthier fabric of civilization."

A History of Everyday Things in England, B. T. Batsford, London, 1934, by Marjorie and C. H. B. Quennell, is the fourth of the latest series and is devoted to The Age of Production, 1851-1934 The text is preceded by lists of authorities, A Cursory Chronicle and a Chronology in four parallel columns: Kings and Political, Social, Science and Industry, The Arts. This is wonderfully illuminating Reading across one line of the four columns we see that about the same time, 1884 to 1886, occurred Gladstone's Home Rule Bill, the Grab for Africa, the deaths of General Gordon and Rossetti, the discovery of gold on the Rand, the invention of Daimler's motor engine, and the Benz motor car, while at this time Gilbert & Sullivan's "Ida" and "Mikado" were being presented

This remarkable series of books which will be devoured by children giving them knowledge of the stories of peoples of the past in response to their natural curiosity about things and doings should be in every grammar and high school. Though written by the English for the English, the view is so broad that they are equally good for all English speaking peoples

A Short History of Modern Europe, From 1789 to the Present Day, Clarendon Press, 1934, by D. M. Ketelbey, M.A., F.R.Hist.S., formerly head of the History Department, St. Leonards School, St. Andrews, in less than three hundred pages presents succinctly the story of modern Europe. All the subjects and topics that might be dealt with in examination are here briefly covered. There are excellent synopses, chronologies, tables, index. The maps are simple and clear. As a text book for a year's course leading to the school certificate or matriculation standard it deserves praise.

A Brief History of Our Own Times, George Philip & Son, London, 1934, by Ramsay Muir, lately Professor of Modern History in the University of Manchester, is a straight, sober, brief history of our own times. It covers the period from the beginning of colonial expansion in the seventies to the world economic crisis or the depression. It is written from the standpoint of the British imperialist, and deals widely with international problems that have arisen.

History and the Self, Williams & Norgate, London, 1934, by Hilda Diana Oakeley, M.A., D.Lit., is, as she tells us, "A Study in the Roots of History and the Relations of History and Ethics." An interesting subject, an excellent theme,—and vaguely, she glimpses some realities. But she is fascinated with her dance of the seven veils in which she displays a metaphysical lingo and as she adroitly steps, she gradually divests herself, first of the teleological then of the ontological, and all of the other veils of mysticism, finally revealing herself in all her nudity of fuzzy-mindedness, a mere wraith.

As an example of her approach witness this figure of her dance "As regards the credibility of historical teleology, or belief in an immanent principle working in history towards the realization of some great good, experience in modern history provides few phases of event more difficult to interpret from this point of view than the so-called industrial revolution." Stripped, she means to question the permanent good brought by the industrial revolution. Concretely· was it good to provide clothes for the unclothed? This is the kind of thing that is indulged in within academic shades and for whose skilled performance D Lit 's are awarded

This comes from sitting under some ascetic scholastics whose cerebral activity is limited, whose normal processes inhibit their cerebral expression Frustrated it winds itself into spirals of involuted reasoning

LENGTHENING OUR VIEW

From the east continues to come new light on prehistory Dr V. Gordon Childe's "The Most Ancient East" reviewed in the 14th edition of this Handbook, p 59, covering Egypt and Western Asia from the earliest human times to the beginning of the historical period, is now supplemented by a new volume, New Light on the Most Ancient East, D Appleton Century, 1934 Since his first book Sumerian culture has been carried still farther back into the past and shown to have continuity with several lesser civilizations in lower Mesopotamia, northern Mesopotamia and Iran

The purpose of this book is to illustrate "the principles that must be applied to the study of European prehistory by reference to the richer and better dated material of the proto-historic Orient." "The establishment of urban civilization based upon industry and commerce" in the valleys of Mesopotamia and the Indus reveals "intercourse over enormous areas" However, Dr Childe holds that for the moment archæologists must postulate two "irreducible cultural provinces" He gives us a readable, timely and comprehensive treatment of what is now known, convincing us that we are on the threshold of enormously greater knowledge

Early man in China is the subject of Children of the Yellow Earth, Macmillan, 1934, by J Gunnar Andersson, curator of the Museum of Far Eastern Antiquities in Stockholm, who spent ten years in China. He was the first to locate the mines yielding the "dragon bones" of the Chinese medicine shops, the first to show that the Chinese had a Stone Age and to describe their painted neolithic pottery closely resembling that of eastern Europe He first explored the caves where later Dr. Davidson Black discovered the famous "Peking man," Homo sinanthropus, variously estimated at from fifty to three hundred thousand years old In this book he describes all these discoveries which reveal a wholly new chapter in the history of early man.

Our knowledge of primitive man in the last decade has been tremendously expanded from investigations all over the earth but notably in East Africa and in China. Adam's Ancestors, Longmans Green, 1934, by L S. B. Leakey, is an up to date outline of what is known of the origin of man, by one of the youngest specialists to win recent renown. It was Leakey who in three expeditions between 1926 and 1932 in East Africa added enormously to our knowledge of prehistoric man, discovering a new species "Homo kanamensis." Since his boyhood in Kenya Colony, Leakey has been interested in archaeological exploration.

In this volume dealing with our "ancient ancestors and cousins" he points out that in 1926 a list of seven names beginning with Pre-Chellean and ending with Magdalenean outlined the sequence of cultures then known. Now it takes a double page of his book for the table which sets forth in orderly outline the known primitive cultures of three continents, with more than half a dozen species of Homo now known. Leakey tells how the present day student of prehistoric man goes about his job in seeking new excavation sites and discovering new evidence. He tells us of the environment of early man, how he made his tools. He discusses the relationship between apes and man and between modern man and other species such as neanderthal man.

Before the Dawn of History, Whittlesey House, McGraw-Hill, 1934, by Charles R. Knight, gives us in picture vivid views of life back through the geologic ages. Mr. Knight's famous mural paintings in the New York and Chicago museums are here reproduced with an explanatory text on how scientists discovered what is here presented. Turning the pages of this book we follow the development of life from the gigantic Orthoceras on the Ordovician seashore through the development of the great Dinosaurs, the gigantic Titanotheres and woolly Rhinoceroses on through the early stages of the development of man. By turning the pages one gains something of the hundred million year vision that has come to us only in the past half century.

EARLY ANCESTORS AND RELATIVES

Pope's epigram "The proper study of mankind is man" and Socrates' injunction "Know thyself" take on added significance for the educator and the parent with each year's revelations from the anthropologist, the psychiatrist, the endocrinologist. On the background of the old physiology and anatomy, the anthropologist with his wider study of mankind, the archaeologist carrying the story of man backward, have revealed new chapters in the story of man, have brought us new understanding and new points of view in regard to the people around us. But in the study of our simian relatives the past decade has seen a vast field for research opened up. Yerkes "Almost Human," Yerkes and Yerkes "The Great Apes," and Zuckerman's "Social Life of Monkeys and Apes," reviewed in the 16th edition of this Handbook, p. 65, revealed that there was little in the social or sexual life of the simians that was not human.

Dr Zuckerman, now associated with Yerkes at Yale, in his Functional Affinities of Man, Monkeys, and Apes, Harcourt, Brace, 1934 has given us an admirable supplement to the Yerkes great book. He brings together the result of recent researches on mechanisms of reproduction and blood reactions, and of anthropoid intelligence, showing the many ways in which the different simians and anthropoids differ from and resemble each other. In monkey society he finds basic resemblances to human society but no identity.

Man's Place Among the Anthropoids, Clarendon Press, 1934, is the title given to three lectures which sum up the long story of the evolution of man by William King Gregory of the American Museum of Natural History of New York. The lectures deal with the locomotor skeleton, the jaws and teeth, the face and brain case. The story covers a period of several hundred million years of vertebrate evolution. Early established were the five fingered vertebrate types, and the modifications of skeletal structure in the last few million years have been on the whole minor. But all these are followed in great detail, especially the development of the face.

And Dr Gregory knows the paleontological record well. Naturally his interest centers on man and he presents overwhelming proof that man's characteristics and those of the higher apes are closely related. He asks, "If man himself had not been naming and classifying the animal world, would it have occurred to him to deny the family relationship between himself and the gorilla or the chimpanzee?"

BROADENING OUR VIEW

The anthropologist's outlook is slowly bringing breadth to our understanding. Patient, sympathetic and scientific observation of those whom we once spoke of as savage has revealed that each group has its sacred traditions, its religion built up through long past time. Now we understand more about primitive religions. Once political theorists looked upon savages and primitive peoples as having no ideas of law or order. Now we know that law, fixed custom, is more inflexible among primitive tribes than in advanced civilizations.

Law and Order in Polynesia, Harcourt, Brace, 1934, by H. Ian Hogbin, is introduced by Malinowski who, with his "Law and Custom in Savage Society," pioneered in the field of primitive anthropology. Well-ordered legal institutions are characteristic not only of the Polynesians but, Dr Malinowski maintains in his introduction, of most primitive human societies.

Machinery of historic jurisprudence may be lacking among primitive peoples but there is organic law in their social functioning, the principle of reciprocity, of give and take. Where reciprocity is withheld there society raises its protest This is as organic as the relations of all primitive simians. Out of it came the golden rule which in more civilized societies has become a dead letter Reciprocity, give and take, is the rule of life and progress

Social authority is maintained everywhere in different ways, ethnologists agree, sometimes without formal legal paraphernalia merely by making certain courses of action honorable and others the subject of ridicule

Dr. Hogbin's study covers the primitive legal institutions among the natives of Ontong Java, small islands north of the anthropologically famous Solomon Islands. Here he observes that a basic principle is cooperation and sharing in the struggle for existence. The parasite must work or is ostracized Favors and gifts are exchanged, not given. Dr Hogbin criticizes those students of comparative law who derive social forms from a collective consciousness In the area he studies they utilize the family organization, extending the family authority to tribal authority without losing law's essential basis in the family structure. Education, religious beliefs and the general publicity of primitive life are the effective means of enforcing and maintaining rules more intricate and standards more uniform than are possible in our western civilization. This intensive study of primitive life has broad bearings on our modern civilization.

In Our Primitive Contemporaries, Macmillan, 1934, George Peter Murdock, a trained anthropologist, attempts to tell us how primitive peoples actually live. He gives a brief account of the cultures of eighteen different peoples representative of all the great regions and races of the world and of the major tribes and levels of culture Among the people discussed are the Aranda of Central Australia, the Tasmanians, the Samoans, the Todas, the Eskimo, the Hopi, the Aztecs and Incas He endeavors to cover the important aspects of economic, political and social life with reference to their racial, geographic and historic background.

Introduction to Cultural Anthropology, Farrar & Rinehart, 1934, by Robert H Lowie, Ph.D., is planned to provide a topical treatment in eighteen chapters dealing with such subjects as farming, dress, handicrafts, art and war. The attempt to treat and maintain interest in any one such topic for all the diverse cultures of the world within these few pages is impossible. A more intensive study of a few cultures or a few facts on many cultures would be much more illuminating and educative

In Patterns of Culture, Houghton Mifflin, 1934, Ruth Benedict describes three types of civilization, the Kwakiutl, Zuni and Dobu peoples, and shows how custom moulds character among them. The three primitive peoples selected have been fully studied and described by ethnologists with whom Miss Benedict was able to discuss them. She herself has lived among the Zunis.

Franz Boas has written an introduction to his pupil's work and she has drawn largely on his researches of the Kwakiutls of Vancouver Island. These first two were both North American Indian tribes but a greater contrast in their cultures could scarcely be found. With the Zunis social values are important, personality is subdued. Quite the opposite is true of the Kwakiutls and of the Dobu islanders near New Guinea. How intricate, how dependent upon tradition these three cultures are is made apparent from the careful study and analysis here presented. The importance of an institution in a culture is no indication of its usefulness or its inevitability. From the study of these cultures Miss Benedict arrives at the "understanding" we need of our own cultural processes.

In her last chapter, dealing with the individual and his conflict with the pattern of culture, she writes "There can be no reasonable doubt that one of the most effective ways in which to deal with the staggering burden of psychopathic tragedies in America at the present time is by means of an educational program which fosters tolerance in society and a kind of self-respect and independence that is foreign to Middletown and our urban traditions."

HUMAN ECOLOGY

In the last analysis man's psychological as well as sociological characteristics are dependent upon biological processes. But the independent study of human biology has been much neglected or glossed over. Ecology, the study of plant and animal societies, how and where organisms live and multiply in groups, belongs almost wholly to this century.

But human ecology has been neglected as a science, perhaps because it has been so easy to draw conclusions about population that the careful scientific selection of data has been neglected. How and where men live together in groups, how the group is maintained by reproduction and what determines the rate of reproduction,—these are the questions that the study of ecology of the human race would answer. Such matters left to the census bureau in the past have recently been taken up by scientists. The Population Association of America is arranging a Conference on Population Studies in Relation to Social Planning.

The Dynamics of Population, Social and Biological Significance of Changing Birth Rates in the United States, Macmillan, 1934, by Frank Lorimer and Frederick Osborn, is a storehouse of demographic material relating to the United States gathered with the aid of a galaxy of specialists. It deals with population trends, their causes and control, and measurable characteristics of American groups against the background of physical, economic and social factors that influence fertility.

As we tend toward a stationary population fertility differentials are disappearing between negroes and whites. Mexicans, French Canadians and other groups maintain a higher fertility. Concealed in these factors is the future of the population of the United States. The meek who multiply most rapidly will inherit the earth. This seems to have social significance especially as there is negative correlation between reproduction and intellectual capacity. Our authors show that of the professional classes with an I Q of 116 the net reproductive rate is .76, while for agricultural classes with an I Q of 99 the reproduction rate is 1.32. Birth control may have to be better directed if the intelligent are to retain standing room on the footstool.

WHO WILL SURVIVE?

"What we must avoid is a progressive deterioration of mankind as a result of the reckless and copious breeding of protected inferiors. We have not the knowledge to breed supermen, but we can limit the reproduction of criminals and mental defectives. Let us cease to delude ourselves that education, religion or other measures of social amelioration can transform base metal into gold." So spoke Dr. Ernest Albert Hooton, Harvard's famed anthropologist, at the Pittsburgh meeting of the A A A S in January 1935.

H S Jennings in The Universe and Life, Yale University Press, 1933, tells us that biology affords no support whatever to such ideas as the divine guidance of evolutionary progress or the theological basis of morality, or the immortality of the individual. But biological science does point to the importance of eugenics as the only method for continuing evolutionary progress in the human species.

Otto L. Mohr in his Heredity and Disease, W. W. Norton, 1934, expresses an optimistic view. "We may be fairly sure that good and bad germinal material is scattered pretty much at random among the different social strata." This makes sense, as folks say that there is good and bad in the worst of us.

Professor Hooton in the address mentioned above further said, "I am unaware of any marked improvement of man's evolutionary status since the end of the glacial period." This note of pessimism gives educators grounds for optimism. It is theirs to make the environment which shall mould the raw material that heredity has given them.

HOW CHILDREN GROW

We are just beginning to learn about babies. Hundreds of millions of mothers have had the opportunity but it remained for Arnold Gesell, professor at Yale, to learn much from scientific observation, from photography. He has recently published a great folio of photographs, and entertaining as well as scientific instructive motion picture films of the earliest doings of babies. With the scientific study of the early stages of our offspring still in its infancy we may yet learn much of value. Books on the subject multiply and become more and more scientific.

The Child, His Origin, Development and Care, McGraw-Hill, 1934, By Florence Brown Sherbon, A M , M D , Professor of Child Care and Development, Department of Home Economics, University of Kansas, brings together a vast amount of recent information on the child, pre-natal and post-natal. The psychology of the child is considered from a dynamic point of view rather than as a matter of various cross-sections of the individual's life. Learning as a factor in development in early childhood is emphasized more than is usual in books of this type.

Inspired by the work of Arnold Gesell she attempts here to present the whole child from every scientific approach. The early part consists of a bio-chemical introduction to life in general,—embryology, heredity. After a general review of reproduction through the animal cells a study of human reproduction is taken up anatomically and physiologically, dealing with such subjects as fertility, love, marriage, pregnancy. Briefly obstetrics and gynecology are dealt with. A little more than half the book is given to the child,—feeding, diseases, hygiene, behavior, carried through to the fifth year. Problems of child training are taken up.

The bibliographies and index are excellent. Chapters are preceeded by worthwhile quotations from the poets Tagore, Whitman, and the philosophers Spinoza, Rousseau, etc. The illustrations are modern. Here is a compendium of knowledge covering a vast field of modern research made available to students by one who has benefited from extensive experience in university courses, clinics and scientific laboratories, and by wide reading, from which she has taken extensive notes. It is a good book written to order from lecture notes but the style is rather verbose and it lacks intellectual acumen.

Child Psychology, Prentice-Hall, 1933, is by Arthur T. Jersild, Ph D , Research Associate, Child Development Institute and Assistant Professor of Education, Teachers College, Columbia University. The book bears the stamp of the author's environment and experience. Thoroughly scientific, it utilizes and summarizes the latest researches in terse clear language with well selected bibliographies appended to each chapter and an excellent index.

Beginning with the new born child we are made aware of the recent knowledge that has been acquired through scientific laboratory study within the past twenty years. Born insensitive to pain, with simian reflexes, the development of new responses is briefly and tersely catalogued. The distinction is early made between learning and maturation. The latter comes normally from the automatic internal development of the nervous system. The development of the child is followed through the early years. Especially interesting is the chapter on the development of language, more diffuse the treatment of the development of the infant's emotions and social behavior, growth of understanding and measurement of mental ability. An excellent book, scientific, free from generalizations, it gives a basis for understanding.

Child Guidance Clinics, A Quarter Century of Development, The Commonwealth Fund, 1934, by George S. Stevenson, M.D., and Geddes Smith, is the story of the development of the clinic and its general features of importance. With recognition of pioneer work elsewhere, attention is given chiefly to the Commonwealth Fund Clinics. Successive chapters deal with cases, procedures, staff and educational services. Throughout there is a tendency to confuse clinic psychiatry and mental hygiene.

This is a book which permits us to see through the peepholes of child guidance clinics the damage that our civilization is doing to the youth of today. But these clinics are only outposts which merely demonstrate the need for such a great public state-fostered movement as has removed the cause of mental hygiene cases in Russia and Italy.

New Horizons for the Child, Avalon Press, 1934, is another inspirational and refreshing work from the hands of the prolific Stanwood Cobb, mystic, lover of humanity and founder of the Progressive Education Association. It will bring aid, comfort, new vision and understanding to many mothers. It deals with the child at home, understanding the child character, training the child as an individual, as an active being, as a creative being and as the builder of a new civilization.

GROWING UP

In The Road To Adolescence, Harvard University Press, 1934, Joseph Garland of the Harvard Medical School connections writes on the physical welfare and training of children from five to fifteen. He explains the three growth cycles that bring them to adolescence and to the development that makes them the individuals they are. He gives practical advice about school, camp and home environment.

Training the Adolescent, Bruce, 1934, by Raphael C. McCarthy, S.J., M.A., Ph.D., Professor of Psychology at St. Louis University, is a marvellous example of the resistant adaptiveness of the Jesuit Catholic shock troops against the advance of modern ideas. Father McCarthy, trained master of dialectic, equipped with the scientific lingo, interprets the modern view of adolescence "from a sane and Christian point of view" which means the Catholic, the Jesuit's point of view, for all knowledge is sterile unless it embodies the true teachings of the Church

The general editor, Dr. Joseph Husslein, S. J., commends him on his achievement "All the various objectives of an ideal psychology of adolescence have been met by this volume, with its strictly modern aspect, its thorough, scientific information, its healthy Christian atmosphere" He regrets that much of the "literature on adolescence is frankly naturalistic," that "religion is scorned as an outgrown superstition" If the present work can lay any claim to merit, that claim will rest [on] the emphasis placed upon the need of a practical belief in the supernatural in the training of youth a conviction that God exists and that he has inalienable rights on men " This is a worthy example of Jesuitical sophistry, showing skill in the method of dwarfing and stultifying inquiring minds

YOUTH TODAY IN AMERICA

On a rainy night donning his old clothes Thomas Minehan, a young, sane, enterprising professor of Sociology at the University of Minnesota, hit the bread line in Minneapolis In his Boy and Girl Tramps of America, Farrar & Rinehart, 1934, produced two years later after two summers and many winter periods of travel in box cars and living in tramp jungles, he "had collected case histories of over five hundred boys and girls, associated on terms of intimacy and equality with several thousand, traveled in six states as a transient, experienced in all seasons and under all conditions the daily life of a boy or girl living in box cars" And he took his camera and got pictures of how they board the freights and ride the box cars and live in the jungles

It is not a pleasant picture he presents. It will disgust and pain many to have these disagreeable facts brought to their attention, to learn how thousands of American boys and girls who in better times would be doing well in high school are now getting their itinerant education in box cars and tramp jungles, to learn of the "increasing number of late of maverick girl tramps . . . available to any and all boys in the camp including adults and late arrivals . . . They enter a box car or a jungle—and without more ado the line forms on the right"

In Germany every youth spends six months in a labor camp before entering the university, the army, or any job. In Italy or Russia youth is fostered as the most important product of the people Under any clear minded dictator youth is an asset In America youth is wasted Our CCC takes only those over eighteen.

Our summer camps and our scout organizations have done nothing to meet these conditions. Their equipment lies idle. We who have led the world in the rediscovery of the outdoors and the establishment of the summer camp have left it for benighted European countries to carry on the movement, to "de-wop the wops" in Italy, to do away with mental hygiene cases in Russia, to put courage and confidence into the rickety war babies of Germany.

IN RUSSIA

Frankwood E. Williams, M.D., is one of America's leading psychiatrists. His Russia, Youth, And The Present-Day World, Further Studies in Mental Hygiene, Farrar & Rinehart, 1934, is the result of two visits and thousands of miles of travel through Russia. His interest is to reveal what is going on in the field of psychiatry and mental hygiene in Russia. Dr. Williams explains that while in America we have propaganda about mental hygiene and work with individuals in child guidance clinics, schools and colleges, in Russia there is mental hygiene propaganda and work with the masses.

Only in the USSR, Italy, and Germany do we find the youth living purposefully, but in the latter two countries inevitable war dooms them to disillusionment. "If we are right in regard to the etiology of anxiety, then the Russians are right in their approach to the problem as a whole, for the fundamental etiology can be attacked only indirectly and only as an accompaniment of tremendous social change."

The frontispiece, a group of Russian youth with happily confident faces, substantiates his thesis that the great accomplishment of this Russian Revolution is not industrial or economic, but spiritual, that is, it has done away with the feeling of inferiority, it has substituted purposefulness for a feeling of hopelessness. "The end, the real interest, is the welfare of the individual, every man, woman and child, in the terms of health, education and the development of talents." This is due, he points out, to a planned society, to ideals.

In spite of discomforts and privations, low standards of living and hard work, Russian youth are filled with ardor and enthusiasm. They are made to feel that all is being done by their elders for their future benefit. They have faith and high vision of the future. All this we have been told by numerous investigators and travelers. All this we may learn from the planned economic and official documents that have come to us from Russia.

Reviewers of this book have overlooked the fact that Dr. Williams is more interested in direction than in distance travelled. A low standard of living, privations, executions, death, can be endured by a people without mental harm so long as they believe they are not being exploited for the benefit of others. Consequently, the criticism that the plans and aims have not been accomplished in full have little effect.

UNDERSTANDING OUR FELLOWS

The great resources of science, of revealed knowledge about ourselves and our fellows,—personality, motive and behavior, have been too much the private property of jealous specialists each with his own theory. The application of this knowledge to understanding our fellows is all ahead. Harold D. Lasswell in his World Politics and Personal Insecurity, Whittlesey House, 1935, the third of the remarkable trilogy from the Economics Department of Chicago University, makes apparent how political power, political events, have resulted from the idiosyncrasies of personality. He is the first to put economics, war, profit, on a mental hygiene basis. This is a big job imperfectly done but a pioneer work that shows a new way of rewriting history and economics.

Now Dr. Abraham Myerson interprets the units that make up our society, and Dr. Charles Macfie Campbell how the environment shapes individuals. Social Psychology, Prentice-Hall, 1934, is by Abraham Myerson, M.D., Professor of Neurology, Tufts College Medical School and Director of Research, Boston State Hospital. The capacities and habits acquired by man as a member of society, not merely as an individual, and how the milieu fosters, modifies, or destroys these capacities is the essential theme of this book. Secondary is the study of how the psychiatrist and physician sees the psychology of the individual dependent upon his visceral and organic structure.

But the author stresses the necessity of understanding first the organic on which the functional is based. From the background of a practicing psychiatrist with broad experience in its clinical and criminal aspects, we have a presentation of social psychology of prime interest. Especially valuable is his emphasis upon the psychology of sex, his treatment of the family and the chapter on misdoing. The author, biologically minded, criminally experienced, broad in his sympathies, gives us here basic material for arriving at a new understanding of what makes and modifies the individual so that one who has read this book can never again look upon his fellows without deeper understanding.

Human Personality and the Environment, Macmillan, 1934, is the published series of six Lowell Institute Lectures delivered by Charles Macfie Campbell, another famed Boston psychiatrist. In a briefer and more popular way this book too introduces us to the personalities with whom we are surrounded in the everyday affairs of life and endeavors to clear up the complicated and mysterious personalities of our neighbors.

Dr Campbell starts farther back, with the physico-chemical environment and its effect on behavior,—the effects of oxygen, food, sunshine, humidity, climate in general. Then he deals definitely with the glands that determine personality and follows this by tracing the development of the individual personality through infancy, childhood, adolescence, showing the importance of repressions and how in the adult primitive and childhood views may persist. The next two lectures deal with types and with personality, with illustrations from historic characters

Such a brief outline gives little understanding of how interesting are the concrete examples chosen from literature and history brought into the clinic and dissected, discussed and explained so as to enlarge the reader's horizons and understanding of those he may meet in books, in the home or on the street

ENGLISH SCHOOLS AS THEY HAVE BEEN

Realistic writing about the famous schools of England has been a thing unknown until of late. Tradition and reverence have wrapped them and their absurdities in a hoary mantle of protection from appraising scrutiny. But here's a group of books by those who know. The Old School, Essays by Divers Hands, Jonathan Cape, 1934, edited by Graham Greene, consists of nearly a score of intimate reminiscences of their schools by men and women who have become more or less prominent among the younger writers of England, among them the poets W. H. Auden and Stephen Spender and also Harold Nicolson. Three women write of girls' schools.

Here we find realistic reminiscences, sometimes ironic, sometimes humorous, always revealing and stripped of the old time sentimentality, of most of the public schools of England,—Winchester, Harrow, Eton, Rugby. And the pictures here painted, the testimony borne, justify the editor's remark, "this book will, I hope, be superficially more funny than tragic, for so odd a system of education does not demand a pompous memorial. For there can be small doubt that the system which this book mainly represents is doomed."

"We were not naturally class-conscious, it was from the masters we learnt our snobbery and the means to express it. Whatever the political changes in this country during the next few years one thing surely is almost certain: the class distinctions will not remain unaltered and the public school, as it exists to-day, will disappear."

But Graham Greene, the editor, in the last essay throws doubt upon the present status. His own school, Berkhamsted, of which his own father was head master, he thinks has gone backward instead of forward. He admires his father's achievement as head, and thinks of the school in his time as better than most. At times his praise is high. "It was not a really satisfactory school for sadists, only two sadistic masters come back to mind, and one of them was so openly sadistic, so cheerful a debauchee, that one could not grudge him his pleasure. Boys, like whores, prefer a man who enjoys shamelessly what he is about."

In discussing education Greene says "For the wider education can safely be left to the child and his natural curiosity. . . He may not grow up as a successful colonial administrator in the English tradition. . . but he will be an adult. . . . He will have learnt sex more truthfully in a farm yard than in a house-master's study, and if he is a town child the jokes written on lavatory walls are likely to do less harm than the sentimentality, the embarrassment, the intellectual flummery of a set talk before confirmation on the 'facts of life'. They will have taught him at any rate that sexual enjoyment is neither solemn nor dull. Why, in any case, he should feel more loyal to a school which is paid to teach him than to a butcher who is paid to feed him I cannot understand. I am afraid my want of understanding is responsible for this book."

Auden tells us how at Holt a kind of honor system suppressed swearing, smoking, indecencies, and adds "I feel compelled to say that I believe no more potent engine for turning them into neurotic innocents, for perpetuating those very faults of character which it was intended to cure, was ever devised." And L. P. Hartley speaks of the punctuality ingrained in him at Harrow "Reacting against tyranny and the punishments with which it was enforced, I had found the idea of punctuality odious, a mark of servitude whose every association was distasteful", and J. N. Richards at Winchester: "The Wykehamist makes Winchester in all its beauty appear a home for medieval morons."

E. Arnot Robertson tells us how at Sherborne, "the potting shed of the English rose," the whole spirit was actuated by the thought, "Run about, girls, like boys, and then you won't think of them." "The head mistress . . . telling us in an emotional address that she trusted us alone in the bathrooms. If one broke a rule one was expected to confess it to a prefect and have a nice spiritual wallow together. . . . This system produced the most thorough going prigs imaginable." No wonder the Oxford movement which makes a feature of these "spiritual wallows" has flourished in England.

Stephen Spender speaks of his school: "I was like all the other boys from the preparatory school, sadistic. We had, of course, deeply and instinctively realized that the head master was sadistic. It would have surprised my parents to have known that they might just as well have had me educated at a brothel for flagellants as at the school referred to, but it was so, and I am sure it is equally true of many other preparatory schools."

Catholic schools, convent schools, public schools, preparatory schools, universities, colleges,—all are there, though most of these reminiscences are by young writers who were in public schools about the time of the war, or just before or after, and many of them think or hope things are better now.

Bernard Henderson in Schoolmasters All, or Thirty Years Hard, Constable, London, 1933, relieves all the repressions and suppressions of thirty years as a public school under master. His characterizations of his colleagues remind one of Dickens. He writes, "So deeply engrained in the hearts of most men is their contempt for school masters, that they would far more willingly put up with the company of a genuine out-and-out jail bird. He is far more interesting than a school master."

He injects bits of philosophical reflection. "We have been sadly feminized these last ten years. Many of our young men show clear traces of the process. One has almost begun to feel apologetic for being male, but if what is left of the male has to don the cassock and approach the way to petticoats, we may as well give up the ghost in our struggle among the nations and acknowledge that the once virile English race has become a group of hermaphroditic text lispers. If the authorities that rule the world of education wish to turn out young fellows of a stereotyped order, a sort of cross between a parson and a lay reader, a piece of tamed human flesh, always ready to act the preacher, and skilful at the warping of manhood, heaven help the England of the future."

Why not frankly employ Eastern methods and obtain a number of certificated eunuchs for the training of youth? Cannot we really get rid of some of that hypocrisy which makes an intellectual foreigner loathe the society of an Englishman, and which cumberers true religion like a sweaty garment?"

Geoffrey Dennis lifts the roof off a small boys school in the north of England in Bloody Mary's, Simon and Schuster, 1933. The real name is Queen Mary's School, an old-fashioned day school in Yorkshire, an ancient foundation, and Dennis exposes to our gaze the lively though far from engaging spectacle within as an entomologist would do with an ant's nest.

The headmaster, a peculiar old boy of considerable ferocity, alone had the right to thrash the pupils. Four canes of varying thickness hung in his study. Mighty was he in learning and teaching and mightier still in swinging the rod. The masters could only resort to sarcasm, threats, punishment drill, and slaps with rulers It is a vivid picture of what we venerated as education less than a generation ago

In The Faith Of A Schoolmaster, Methuen, London, 1935, E. Sharwood Smith tells persuasively of his head mastership at Newbury Grammar School from 1903 to 1934 Due to the influence of Edmond Holmes' great book "What Is And What Might Be," he was inspired to work out a new, humane and enlightened system of education in which he made a great deal of dramatizing Greek and Shakespearean plays The book is written in a delightful, easy, personal style and contains much of inspiration for many school masters, English or American.

A slight book which has achieved best seller publicity in this country is Good-bye Mr. Chips, Little Brown, 1934, by James Hilton, whose father was a school master in an English public school The picture given is not so much of the school, Brookfield, "established in the reign of Elizabeth," however, as it is a character portrait of its classical master, Mr. Chips. He is dealt with kindly as an exemplar of the old tradition Unaware of the real world he stubbornly resisted all change He had "already begun to sink into that creeping dry rot of pedagogy which is the worst and ultimate pitfall of the profession, giving the same lessons year after year had formed a groove into which the other affairs of his life adjusted themselves with insidious ease"

TWO GREAT SCHOOL MISTRESSES

To the meager bibliography of the private school have been added two tributes of alumnæ Mrs. Blanche E. Wheeler Williams writes, for fellow alumnæ and friends, of her aunt Mary C. Wheeler, Leader in Art and Education, Marshall Jones, 1934

Eighth of her generation in Concord, endowed with a prime interest in art, in the eighties she opened a studio in Providence out of which gradually developed her school. It was what we would call today a progressive school, following principles advocated by Eliot of Harvard School work was informal but intensive. In the summer groups of girls went with her to her villa in France Here she trained as assistants Marion E. Park, now president of Bryn Mawr, and Katherine Lord, now head of Winsor School "Any education that does not prepare a girl to live well in her own home is fundamentally defective," Miss Wheeler announced in an early school circular.

In Agnes Irwin, A Biography, Doubleday Doran, 1934, Agnes Repplier, sponsored by alumnæ of Miss Irwin's Philadelphia school, writes of her life and personality and of the incongruity of transplanting the Philadelphia school mistress to the Cambridge atmosphere as dean of Radcliffe.

THE OLD BOY LOOKS BACK

Frank Davis Ashburn, alumnus and former master of Groton, now head master of the Brooks School, reviews the first fifty years at Groton in Fifty Years On, Gosden Head, 1934. Disavowing that this is either a history or a biography, the old boy gives us a vivid portrait of the creator and dictator of the school, Endicott Peabody, who remains in "utter absolute power," the only appeal from whom has been Mrs Peabody, "wise, gentle, beloved of all." But he held to him loyally his co-founders, Sherrard Billings and William Amory Gardner.

Mr Ashburn frankly and graciously meets the critics who have dubbed Groton aristocratic, un-American, British, "absurdly pure," keeping its boys "unspotted from the world." The code is strict, in some respects almost monastic. . . . The question of the possible psychological cramping of a boy by too much of it is more serious. . . . The single spot in which the cramping has been most felt has been the spiritual. Individuals feel that there has been too much dogmatism and not enough reason, too much chapel, and not enough freedom of thought. He frankly admits that there is the criticism that "Groton turns out a type," chiefly a so-called "business type."

"Groton has been a Church School, believing profoundly in the power of the Spirit and in the duty of service being passed from generation to generation by personal intimate contact." Large doses of chapel daily, as well as courses in sacred studies, have resulted in "a striking thing, that out of an alumni body of more than a thousand only fifteen have taken orders." "For at least twenty-five years the texts and courses gave no hint that there had been men before Adam, that Charles Darwin and Andrew D. White, to name only two, had confronted established religion with the most startling challenge since Martin Luther."

Arthur Stanwood Pier, well-known writer, an old St. Paul's boy, gives a formal but sympathetic treatment in St. Paul's School, Scribner's, 1934. Now on the teaching staff of the school, he acknowledges the kindness of head master Dr. Samuel S. Drury "in supplying material, giving valuable criticism, and lightening my labors as a teacher while I have been engaged upon this work." He describes the founder, Augustus Coit, "in character and zeal and temperament very like the man of wrath, John Brown . . . a ruthless fanatic." To John Brown whose aims and "actions he abhorred" his soul was akin.

"Towards the end of Henry Coit's administration there had been noticeable a decline in morale. At a master's meeting in a discussion whether a proposed rule should be adopted, Mr. Spanhoofd, who had taken no part in the discussion, finally said in his bland way, 'Why do we not make it a rule? The boys will pay no attention to it' "

Dr Drury in his first report to the trustees emphasized that "our work is the building of character, that it is primarily a personal work, and that only by the devoted co-operation of us all can that work of character building be attained "

After listing the wealth and aristocracy who have attended St Paul's and citing those who have achieved something in after life, Mr Pier speaks of the pleasing characteristics of the St Paul boy, "never 'two-faced' with boys, and quite uncritical in his outlook," who goes out into the world with "an eagerness to join in some common effort for the good of all—if only some one will direct him where that common effort is being made! Again a qualification that indicates there may be something lacking in a school spirit that is solely one of cheerful co-operation "

FAITH IS NEEDED

The best that the greatest individuals of any race have ever done for their peoples is to strengthen their faith, to give them confidence that life was not purposeless. Man is ever unrestful, ever stretching out for what he believes to be the supreme good, unable in his blind misunderstanding way to find solid satisfactions in the world about him. He has ever been ready to reward those who could point to something in another world to which he should look. And ever these blind illusory pictures and promises must be remade for new peoples and new times.

Something of this is the theme of Baker Brownell's Earth Is Enough, An Essay in Religious Realism, Harper, 1934. He considers various definitions of religion, Plato's acceptance of duty as divine command, Matthew Arnold's as morality touched by emotion, Bosanquet's as union with the supreme good, Warde Fowler's as right relationship to the universal power, Durant Drake's as loyalty to one's finest ideals. And then in melodious prose he tells us that religion is a way of seeing, an identity somehow with being. He tells us that religion has nothing to do with God for "God is a theoretical Being that men accept in modern times mainly as a way to give authority to values."

In his criticism of modern life Dr Brownell blames the Church as the Pope blames our modern system. He indicts the Church for imposing on western men a notion of an eternity alien to the native yearnings of the human heart and for instituting a system of postponed values. For those who are free, unhampered by early religious education, from whose trammels they have escaped, this is a rewarding book.

The Terry Foundation Lectures at Yale, now in their eleventh season, were established to treat of some aspect of religion "in the light of science or philosophy " The founder had no desire to forward any particular kind of belief or even a conception of religion itself, but merely to provide opportunity where unprejudiced men of deep learning and high intelligence might speak, might voice their thought To John Dewey, our greatest philosopher and educator, came the opportunity in 1934 to set forth in three lectures A Common Faith, Yale University Press, 1934, his thought on how religions have prevented and dwarfed the religious in man

The common faith that he here expounds is the faith held today by the world's leading thinkers And we need more preachers and expounders of this new and greater faith,—the faith that today imbues those who are doing the greatest deeds in the world, sacrificing ease, comfort, even life itself, for the enlightenment of their fellows as to their opportunities here on this earth, and the consequent betterment of their communities and their race It is a faith that needs to be strengthened through sharing It is a faith unfelt, unknown, unrealized by the ascetic, the cynic, or those whose faith and hope is fixed on some future world beyond this earth

And yet we find faithless reviewers of this little book who quibble, and others who hunger but tell us it is too hard to digest But it is as lucid a piece of writing as Dewey has put forth That does not mean that it is easy reading for the lazy mind, nor likely to be a popular book, although the sale has been phenomenal, considering the form in which the message is put

To those whose habits of thought have been formed by "religious education" or by regular attendance at orthodox religious services, the straightness of the thought and expression may prove troublesome Such may fail to appreciate the reverence and faith, the true religious attitude, of the man who here speaks and writes For Dr Dewey is straightforwardly outspoken in dealing with what everyone knows, and what is self evident but seldom so directly expressed

"For we are forced to acknowledge that concretely there is no such thing as religion in the singular There is only a multitude of religions 'Religion' is a strictly collective term Yet it is conceivable that the present depression in religions is closely connected with the fact that religions now prevent, because of their weight of historic encumbrances, the religious quality of experience from coming to consciousness and finding the expression that is appropriate to present conditions "

"Anthropology, history and literary criticism have furnished a radically different version of the historic events and personages upon which Christian religions have built Psychology is already opening to us natural explanations of phenomena so extraordinary that once their supernatural origin was, so to say, the natural explanation "

"The fundamentalist in religion is one whose beliefs in intellectual content have hardly been touched by scientific developments . . . But his actual life, in what he does day by day and in the contacts that are set up, has been radically changed by political and economic changes that have followed from applications of science . . . creeds display great powers of accommodation; their articles undergo insensible change of perspective, emphases are altered, and new meanings creep in. The Catholic Church, particularly, has shown leniency in dealing with intellectual deviations as long as they do not touch discipline, rites, and sacraments "

Some will quarrel with Dr Dewey's use of "God " All peoples have Gods but few of us have the same, and certainly few have the same God as their grandparents or remote ancestors. Some have to have a humanized God endowed with sex, or with feet of clay.

The militant atheist and infidel attitude naturally cannot appeal to a philosopher, a scientist and educator like Dewey. Nor does fuzzy mindedness. At times he becomes epigrammatic, even aphoristic.

" 'Agnosticism' is a shadow cast by the eclipse of the supernatural. Doubts are an incident of faith in the method of intelligence. They are signs of faith, not of a pale and impotent skepticism . . . We doubt in order that we may find out, not because some inaccessible supernatural lurks behind whatever we can know "

"God helps those who help themselves" but Dewey improves upon this. "Men have never fully used the powers they possess to advance the good in life, because they have waited upon some power external to themselves and to nature to do the work they are responsible for doing. Dependence upon an external power is the counterpart of surrender of human endeavor."

In the possibilities of the race he finds "all the elements for a religious faith that shall not be confined to sect, class, or race. Such a faith has always been implicitly the common faith of mankind. It remains to make it explicit and militant."

THE PRIVATE SCHOOLS
STATISTICALLY AND CRITICALLY PRESENTED

EXPLANATORY NOTE

In bold face type the basic statistical facts are given for each school as reported by the school. Figures sent which seem plausible are indicated by an asterisk. Many schools have failed to report and others have sent figures asking that they be not published. Others have given a blanket approval of the statistics published in former editions. Such figures are printed in lieu of more up to date data.

The school name, for Boys, for Girls or Coeducational (Coed), the Ages of the pupils enrolled, the date of establishment (Est), the head with degrees, colleges, and title. The enrollment (Enr) is whenever possible divided into boarding (Bdg) and day. The number of the faculty (Fac) in general includes only full-time instructors. Tuition (Tui) with its various ranges, boarding and day, the grades covered and the courses given, college preparatory (Col Prep), academic (Acad), and special (Music, Art, Domestic Science, etc), are indicated. The type of ownership, — incorporated, incorporated not for profit, partnership, proprietary, the number of trustees and how elected, the endowment, scholarships and their value, prizes and their value, denominational influence or affiliation, the colleges and associations to which the school is accredited, the number of pupils taking College Entrance Board Examinations (C E B Exams) for various years, and the number of graduates entering college in 1934, are given where reported. Accrediting by the state department of education and by church boards has been omitted.

Long called 'The Forest City', Portland is on a saddleback hill about three miles long at the southwestern end of Casco Bay. It is the largest city of, and the gateway to Maine. Modern innovations have not obliterated the mellow dignity of the past, and the beauty of its homes and public buildings enhances the city's natural loveliness. The City Hall with its municipal auditorium contains the fourth largest organ in the world. A few doors west of Monument Square is the elm-shaded Wadsworth-Longfellow house, carefully preserved by the Maine Historical Society.

The Waynflete Latin School is in the West End residential section. On the same street, nearer the center of the city, is the School of Fine Arts of the Portland Society of Art. Westbrook Junior College, in the Deering section to the west, is the oldest educational institution of Universalist origin in the country.

Oak Grove is today a well organized endowed school for girls, drawing its patrons not only from Maine, but from eleven states and three foreign countries. For three-quarters of a century it was a coeducational seminary, the last five years of which were under the direction of the present principals. Established by five influential and scholarly Friends who desired a select school for their children, Oak Grove is still under the control of Quakers, although patronized by all denominations. The present status of the school is chiefly due to the untiring energy of the Owens and the devotion of the students to them, in response to their real and vital interest in each girl. See page 873.

Chartered by the General Court of Massachusetts "for the purpose of promoting piety and virtue, and for the education of youth in such languages, and such of the liberal arts and sciences as the Trustees shall direct," this old academy, maintained through changes and vicissitudes for over a century, entered on a new era in 1926 with the election of Mr. Hyde. In 1928 Cyrus H. K. Curtis gave over a quarter of a million dollars for new buildings and equipment Vigorous, far-sighted, Mr. Hyde maintains this as a low priced school fitted to the needs of the boys and girls of the neighboring coast and islands. The low rate is made possible by a cooperative plan through which the girls of the home economics department, under supervision, cook and serve the meals. See page 914.

CONCORD, N.H. Alt 244 ft. Pop 22,167 (1920) 25,228 (1930).

On the west bank of the Merrimack river, Concord, the capital of New Hampshire, is seventy-five miles north of Boston

The state house and the beautiful building of the New Hampshire Historical Society presented by Edward Tuck, benefactor of Dartmouth, lend an atmosphere of individuality and distinction. Although a busy city, Concord has the charm of a residential village. Near the center is St. Mary's School. The cross state route that formerly ran through the grounds of St. Paul's School now swings north through the valley of the Turkey river.

The establishment of St. Paul's marked a new trend in education in America. The economic development of the country and the increase of wealth had created a place for a new type of private school which should meet more nearly the requirements of a growing wealthy class who no longer wished for their sons the old type of democratic schooling.

This need was first recognized by Dr. George Cheyne Shattuck, who in 1855 gave his estate near Concord for the purpose, as he expressed it in his deed of gift, "Of endowing a school of the highest class for boys, in which they may obtain an education which shall fit them either for college or business, including thorough intellectual training in the various branches of learning, gymnastics and manly exercises adapted to preserve health and strengthen the physical condition, such æsthetic culture and accomplishments as shall tend to refine the manners and elevate the taste, together with careful moral and religious instruction."

The Rev Henry Augustus Coit at the age of twenty-five was called by the trustees to the position of first rector of the new school. Dr Coit, whose family name for two generations had been prominent in American education, had received his training under the Rev William Augustus Muhlenberg, at whose suggestion he was later an instructor in the College of St. James, Hagerstown. Dr Muhlenberg's school at College Point, L. I., which later became St. Paul's College, in its eighteen years existence exerted a great influence on the future private schools in America, for among his pupils in addition to Coit were several future bishops who were later influential in organizing the earliest Episcopalian church schools of the parental type. At St. Paul's Dr Coit entered upon a virgin field and during the formative years of the school he indelibly stamped his personality upon it. As Dr Coit developed it the school showed the influence of his master, Muhlenberg, in its unreserved adoption of the "in loco parentis" theory. Combined with this was much from the English public schools which he had visited, freely adapted to new conditions, and inspiration was without doubt especially derived from Arnold's methods at Rugby. "A stern, sad man in clerical black," writes Owen Wister, "he was born seven hundred years later than the days of his spiritual kin." Dr Coit was an able administrator and a keen student of boys and men. His career was marked by an unswerving adherence to lofty Christian ideals, and the strength of his success lay in his remarkable ability to inspire others with them. For nearly forty years, until his death in 1895, Dr Coit was the head and heart of St. Paul's and made it one of the foremost of the American schools. Not without some reason has he been called the greatest of American school masters.

Even in outdoor life English influence was at first apparent. Dr. Coit encouraged cricket rather than baseball. The English schoolroom nomenclature, too, was here introduced to the American boy. St. Paul's still has "forms," but the "removes," "evensong" and "matins" and even the cricket of Dr. Coit's time are now forgotten. Most of the boys in the four upper forms have separate rooms. The young boys have "alcoves" in the dormitories similar to the "cubicles" of many of the English public schools. This custom here first introduced in the American private schools has been followed by Groton, St. Mark's and other schools.

Dr Coit's immediate successors were somewhat overshadowed by his greatness. He was followed by his brother, Joseph Howland Coit, who had been vice rector since 1865. The Rev. Henry Ferguson, professor of history at Trinity College, who was an "old boy" of St. Paul's, accepted the rectorship for a limited number of years.

Dr Drury, rector since 1911, has brought new inspiration to the school and established new standards of usefulness. Several times in line for a bishopric, he now devotes himself to the school and especially to counteracting the feeling that St Paul's is only for the wealthy. A priest with the ecclesiastical attitude, he has a genius for publicity that reveals itself in his prolific and popular writings. In his readable annual reports he fearlessly advocates progressive innovations which must have had a broadening educational effect upon the alumni. He has introduced with success a measure of student control and self-help in the dormitory life. In many other ways the student life has been broadened and deepened.

St Paul's is today the largest of the church schools, enrolling over four hundred. On the long waiting list about a fifth are sons of alumni. Some boys receive partial remission of tuition or full scholarships each year.

This ancient town, with its wide, elm-shaded streets and air of undisturbed tranquillity, resembles perhaps more than any other New England village an old English provincial town. The buildings of Phillips Exeter Academy lie about a spacious campus on either side of Front Street. The main Academy building, designed by Cram and Ferguson in 1915, is a reproduction in brick and marble of the smaller building erected in 1794. The Plimpton Playing Fields extend from Court Street to the river, across which are the Plimpton Fields Beyond. Bordering on Front Street is the sixteen acre campus of Robinson Seminary and on High Street, near the Academy stadium, Emerson School for Boys occupies the Follansbee estate.

Stirred by the immediate success of Phillips Academy at Andover, founded by his brother and his nephew, John Phillips established The Phillips Exeter Academy in his home town in New Hampshire It was incorporated by the legislature in 1781 and was opened early in 1783

Benjamin Abbot, the second principal, ruled over the institution with great power and wisdom for the term of fifty years. He had been trained at Andover under Principal Pearson, graduated from Harvard in 1788, and came immediately to Phillips Exeter where he became perhaps the most famous of all the early academy teachers "Little Daniel Webster came to him for schooling in 1796 Edward Everett finished his preparation for college here at the age of thirteen. Lewis Cass came to the school at the age of ten, a headstrong boy, fond of pranks and of outdoor life, and here he remained for five years and made a very good record" Lincoln, Grant and Cleveland sent their sons to Exeter In 1838 Gideon L Soule, who had already been a teacher in the school for seventeen years, succeeded Dr. Abbot, and in 1872 the fiftieth year of his continuous service in the academy was celebrated

Exeter's alumni represent every state of the Union and many foreign countries No other school has given so many distinguished men to the nation In 1880, at the close of the first century of her existence, Exeter numbered among her alumni "nine college presidents, including three of Harvard, fifty-two college professors, two hundred and forty-five teachers, thirty-six authors, five ambassadors, seven cabinet ministers, twenty-eight members of Congress, twelve governors of states, a long list of Federal and State judges, Army and Naval officers, and more than a thousand professional men." Such a contribution to the nation's assets must be due to the spirit of Exeter, which has not only attracted pupils of promise, but accounts for their fruitful development.

At Exeter there is a progressive spirit which accepts nothing as necessarily final in educational work. With all its rich traditions Exeter has never become moss-grown. There was no Theological Seminary as at Andover to hold it so strictly to orthodoxy, and its students continued to resort to the more liberal Harvard, and today Exeter remains to a marked extent a school preparatory to Harvard. There is more of the university atmosphere, of the freedom and the fostering of the individual at Exeter than at perhaps any other great American school. The atmosphere at Exeter is essentially democratic and thoroughly American. Not only does it attract seven hundred students from all over the country, but admission is in no way dependent upon class, race or wealth, or the lack of any of these.

The long line of principals, men of strong personality, may have prompted President Eliot of Harvard to characterize Exeter as "one of the most precious institutions of the country." Not the least of these was Harlan P. Amen, who, coming to the principalship after "a period of executive laxness," in his eighteen years of office, by strong and sympathetic leadership, brought Exeter again to her ancient standards. Dr. Perry, elected principal in 1914, was previously a master at Lawrenceville School and a professor at Williams College. To him in large part is due the recent great development in material plant and endowment through his close contact with the alumni in all parts of the country. The munificent Harkness gift, received in 1930, has enabled Principal Perry to inaugurate a system of class instruction in small groups and conferences limited to ten or twelve. In 1934, the last remains of the old country academy idea of boarding round disappeared and, as at Andover and most other schools, a flat rate was made covering all charges. An unusual number of scholarships makes it possible for Exeter to enroll boys of good scholastic standing who are unable to pay the full rate.

Miss Bailey, principal since 1912 and in 1929 made a trustee of her college, Wellesley, has impressed the stamp of her own personality on the school and on its life. Undiverted by passing fashions, maintaining the even tenor of its traditions—neither exclusively college preparatory nor a junior college—the school offers diverse interests to the girl of preparatory school age. Abbot is proud of its college preparation but even more of its alumnæ and the work that they have done and are doing in the home, the community and the world. At present nearly every state in the union is represented, though more than half the girls come from New England. Daughters, granddaughters, and great-granddaughters of loyal alumnæ turn to Abbot for their schooling. See page 875.

Phillips Academy is the oldest of the great national schools which have become such distinctive features in American education. Its founder, Samuel Phillips, and its first head master, Eliphalet Pearson, were both students at Dummer and classmates at Harvard College, graduating in the class of 1771. In 1778 Samuel Phillips, together with his father and his uncle John, deeded both land and money for the purpose of founding the school. According to this document, the donors proposed "to lay the foundation of a public free SCHOOL OR ACADEMY for the purpose of instructing Youth, not only in English and Latin Grammar, Writing, Arithmetic and those Sciences wherein they are commonly taught, but more especially to learn them the great end and real business of living." Further on, "it is again declared that the first and principal object of this Institution is the promotion of true piety and virtue."

Andover was doubtless chosen as the site because it was the old home of the family, as the father of the two brothers had been a former master of the Grammar School at Andover. The school opened in the midst of the Revolution and in 1780 was incorporated with the title of Phillips Academy, the first chartered academy in New England. Among its early patrons were Washingtons and Lees from Virginia, as well as Lowells and Quincys from Massachusetts. The national appeal has continued and forty-one states and eight countries are represented in the current catalog.

Eliphalet Pearson, the first principal, was a man of great force and versatility and of commanding presence who held his pupils well in awe and was known to the boys as "Elephant" Pearson. He afterward became professor of Hebrew at Harvard and still later in the Theological Seminary at Andover.

There were twenty-three boys in the academy, when, in 1810, Dr. John Adams came to the master's throne. By 1817 the number had increased to a hundred, and during his twenty-three years Dr. Adams admitted 1119 pupils, nearly a fifth of whom became ministers.

Under Samuel H. Taylor, a man of picturesque and striking personality, head master from 1837 to 1871, the institution gradually took on its present character. After his death, however it declined in prestige until it was rejuvenated and brought in touch with modern methods of education by Dr. Cecil F. P. Bancroft, principal from 1874 to 1901.

The first head master to give his whole time to administration was Alfred E. Stearns, in office for thirty years from 1903, alumnus of the Theological Seminary and of Amherst, to whose tact, vision and energy the school and the plant of today are a monument.

In the early days no housing provision was made for the boys, but they were left to the mercies of the townspeople. Like Exeter, Andover from the first repudiated the "in loco parentis" theory of school life, but with the building of dormitories this tradition has become a memory. Each dormitory is in charge of a "house prof" who gives careful and regular supervision to his charges.

Andover perhaps more than Exeter long remained conservative, less influenced by the Unitarian movements which have stirred New England, and perhaps for that reason Andover early became primarily a preparatory school for more conservative Yale rather than Harvard, which soon came under more liberal influences. In its long career it has prepared more boys for Yale than any other school in the country. Democracy and simplicity have been its tone. Nearly two hundred boys each year receive some assistance in paying their expenses.

To the casual visitor Andover looks like a college. There is no study hall. The boys wander from their dormitory rooms across the campus to their recitations. Andover's archaeological museum, with its research workers, its art museums with special exhibits, add to the college flavor.

The old, primitive, austere life of Andover has given away in the last decade to a richer life as millions have been spent in enlarging and beautifying the plant. Part of these millions came through gifts secured by "Tom" Cochran, old alumnus, Morgan partner. The old Seminary and old Academy buildings have been remodeled, decapitated, moved about, and new and beautiful buildings from the drawing board of Charles A. Platt make an ensemble fittingly designated "the loveliest group of buildings in America."

More than twenty thousand boys have graduated from the school, about sixty per cent of whom have gone to Yale and perhaps twenty per cent to Harvard. Its more than nine thousand loyal living alumni are organized in numerous associations throughout the country. The continued interest of the Andover alumni through the years has brought to the school increased endowments and gifts.

Mr. Fuess was appointed after Mr. Stearns' resignation early in 1933. Like his predecessor, Mr. Fuess is a graduate of Amherst. He has been instructor of English at Andover since 1908, secretary of the alumni fund, editor of the alumni magazine, secretary for information and, at intervals in his academic career, executive of numerous patriotic and civic organizations. He is official historian of Andover, has published a score of books, and is a specialist in New England biographies. From the first he has boldly established new policies, strengthened the bonds with the alumni through frequent visits and numerous addresses all over the country, and has displayed versatility, keen sense of humor, tact and skill. He has set as one of his purposes to teach the boy in the new deal "how to adjust himself to his environment and to remold it to his heart's desire." See page 813.

BOSTON, MASS. Pop 748,060 (1920) 781,188 (1930).

A city of individuality and local flavor, Boston often reminds visitors of old English towns, even the one for which it is named. It is one of the world's choicest places of residence though its climate is harsh, its people snobbish, its government corrupt.

Many claim it as home who have no vote, for most prominent Bostonians live outside its confines and anyone who lives within fifty miles may announce himself as from Boston. The aristocrats of Boston all left with Lord Howe. The old Boston families of today are for the most part derived from the rabble of smugglers and privateersmen who poured in as the Tories left with the British fleet. Most pride themselves on their conservatism, for the more radical Bostonians, in life derided and mobbed, are now enshrined in bronze or native granite.

A surprising number of good things originated here—shoe-making, etherizing, Christian Science. Boston has been a hotbed for new ideas, new religions, new institutions—educational and social. Its lists of 'firsts' in the past tense rank high. And new ideas still germinate in this fertile soil though many Bostonians have moved away to leaven newer and rawer communities.

Though Boston has been described as a state of mind, the Boston puritans of today came from Ireland within a century and their moral censures come from the mouths of the Catholic hierarchy. Only to outside vulgarians it is the home of the bean. Bostonians don't know beans, frijoles. All they know is the California pea bean cooked in one particular way. No longer is it the home of the cod. And the Cabots are mostly queer people, and the Lowells know not God.

The city has long been the stronghold of trustee estates of the third and fourth generations, managed by cultured aristocrats whose skin grows close to the bone, whose chief interest has been to keep the return on their capital unfluctuating. And to insure necessary concessions, they have relegated power to financial and political gangsters who in turn have sought their reward from the underworld. From such soil has sprung the Curley dictatorship which emulates some of the best features, for the people, of Tammany and Huey Long while providing ample reward for its supporters.

Set in a basin of hills about a beautiful harbor, the city is within easy reach of some of the loveliest of the New England countryside. But it has turned its back on its island-studded harbor to face the Back Bay and the West whose railroads and mines it has exploited to the enrichment of its families. Except for Beacon Hill, the city has never improved its points of vantage. Its heights remain uncrowned, its waterfront misused. The golden dome on Beacon Hill, the hub-cap of the universe, long looked down on the greatest educational center and student population, and until the dawn of the twentieth century, on the literary center of the country. The higher institutions of learning include, in Boston, Boston University (Methodist), Boston College (Catholic), and Simmons College. Across the Charles are the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Harvard, and Radcliffe. On the outer fringes are Tufts and Wellesley. These with the professional and vocational schools enroll some 30,000 students.

The private schools, patronized by upper middle class families are in Back Bay and the Fenway. As the wealthier Bostonians live mostly outside the city, Brookline, the Newtons, Milton, Dedham, Cambridge, Weston, Waltham and Concord, all have their private schools, separately treated.

Roxbury Latin School is the oldest endowed secondary school in the United States. Nine years after the establishment of Harvard College, and only fifteen years after the founding of Boston, it began to prepare boys for Harvard and has continued its work without interruption. It resulted largely from the influential efforts of John Eliot, the "Apostle to the Indians," who when minister of the First Church of Roxbury, together with other inhabitants of the town, signed a statement that they, "in consideration of their religious care of posterity, have taken into consideration how necessary the education of their children in literature will be, to fit them for public service, both in Church and Commonwealth, in succeeding ages. They, therefore, unanimously have consented and agreed to erect a free school in the said Town of Roxbury."

"The Free Schoole in Roxburie," as it was called, was not then free in the sense of being supported by uniform taxation or free from all tuition fees. But today the school is free to twenty boys in each entering class who live within the limits of the original town of Roxbury. In 1671 Thomas Bell, formerly a freeman of Roxbury, died in London, willing two hundred acres of Roxbury lands to the school and naming the Rev John Eliot and two other officers of the First Church as trustees of the endowment.

Cotton Mather, half a century later, wrote of the school, "Roxbury could not live quietly without a free school in the Town and the Issue has been one which has almost made me put the Title of Schola Illustris upon that little Nursery, that is, that Roxbury has afforded more Scholars, first for the College, and then for the Publick, than any Town of its Bigness, or if I mistake not, of twice its Bigness, in all New England."

The school has always been intimately associated with Harvard, fitting most of its pupils for the higher work there. College preparation in Colonial days was a matter of intensive education. The regulations for admission were thus stated: "When any Scholar is able to understand Tully, or such like classical Latine Author ex tempore, and make and speake true Latine in Verse and Prose, suo ut aunt Marte, and decline perfectly the Paradigm's of Nounes and Verbes in the Greek tongue. Let him then and not before be capable of admission into the College."

William C. Collar, for more than half a century connected with the school, in his long career attained a national position in the educational world. Appointed a master in 1857 and head master in 1867, he resigned in 1907 and died in 1916. D. O. S. Lowell, a graduate of Bowdoin, became a master in the school in 1884 and was head master from 1909 to his retirement in June, 1921. Daniel V. Thompson, who came from Lawrenceville as his successor, maintained the high scholastic standards. It was in his regime that the school moved to its present site. During the interregnum following his death in 1932, the trustees combed the country for his successor, turned down hundreds of candidates, among them an alumnus who was immediately thereafter elected president of Harvard, and chose Mr. Northrop, once head of Brearley and more recently of Chicago Latin SCHOOL OF DESIGN AND INTERIOR DECORATION, 739

The oldest institution in New England for the higher education of women, Bradford Academy was established by the parishioners of the Congregational Church of the town of Bradford and until 1836 was coeducational. The school has been fortunate throughout its history in having on its board of trustees men and women of unusual capacity and devotion to the interests of Bradford. Alice Freeman Palmer long took active interest. The unusual advantages of Bradford early drew students from all over New England, but for many decades the patronage has been national. During the century and more of its existence over nine thousand students have attended the school. The strong personality of Laura A. Knott, principal from 1901 to 1918, was long stamped on the life and work of the school. With Marion Coats, principal from 1918 to 1927, the great impetus toward the graduate courses began, culminating under Dr. Denworth in 1930 in the acceptance of Bradford as a junior college member of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Dr. Denworth was formerly principal of Friends High School, Moorestown, N. J., and head mistress of Stevens School, Germantown, Pa. Especially trained, she brought to her task zeal, ambition and marked personality. While under her able scholastic and financial administration standards of scholarship have been raised and the faculty strengthened, a very human attitude prevails. In 1934 the preparatory grades were discontinued and all effort concentrated on two years of college work. See page 926.

This famous school has three well equipped departments in a new plant, supervises the Beaver School in Boston, and has recently inaugurated a department for training apprentice teachers, many of them recent college graduates. Organized and incorporated as a coeducational day school by liberal minded parents who wished to bring to Boston the more progressive educational methods, since 1931 the enrollment has been limited to girls. Dr Smith, who had successfully developed the Park School, Baltimore, has been in charge of Beaver since the beginning. The school has been extraordinarily successful, and has added constantly to its activities and the development of the school plant. Unique are the courses in instrumental and vocal music for which school credit is given, the opportunities for instruction in the decorative arts and sciences, and the kitchens in which girls are given experience under home conditions. Among the many features unusual in secondary school plants are a completely equipped theatre and beautiful art and library quarters. See page 881.

Literary shrine and mecca of the patriotic, Concord as the home of Hawthorne, Emerson, Thoreau and the Alcotts has the significance in American literature of Stratford in England or Weimar in Germany. Here was fired the "shot heard round the world." Here Surette puts to revolutionary esthetic use an old theological steepled structure. And here Thoreau in jail wrote his "Civil Disobedience" which through Tolstoi and Ghandi has shaken the foundations of the world's two greatest empires.

But its schools of today are in no way revolutionary. Concord Academy occupies the former Samuel Hoar estate and the adjacent property on Main Street. The Fenn School is on Monument Street, about a half mile from the bridge. The Surette Summer School of Music is held in the parish rooms of the historic First Church on Lexington Road. Three miles from the center of the town are the brick Colonial buildings and spacious grounds of Middlesex School.

When Samuel Williston, wealthy manufacturer of the town, established and endowed this academy and equipped lecture rooms and laboratories, his placing of English and scientific courses on the same plane as the classical was a radical departure. Under Josiah Clark, principal from 1849 to 1863, the standards of instruction in ancient classics were established. Under Marshall Henshaw (1863-76), Mr Williston's ideal of a school in which science, mathematics and English should be held in equal honor and pursued with equal thoroughness as the ancient classics, was realized. Of the ten thousand who have attended the school during its long existence, more than a third have entered some thirty colleges and universities, a fifth, the learned professions. Seven of its teachers have become college presidents; seventeen, college professors, nine, principals of other schools. Dr Joseph Sawyer, connected for half a century with Williston, resigned in 1919 because of failing health. Mr. Galbraith, for nearly twenty years master at Middlesex School, has been principal since 1919 and has succeeded in broadening the school's appeal, modernizing its outlook, and bringing its standards up to those of the best college preparatory schools.

WILLISTON JUNIOR SCHOOL, presided over by Robert B Cunningham, has been maintained as a separate unit since 1916. It has its own houses for thirty boys in grades five to eight and its own faculty of six. The tuition is $850. The majority of the boys enter the senior school. See page 827.

The completion of the first fifty years of Groton was marked by the publication of a monumental volume of recollections, "Fifty Years On," by Frank Davis Ashburn, an old boy and former master, now head of Brooks School. In a reminiscent way he paints on a large canvas a vivid, truthful, critical picture of a man, a true New England worthy of the type and class of President Eliot, an aristocratic soul who in a democratic spirit has built an institution, the embodiment of his own uncompromising personality, in which acolytes serve and disciples worship and which has brought nurture, intellectual pap and a spirit of aristocratic democracy to the leading families and the socially ambitious of New York.

Groton is the result of this strong personality that gathered about him worthy satellites at a time when economic factors had created a need. The further accumulation of wealth and the development of social planes which had led to the founding of St Paul's and St Mark's resulted in the establishment of Groton in 1884 by Dr Peabody of the Salem Peabodys, long prominent in the mercantile and philanthropic life of the country. He was an all round athlete, a scholar, and yet a very graceful and sophisticated man of the world, according to Arthur Ruhl. But in his first charge in the raw west, Tombstone, Arizona, he had demonstrated even to cowboys and gamblers that he was a stalwart, full-blooded man.

Groton began with a small number of pupils secured through advertising in the papers, but through a natural inheritance, from friend to friend, rather than from conscious effort on Dr. Peabody's part, it has attained the highest social prestige. So long is the waiting list that as an old graduate expressed it, "A Groton man wires to Dr Peabody as soon as his son is born. Others generally think a letter is quick enough."

Although originally English in its inspiration and atmosphere, Groton is one of the most remarkable and successful institutions in American education today. It was established with the same earnestness and sincerity of purpose as was any foundation of Puritan times. From every American point of view it is exotic, but it is sincere and its sincerity commands not only the devotion of its masters and the loyalty of its alumni, but the respect of those least in sympathy with its ideals. Groton from the first attempted to steer a course between the "in loco parentis" plan of St. Paul's and the larger freedom of Andover and Exeter. A modification of the monitorial system which for twenty years had been in successful use at St. Mark's was adopted at Groton and has from the first proved successful, but at Groton the boys are called prefects. A head prefect and six prefects are appointed annually from the upper form. They exercise a considerable measure of influence in the student body, which develops responsibility in the holders of these offices and lessens the load of the masters. The boys at Groton do not have separate rooms, all except the prefects live in cubicles. The system that is followed at St. Paul's and St. Mark's for the younger boys is here continued through all forms, and Groton's system in this respect has been copied in some other church schools. Two upper forms are provided with studies and the lower forms study at desks in large schoolrooms. The relations between master and pupil at Groton are particularly intimate in all branches of school activity. Boys for admission are selected in order from lists on which they are registered at birth. But of recent years eight scholarship boys have been admitted annually on competitive examination without reference to their previous environment. The course, too, has been enriched by the introduction of new activities—science in all forms, music, drawing, and some manual training including woodworking and printing.

Rogers Hall was founded by Elizabeth Rogers, who in her lifetime gave her family mansion to the school, and on her death in 1898 endowed it with her entire property. Mrs. Eliza Parker Underhill created the school and her sister, Olive Sewall Parsons, who succeeded her after eighteen years, developed it until it attained national patronage. Mrs McGay, a former teacher, returned to Rogers Hall as dean in 1930 and assumed complete control in 1932 when Miss Parsons retired. She has brought wholesome vigor and a modern spirit, maintaining the sound old traditions. See page 879.

This college preparatory school, in new and attractive buildings, makes use of the virile New England tradition of the sea. Founded with money derived from whaling, it was a moribund coeducational academy when Mr. Lillard, former assistant to the head at Andover, took charge in 1916. Today nationally known, Tabor makes use of its ideal location by shop work, boat building, frequent cruises in the school yacht, Easter cruises to the West Indies and summer vacation trips to Central America and Europe. Mr. Lillard has been largely responsible for the project of cooperating with the Ecole du Montcel, near Versailles, in sending American boys to France each year and in offering scholarships permitting French students to take similar courses at schools in this country. Summer term exchanges are arranged with schools in England, France and Germany under Mr. Lillard's personal direction. In addition, a summer term at Marion is open to boys from other schools as well as to Tabor boys. See page 826.

Proximity to the Blue Hills and the sea has made Milton a favored residential town since Colonial days. The prosperous merchants of a century ago—Saltonstalls, Hallowells, Forbeses, Wolcotts—here established their homes and these families have fostered the educational institutions of the town. More recently Milton has become a residential mecca for other families who wish to share in its social prestige and educational advantages. The buildings and grounds of Milton Academy, the Town Hall and Milton Churches make an attractive group. The Brush Hill section serves Readville and Hyde Park.

One of the leading college preparatory schools of social standing, Milton is more of a community school than most of its type. It draws the greater proportion of its students from local families, but to relieve the local flavor makes special effort to recruit boys from far afield and now over half its residents come from outside Massachusetts. Contacts of boarders with Milton homes and weekend privileges are encouraged. The Explorer's Club brings old and young together. Although the Harvard tradition is strong, the school definitely encourages boys who wish to enter other colleges.

As early as 1798 steps were taken to establish a local academy which finally opened in 1807 and was conducted interruptedly until 1866 when, on the establishment of a town high school, it was closed. The academy, reopened in 1885 on a new site, was coeducational until 1901. Under Harrison Otis Apthorp the school first won national prominence which receded under Principal Cobb. But since Mr. Field, a naturalist and entomologist of scientific training, took over the school in 1914, its progress has been upwards.

Shirley Kerns, the founder, once a master at Gilman and Middlesex Schools, was directly inspired by the success of the former and this may be regarded as the first New England school on the Baltimore plan. Inaugurated under the best of social auspices the school was a success from the start, but credit must be ascribed to the kindly, pervasive personality of Mr. Kerns, on whose resignation in 1935 Mr Chase was appointed. The course of study is as broad as its college preparatory functions permit. The school has made a good record on college entrance examinations, preparing largely for Harvard.

Mr. Moody's purpose in establishing this school was to make thorough secondary schooling available for the poor boys of that time. In the early years daily work on the farm or in the buildings was required. Today each boy works ten hours a week. The school has from the first afforded abundant opportunity for a boy to secure an education or preparation for college. The founder's rigorous ideals and ideas of life and training for the guidance of youth continued under Dr. Henry Franklin Cutler, principal from 1890 to 1932. He was succeeded by Elliott Speer, a man of liberal religious views, who had been president of The Northfield Schools since 1926. The policies he inaugurated did not meet with the approval of the more conservative fundamentalists, and many believe that this accounted for his spectacular assassination in the early fall of 1934. Dean Thomas E. Elder, who had hoped to succeed him, resigned shortly after the prolonged inquest. Mr. Porter, who had long been active in the larger work of the Y M C A, and whom Mr. Speer brought to the school in 1934 to head the bible department, was made head master early in 1935. Founded by Joseph Burnett, a Boston merchant and manufacturer, inspired by the success of St Paul's and by the desire to have a similar school in his native town of Southborough, members of the Burnett family have continued on the administrative board of St Mark's, watchful of its interests. Assured of prestige from the first, it developed steadily in strength and efficiency under the capable management of William E Peck, head master from 1882 until 1894. It is a church school of the parental type, with all its activities confined to one large building. The boys of the three lower forms do not have separate rooms but occupy dormitories with windowed alcoves.

Though the general policy was modeled after that of St. Paul's, one notable innovation in American school boy life was introduced which has proved a valuable contribution and has been extensively adopted by private schools since established. A modification of the English "Lancastrian Monitorial System" which had its origin in England early in the nineteenth century was adapted to American conditions. From its opening St. Mark's has had its present system of monitors, six or seven boys chosen from the sixth form who "are the representatives of the school, have certain duties and a general oversight of the life of the boys. They are supposed to stand for the school ideals and to exert their influence and leadership."

Under the late Rev Dr William G Thayer, head master from 1894 until 1930, the ideals of the school were zealously maintained. The life remained intimate, proscribed; admission rigidly restricted. With Dr Thayer's retirement on the sixty-fifth anniversary of the school, the alumni established a quarter million Rev and Mrs. Thayer Fund. Dr Parkman, an old St. Mark's boy, was appointed head master after six years of business and five years in graduate study and administrative work at Harvard. He brought to the school a new alertness and straightforwardness and, introducing new activities, is gradually enriching the curriculum. A third of the available places each year are now reserved for admission by competitive examination. So it is no longer true that only sons and nephews of old boys are enrolled.

William Dummer, Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts, in 1761 bequeathed his house and farm at Byfield for the establishment of a grammar school. Two years later this academy was opened under the celebrated Samuel Moody, who had graduated from Harvard College in 1746. Mr Moody made it a grammar school of the older type, and prepared for Harvard many boys who became prominent in the life of the nation, including the founder and first master of Andover. It was always a democratic school accepting boys from all classes. After years of decadence it was revived by Dr Charles S. Ingham, head master from 1907 until his resignation in 1930. Mr Eames, young, alert, inspired by Boyden at Deerfield, with educational experience in Buffalo and Deerfield, and educational backgrounds of Amherst and Harvard, brought new life to the school, refurbished its name, plant, equipment, improved the quality of the student body, cut off the lower school; raised the standards and the price. Boys are encouraged in taking initiative and have undertaken large projects for the improvement of the school. In a few years Mr. Eames has put his name among the great head masters. See page 822.

Founded by Julia A. and Sarah P. Eastman with the cooperation of Wellesley College as a preparatory school for that institution, these schools have been under the exceptionally strong management of Miss Cooke since 1899. To her administrative ability is due the fact that Dana Hall has become one of the leading secondary schools in the country. Miss Cooke is a woman of remarkable personality, clear-sightedness and executive capacity, with the highest ideals of womanhood. She makes a strong appeal to girls and her influence upon them is inspiring and lasting. The heads of departments in all three schools are women of unusual capacity and enthusiasm.

Offering preparation for college or technology, Worcester has long occupied a middle ground between the large academies and the smaller preparatory schools and has some of the characteristics of both. Dr. D. W. Abercrombie, during the thirty-six years of his administration from 1882, made a great boys school from a coeducational Baptist academy. In 1918 Samuel Foss Holmes, long on the faculty, was made head master and George Dudley Church, registrar. They brought the scholarship and personnel to higher standards but because of the financial situation were forced out in 1933 when Mr. Wade, for some years in charge of alumni relations, was made head master and Charles L. Stevens, director of admissions.

This luxuriously equipped private boarding school is under the control of Bishop James De Wolf Perry. It was founded by the Rev. John B. Diman who later established Portsmouth Priory School During the administration of Stephen P. Cabot, a master in the school from 1901, and head master from 1917, the school went through a period of great material growth. The alumni took an increasing interest in the school, evidenced by St. George's Clubs at the three great universities to which the majority of the boys go. Mr Cabot "ultimately resigned on religious grounds" in 1926, according to Barklie Henry, "an old graduate, hoary at thirty-one," in an article on St. George's in Town and Country. He emphasizes the beauty of the setting, the matchlessness of the architecture, and the dominance of Bishop Perry. Mr. Merrick, for thirteen years a master at St. Paul's School, was elected head master in 1928 Interested in athletics, popular with his boys, he has won the support of influential church people.

Centering around the personality of Sarah Porter, a sister of President Porter of Yale, Miss Porter's School began in a small way This remarkable woman gave her whole life to the school up to the time of her death in 1900 at the age of eighty-seven Her fame as a teacher, as it became more widely appreciated, drew to her increasing numbers from which she selected the best material "Her impress upon her long line of pupils was the result of her own unusual character. She gave to hundreds of the best born women of the land that poise and stability of character, that combination of learning and good manners, which is a mark of the noblest American womanhood" On Miss Porter's death her nephew, Robert Porter Keep, became trustee of the school, and after his death it continued under the able administration of Mrs Keep, who had herself been a pupil of Miss Porter. Mrs. Keep died in the spring of 1917 Under her son, for many years an instructor at Andover, and his wife, the school endeavors to maintain as nearly as possible the best spirit of the nineteenth century as is indicated by the emphasis in the annual circular on 'no electrical devices,' 'no teeth

Now a day school for girls, Greenwich Academy was coeducational for the first eighty years of its existence. Under Mrs. Campbell, who came to the school in 1925 as head mistress, the academy was reorganized on a country day school basis. Efficient college preparation is supplemented by broad general courses, and throughout the curriculum emphasis is given creative work in English and the arts. Girls in the junior and senior years may arrange for residence. See page 882.

An atmosphere of dignity and repose, of spaciousness and beauty, distinguishes Rosemary. The intellectual and physical life of the school is robust and well supervised. With its classical terminology, its stress of walking or "bounding," naturally there are many things that suggest the English girls school. Uniforms for day and evening are obligatory. Exclusively college preparatory, Rosemary was founded by Dr Ruutz-Rees in Wallingford and for ten years conducted there. Of English birth and education, Dr Ruutz-Rees has degrees from St Andrew's as well as Columbia. Since 1883 she has lived in this country, of which she is a naturalized citizen. Dr Lowndes had been long associated with her and was made head mistress in 1911. To receive the school diploma a pupil must have passed examinations qualifying for Bryn Mawr, Vassar, Smith and other colleges. Rosemary Lower School, with a large country day enrollment under the direction of Ellen W Steele, B.S., Teachers College, holds to the ideals of the progressive education movement. See page 886.

Hartford wears an air of complacent repose, but the vigor of its life pulsates in new extensions to the north and west and blossoms periodically in a beautiful bridge or a notable building. The model and inspirer of many cities that have improved upon it, the capital of the state is on the Connecticut river fifty miles from Long Island Sound. Civic pride early resulted in a system of well laid out parks and substantial public buildings. Here are the home offices of many of the large national insurance companies, so every fire alarm is heard in Hartford and every obituary brings tears to the eyes of its leading citizens. When Mark Twain, Harriet Beecher Stowe and Charles Dudley Warner lived here, Hartford well maintained literary pretensions. Trinity College, started patriotically as Washington College in 1823, became Episcopal under its present name in 1845. At West Hartford, a residential suburb, is Kingswood.

Kent, which has become one of the great schools of the country, is the creation of Father Sill's own remarkable personality. Begun in a farm house, simplicity of life, self reliance and directness of purpose have always dominated. Much of the community work is done by the boys, and this so called "self-help" plan has been widely copied by other schools, impressed by a system which enables a school to be run with small expense for servants. The religious life is actual and sincere. The school activities and outdoor life are varied. Its crews, accompanied every three years to England by Father Sill, have recently brought renown to Kent. The pressure on Father Sill for admission has become onerous although the enrollment has been increased to nearly three hundred. A lusty offshoot has been established at South Kent, and scores of boys are yearly directed to other schools. Only the superior and earnest boy should seek admission. A six weeks summer session enrolls forty boys, some from Kent, many from other schools.

Founded by Mrs. Maria H. Hotchkiss with a gift of $350,000, the school has from the first been intimately associated with Yale. Edward G. Coy, the first head master, a graduate of Yale, had served at the old Phillips Academy in Andover and brought with him to the newly founded school much of the atmosphere of Andover and even its terminology, still preserved in the catalog in such class titles as upper and lower middle. The trustees, too, have usually been Yale men and Frederick S. Jones, president today, was for years Dean of Yale College. The graduates have generally shown preference for Yale, though in recent years the number entering other colleges has greatly increased and now a large delegation is sent yearly to Princeton and many enter Williams and Harvard, and a few Amherst, Cornell and midwestern universities. It was Dr. Huber Gray Buehler, affectionately known as "The King" who gave the school its present sturdy character. Each year the King declared "there is only one rule in this school, Be a gentleman!" and the implications of this one rule cast a shade of responsibility over the previously unruffled brows of those lads from homes of wealth where pleasure dominated. Under Dr. Buehler's direction Hotchkiss became recognized as one of the foremost preparatory schools of the country. The life was one of tension and strenuousness, high striving and keen competition. The names of the head boys posted so conspicuously for the emulation of others were often chosen from the thirty or more scholarship boys who waited on table and who had been selected because of their superior intellect. In an ardent attempt at democracy these scholarship lads were sometimes laden with honors while they performed their humble tasks. Self discipline and self restraint under the watchful eye of the masters make unnecessary any prefect system with its detailed and irritating supervision. In the past thirty years over two thousand pupils have been enrolled, about half of whom have come from New York and Connecticut. Mr. Van Santvoord, appointed head master in 1926, a Hotchkiss boy, a Rhodes scholar, came to the school from a professorship in the University of Buffalo. He has brought an atmosphere of academic reserve and there has been some relaxation in the seriousness with which the academic and athletic life was once followed.

Trained in Miss Porter's School and from 1891 for eighteen years head mistress of St. Margaret's in an adjoining town, on her establishment of Westover she took many of the students with her. She permeated the atmosphere with her own 'spirit of religion' and was successful in appealing to families of wealth who were attracted by the fostered reputation for exclusiveness. Miss Dillingham, head mistress since Miss Hillard's death in 1932 at the age of seventy, has done away with much of the formality and pomp. Her interests, academic and intellectual, are reflected in the change of emphasis, a third of the girls now preparing for college. MILFORD, CONN. Alt 64 ft. Pop 10,193 (1920) 12,660 (1930).

As a modern country day school this famous institution celebrates its 275th anniversary in 1935. Established on the Hopkins bequest, for the first fifty years the school sent its graduates on to Harvard. Since Yale came into existence it has naturally prepared chiefly for that institution and more than twelve hundred of its alumni have been graduated from there. Beginning with Abraham Pierson, the first president of Yale, a Hopkins graduate of 1664, the school has given Yale sixty-one professors and instructors, six treasurers, twelve fellows, and five deans. From 1795 to 1921 every president of Yale was associated with Hopkins either as graduate, rector, or trustee. Dr. Lovell took charge in 1916 and ten years later the school was moved from its crowded down-town site to attractive buildings in the country. See page 834.

Differing in type from both the academy and the high school, between which it is historically a connecting link, this academy was planned as early as 1846 and incorporated in 1854. The movement to establish a free academy met with great opposition, for many at this time opposed free education beyond the elementary schools. The orators of the day, including Daniel Webster, were enlisted, and the agitation which resulted did much to further the development of the high school system, but in Norwich no high school was established. Though amply endowed, the Free Academy makes a nominal charge to residents of the town and exacts a low tuition from non-residents. The school was early influenced by the Putnam School of Newburyport, no longer existing. Mr. Tirrell has been principal since 1903.

Pomfret was founded by William E. Peck, one of the great schoolmasters of the country, who, after twelve years as head master of St. Mark's, resigned to establish this school to more fully carry out his own ideals. William Beach Olmsted, his successor, worked unselfishly and joyously to secure the interest of people of wealth and social prominence, and created for the school a beautiful setting. He passed with the old order in 1929 and was succeeded by Mr. Lefferts, educated at Taft and Yale. As a teacher at Thatcher School, California, he had acquired the westerner's receptiveness to new influences and new ideals Mr. Lefferts, an ardent democrat, does not believe in conformity to type but endeavors to conserve and develop in his boys originality and independent thinking He has created a new Pomfret See page 838.

With high standards of college preparatory work and less strenuous general courses, this school is patronized by families of wealth and social prominence. Miss Walker remained in direct charge until her marriage in 1921 when she turned the school over for a year to her assistant, Mrs Andrews. In 1922, however, from her home in Hartford, she again took over the direction with Jessie Hewitt as resident head. The school has long had its own characteristic customs and terminology, 'sins,' 'punishments,' 'purgatory,' and 'heaven'. Much is made of outdoor life throughout the year. Posture and a good seat bring admiration, but the pride of the school is its stable of half a hundred horses. A system of self-government, an unusual degree of cooperation with the home, and thorough investigation of each girl before admission contribute to the school's success. Incendiary fires in 1933 destroyed the old wooden buildings which were promptly replaced by a modern fireproof plant.

Founded by William Lee Cushing, the inspiration of this school lay in the ancient Uppingham School in Rutland, England, established 1584, and it has the basic ideals of this older school. For thirty years Mr Cushing successfully conducted the school, and sent many graduates to Harvard, Williams, Cornell and other colleges, though Yale influence has naturally predominated. On Mr. Cushing's retirement in 1920 the headmastership was assumed by L G Pettee who was for many years a member of the faculty Mr McOrmond after fourteen years at Choate School purchased Westminster in 1922 and under his vigorous administration the school has been successful. George Dudley Church, for years registrar of Worcester Academy, joined the administrative staff in 1933 In 1934 the school was reincorporated under a board of trustees. See page 828.

One of the most prosperous and successful of the younger New England preparatory schools, since its establishment this has been dominated by the atmosphere and ideals of the best New England homes The Choate School has come into its fuller life during the able administration of Mr. St John, head master since 1908, whose enthusiasm, good judgment, ready sympathy, and discrimination have been ably supplemented by Mrs St John's personal interest in maintaining the friendly, intimate atmosphere that characterized the school in its earlier days. Although nearly all the courses of study are planned with college entrance in view, no rigid adherence to forms is insisted on and the student may take subjects chosen from different forms to suit his own needs. Interest in the individual boy and the purpose to give him what he as an individual needs is the ideal that Mr St John holds up to his unusual corps of masters. The flexible system of forms, separate divisions for honor students; special opportunities in art, music and literature, orthopedic and physical examinations with an individual corrective and athletic program for each boy, and a close personal relationship between the school, the boy and his family help to accomplish this ideal. Effort is made to stimulate intellectual interests and to widen the mental horizon. See page 836.

The spirit of this diocesan school is in large part due to Miss Edell, whose modest but pervasive personality is particularly attractive to the conservative patrons. Emphasis is laid on preparation for the leading colleges to which the school sends about half its graduates. But to the girls preparing for college as well as those taking the broad general course, much extra curricular work is available in drama, art, and especially music. See page 883.

The Taft School is the expression of the personality of the founder and head master, a brother of the late president and chief justice. Although he began life as a lawyer, teaching was evidently his foreordained vocation for we find him back at Yale, a tutor in Latin from '87 to '90. Dr Taft has proved himself a great head master. Himself a tremendous worker, he may be said to inspire his boys with industry rather than to exact it of them. There is no salvation for a boy at Taft except by hard work, and any boy who survives the course of several years at The Taft School is sure to have a well trained mind. Dr Taft sympathizes with the life of the boys on the playground as well as in the schoolroom and at once wins their comradeship and confidence by his geniality and large-heartedness. A judicious amount of freedom is a part of his discipline in order that a boy's school life may properly grade into the greater freedom of after life. The boys come from the substantial families throughout the country—about half from Connecticut and New York, and many from the middle west—and are thoroughly prepared for all colleges though nearby Yale casts its shadow. The school is incorporated as a non-profit making corporation controlled by a self perpetuating board of trustees to whom Dr Taft has given the school unconditionally. Through his lifetime of devotion, Dr. Taft has endowed the school with his high ideals of work and scholarship. See page 837.

This school had its origin in 1874 when five of the Loomis family drew up a charter and incorporated a school on what had been since 1639 the Loomis homestead. By 1912 accumulated funds of over two millions were available. Mr Batchelder, previously at Hackley and Hotchkiss, was appointed head master at that time. The school was opened by him in 1914 and has continued under his guiding hand, following the best traditions of New England preparatory schools. The student body represents a democratic cross section of society, with a generous proportion of sons of ministers, doctors, educators, and other professional men. About half the boys take the academic course. The other half are distributed between scientific and business courses. For boys who may be interested, agricultural training is available. Pupils share in the useful labor of the school, caring for their own rooms, the classrooms and the school grounds and athletic fields. The endowment makes possible a low rate of tuition and there are a number of scholarships. The student council plans and supervises student activities, affording a measure of self-government which cultivates a sense of responsibility. The original charter provided for girls and in 1927 two houses were purchased across the river for the Chaffee School, named in honor of the mother of the founder Mrs. Batchelder, who was Evelyn Longman, a sculptor of genius and renown, maintains her studio on the campus, not without beneficial influence on the boys. There is about the school evidence of an awareness of things of beauty and things doing in the world. See page 832.

Occupying a strategic position at the junction of the Mohawk and Hudson rivers, the city is dominated by the massive state capitol building on Capitol Hill, beside which rises pretentiously the State Education building. Once a notable seat of the old time Dutch patroon aristocracy, Albany is now an educational center with its New York State College for Teachers, Law School, Medical College, and College of Pharmacy directly in the city, while at Troy some six miles up the river are other important educational institutions. Of the three well known private schools in Albany, the Academy for Girls is still in the old downtown district. The million dollar building of the Academy for Boys in the New Scotland Avenue section has been occupied since 1931. On a high plateau north of the city, in Loudonville, St. Agnes is housed in a new modern plant.

Exclusively college preparatory, this school sends ninety-five per cent of its graduates on to college. It is one of the few surviving old-fashioned academies, and a cadet battalion organized in 1870 is still continued. The school has always served the old families of the city, but the heavy patroon hand has been lifted and today the school plant is on a par with those of the best country day schools. Dr McCormick, a master since 1912, has fully maintained the standards impressed on the school by Dr. Henry P. Warren, who at his death in 1919 had been head master for over thirty years.

This academy is conducted on a strict military basis and draws its candidates from all over the United States and Europe, but largely from New York. Bard Hall, the pre-academic department, is separately organized for boys under fourteen. Colonel Sebastian C Jones, superintendent for thirty years, was succeeded by General Davis, under whom the academy has become truly "a school of distinction" among institutions of its class.

Seclusion and altitude with accessibility to the great centers have made this college preparatory school notable. The outgrowth of the Cornwall Heights School founded by Dr Louis P. Ledoux, it was conducted from 1887 to 1912 by Dr Carlos H Stone as The Stone School. Alvan E Duerr succeeded him and in 1924 gave the school its present name. Three years later it was reorganized on a non-profit basis and turned over to a self perpetuating board of trustees. R. J Shortlidge, head master from this time until 1932, was succeeded by Mr Barker, trained at Lawrenceville. Young, enthusiastic, he sees that his boys have individual attention and fosters a friendly atmosphere. See page 840.

Long known for its specialized work in the arts and in vocational training for older girls, Bennett School today has added an efficient college preparatory department and a well organized junior college. The number of subpreparatory girls is small. May F. Bennett, the founder and principal for thirty-three years, was a natural leader of girls and a woman of sensitive and penetrating personality and genuine spiritual power. After her death in 1924, the school was incorporated, in accordance with her will, under Miss Carroll, who has the capable assistance in its administration of Mildred Purdy.

THE DEPARTMENT OF LIBERAL AND APPLIED ARTS has six sections offering two year courses—Academic, giving general and collegiate courses for which credit is granted by the leading colleges, Dramatic Art, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rann Kennedy (Edith Wynne Matthison); Fine Arts, drawing, painting, modeling, costume design, interior decoration; Music, piano, singing, violin, harmony, counterpoint, history of music, under the direction of Horace Middleton, Household Arts, cookery and household management or dressmaking and millinery, a Secretarial Course. In connection with the psychology work, a nursery school was started in 1932.

The financial capital of the world, this modern Babylon is still a mecca for those who have money to squander. The mad unceasing rush through its narrow canyons astounds the stranger from abroad. Behind the plate glass windows of Fifth Avenue is the loot of centuries from every land

Historically the City of Tammany, of Al Smith, Jimmy Walker, and Boss Tweed, of the Vanderastors, saved today from corruption and bankruptcy by Seabury, New York looks for its further salvation to La Guardia, a stumpy little Italian. Less than thirty per cent of the population is Jewish, though it is the greatest Jewish city in the world and one-third of all

American Semites live here New Yorkers include half a million Russians and nearly as many Italians The ethnic quotas in many cases exceed the population of the greatest cities of the countries from which they come

On Morningside Heights, the acropolis of the new world, more than 44,000 students resort to Columbia University and its affiliated institutions, Teachers and Barnard Colleges To the north the College of the City of New York has over 19,000, not all Jewish On University Heights, across the Harlem, New York University, famous for its Hall of Fame, enrolls 31,337 Fordham, near Bronx Park, has 8229 Catholic students.

The museums of Art, Natural History, Indian Ethnology, and things Hispanic, house matchless and rapidly growing collections The public library is notable for its architecture, its location, its collections, and its scores of branches The priceless collection of Morgan Library is in a building architecturally perfect

The professional and vocational schools lie generally to the south, between Central Park and 42d Street The private schools for boys are chiefly for day pupils while many of the girls schools provide residence for those from a distance who are attracted by the varied musical, dramatic, and other advantages of the metropolis Some schools lie west of Central Park including two or three of the oldest in the city But the more recently established schools that appeal to the socially elect are all to the east Two of these, Brearley and Chapin, have within a few years moved to that recently reclaimed and still somewhat raw, but very smart, region bordering on the East river

The late Maria B. Chapin established this school to provide a liberal education as well as courses in the social graces. The dignity of the old-fashioned school of the eighties has been retained, though the school today reflects the latest developments in educational technique. Since 1928 it has occupied its present building which Miss Chapin hoped would be a model for all other finishing schools. Mary C. Fairfax, connected with the school since 1911 and a partner since 1925, succeeded Miss Chapin in 1932. Her death occurred early in 1935, within a year of Miss Chapin's, and her will provided an old age fund for employees of the school. Miss Stringfellow, who came from Alabama, has a somewhat lighter touch, but the school continues to cater to the older families of New York, and especially those who have achieved power or wealth.

This oldest existing private secondary school in the United States celebrated its 300th anniversary in 1933. Its history runs back continuously to the early settlement by the Dutch of Manhattan. For two hundred and fifty years it was maintained as a parish day school, but in 1887 it became a grammar school for both boys and girls, with a fixed tuition fee, in 1891 preparatory, and after 1894, for boys only. Since 1934, a pre-primary grade for little boys and girls has been conducted. The school has moved progressively northward as the city has developed. Its standards of enrollment, clientele and scholarship have always been high. The school is administered by a board of trustees but is sponsored and controlled by the Consistory of the Collegiate Dutch Reformed Church. Mr Parkhill, a former master at Lawrence-Smith, succeeded Cornelius Boocock in 1934.

Today an independent institution, this was founded as a preparatory school to Columbia College, and like its namesake has moved progressively uptown as the city has grown. It rose to highest prominence in the middle of the nineteenth century under Dr Anthon, America's earliest classical scholar. At one time the majority of its graduates entered Columbia, but of recent years it has prepared for all the leading eastern colleges. An all day plan for supervised study and play was organized in 1930. The clientele is largely Jewish.

One of the first country day schools, Mr Hackett established Riverdale on grounds adjoining the vast open spaces of Van Cortlandt Park to capitalize the value of a country environment for city boys. College preparation has been emphasized from the first, but the curriculum has shown unusual breadth in music and more recently in art. Five day boarding arrangements are made for boys who live nearby, and day boys are transported in school buses from New York and Westchester. The entire plant, valued at over a million dollars, was turned over to a board of trustees in 1925 by Mr. Hackett, who continues as head master. An Adirondack camp for boys, maintained since 1912, was renamed Santanon in 1935.

RIVERDALE SCHOOL OF MUSIC, established in 1922, is affiliated but its enrollment is not confined to pupils in the other Riverdale schools. Richard McClanahan is director.

THE NEIGHBORHOOD SCHOOL, coeducational, enrolls children from four to nine years, under Cecile C. Baldwin.

THE COUNTRY DAY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, under Miriam Denness Cooper, A.B., Wells, A.M., Teachers College, offers courses similar to those in the boys school. See page 841.

A new era began for this school with its merger with Miss Chandor's in 1932 The school building overlooking Central Park is a monument to the administrative genius of Clara B Spence who founded and conducted the school for thirty years during which time she won the implicit confidence of her patrons and gave the school preeminent position among the day and boarding schools of New York Some of the country's foremost women, socially and nationally, were pupils of Miss Spence. Of late it has drawn students from all over the country The spring teas, the sewing class, characteristic in Miss Spence's day are passing. From her death in 1923 the school was under the direction of members of her staff until 1932 when Miss Chandor was asked to take charge Miss Chandor, who had built a school successful socially as well as scholastically, brings to this sound, old institution a personality and an intellectual interest that prove stimulating to students and alumnæ See page 888.

Founded by the "Venerable Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts," Trinity's self-contented conservatism is attributable not only to its hallowed past but to its successful investments in New York real estate. The school was endowed in 1796 and was maintained in connection with Trinity Parish until 1806, when the school was incorporated. Conducted at first in the tower of old Trinity Church as an elementary school, it has moved uptown with the progress of the residential district and has increased the range of instruction. In 1898 the corporation established a separate school for girls, St. Agatha. Four-fifths of the graduates yearly enter leading colleges.

BROOKLYN, N.Y. Alt 45 ft.

A huge city in itself, Brooklyn is the bedroom of New York City and its largest borough in area and population. It is a city of varied manufactures and is also the great middle class residential suburb of the metropolis with which it is connected by huge bridges, tunnels and ferries.

The private schools serve chiefly the local residents of the borough. On Brooklyn Heights, the old aristocratic section, is the Seminary of the same name. Two of the older schools, Packer and Friends, are in the vicinity of Borough Hall, and a mile east are Pratt Institute and Adelphi Academy. Overlooking Prospect Park Plaza are Berkeley Institute and the Ethical Culture School. Nearby is the Museum of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. To the east, in Flatbush, various local schools serve a residential section, once largely Dutch farmers' gardens. North, near the Children's Museum, is Froebel Academy. In Dyker Heights, along the southeast shore, Polytechnic Preparatory School and Shore Road Academy overlook The Narrows.

One of the few junior colleges recognized by the State of New York, Packer has for years been the leading secondary school for girls of Brooklyn. The scholastic standard is high in all departments. Throughout its long history the school has played an important part in local educational affairs. Named in honor of William S. Packer, whose widow gave money for the new building, it occupies the site of the Brooklyn Female Academy organized by public spirited citizens in 1845. Four principals have directed the policy of the school, Dr. Denbigh since 1918.

An outstanding country day school and one of the earliest established, this outgrowth of the preparatory department of Polytechnic Institute is directed by an ardent apostle of the country day movement, who was for seven years president of the Conference. More than half a million dollars went into the new school plant which is perhaps unequaled for its purpose. The memorial chapel, dedicated to the boys who lost their lives in the war, cost over $100,000; and $175,000 in 1930 went into a model gymnasium. Unlike many boys day schools, most "Poly" boys complete their preparation for college here. In the past five years nearly five hundred graduates have entered some score of colleges. See page 842.

The Stony Brook Assembly established this school to provide college preparation and to inculcate the principles of evangelical Christianity. During July and August the buildings and grounds are made use of for summer religious conferences. The faculty is chosen to the end that religion in the school may become neither pietism nor mere formalism. Three periods a week of Bible study are credited for college entrance. A "Morning Watch," the "Fellowship," and voluntary deputations of student speakers to churches give the boy an opportunity for spontaneous expression of his religious life. The Rev Dr John F Carson, former moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, was the founder and first president. On his death in 1927 he was succeeded by Hugh R. Monro. Dr Gaebelein's influence on the boys is traceable to the sincerity and forcefulness which he manifests in his evangelical writings. See page 846.

The school site and buildings bear witness to the appreciation of its patrons for Dr Frederick L Gamage who established Pawling and conducted it for over a score of years. The Cluett Foundation, which made possible the new buildings, was established by George B Cluett as a memorial to his son, a former pupil of Dr Gamage, who died while a student at Yale. In 1931 Dr Gamage, together with three instructors who owned part interest, turned over to a board of trustees the school and its plant valued at nearly a million. From 1932 his son, Frederick L Jr, was in full control as head master. On his resignation in 1935, the trustees appointed Mr Shortlidge, for many years associate head master at Choate School and more recently head master of Storm King and Tome Schools. See page 843.

Enrolling girls from conservative families all over the country and preparing most of them for college, this is a smoothly running institution, perfectly equipped, well organized and capably administered. The school was founded over a century ago at Middlebury, Vermont, by Emma Willard, a pioneer in the education of women. In 1819 an offer of financial assistance drew the school to New York and in 1821, on invitation, it came to Troy as the Troy Female Seminary. In the next fifty years of its existence more than fifteen thousand young women were enrolled, many of whom became teachers and spread the influence of the school far and wide. Among these Mrs Russell Sage, a member of the class of '48, was later a teacher in the school. In 1892 the school was reorganized under its present name. The architecturally beautiful home which the school has occupied since 1910 was the gift of Mrs Sage. Miss Kellas was president of both Russell Sage College and the Emma Willard School from 1916 to 1928, but now devotes her entire time to the school. See page 89r.

Lawrenceville is today one of the largest of the popular preparatory schools, and is national in its patronage. Though non-sectarian, the school has Presbyterian traditions, which, together with proximity, incline forty per cent of the students to choose Princeton as their university.

The Lawrenceville School, on the John C. Green Foundation, was chartered in 1881, a reorganization of an earlier school established by Isaac Brown, a Presbyterian clergyman. From 1839 to 1878 under the management of the Revs Samuel and Hugh Hamill, it prospered as the Lawrenceville Classical and Commercial High School and during that time enrolled 2500 pupils. John C. Green, one of the original pupils, amassed a fortune in the China trade, and having left it without restrictions, his executors determined upon the establishment of an endowed preparatory school for boys. They purchased the

Lawrenceville School and Dr James Cameron Mackenzie organized the new school in 1884

Dr Mackenzie introduced the English "house" system, then a novel feature in American schools, which has since been widely copied by other American private schools. The boys below the upper form live in houses presided over by a master and his wife, assisted by one or two unmarried masters. Every house is a home unit, and there are inter-house instead of inter-class contests in athletics. The effect of this system has been to preserve and foster individuality. In the "Upper House" for the fifth form, the discipline is largely in the hands of the boys, in order that they may the better prepare themselves for the greater freedom of college life.

During the regime of Rev Simon John McPherson from 1899 to 1919, Lawrenceville developed characteristic practices and customs similar to those of the great English public schools. The picturesque side of this life with its local vocabulary and time honored customs has been vividly depicted in the stories of Owen Johnson.

The trustees after a thorough canvass elected Mather A. Abbott head master on the death of Dr McPherson. A graduate of King's College, Nova Scotia, and of Worcester College, Oxford, England, he was a master in Groton from 1897 to 1916, and professor of Latin in Yale from 1916 to 1919. His broad vision, human sympathies, virile personality and courage won the enthusiastic support and confidence of faculty and alumni. Dr and Mrs Abbott both revealed their devotion to their work and to their boys through books which they severally published, "The Boy Today" and "Days from a Year in School."

Dr. Abbott's death in 1934 was a severe loss to the school which the trustees ably met by calling from Andover Mr. Heely, admirably equipped to carry on.

A system of health supervision in operation since 1922 has proved most effective as a preventive measure. In connection with it an infirmary, probably the most complete in any school, was opened in 1929. Financial aid is extended to a few boys whose names are not divulged. See page 849.

Excellent college preparatory work and sound academic training throughout the grades have characterized this school from its earliest years. It is maintained by the Kent Place School Company of which the late Hamilton W. Mabie was president for over twenty years. The resident girls, who come from all parts of the country, live in a fireproof dormitory erected in 1931. Under Miss Hunt, principal since 1924, the curriculum and general atmosphere have been modernized. See page 895.

Founded by the Countess Benigna, daughter of Count Zinzendorf of Saxony, this oldest boarding school for girls in America has been continuously maintained at Bethlehem since 1743. Around old Colonial Hall, erected in 1748, cluster memories of the French and Indian Wars, and during the Revolution it served as a military hospital, sheltering hundreds of wounded Revolutionary heroes. Among its pupils were Eleanor Lee, a grandniece of Washington, Chancellor Livingston's daughter, Cornelia, the wife of Robert Fulton, two daughters of Nathaniel Greene and others representing the old Colonial families, Dutch, German, Quaker, French and English Loyal alumnæ continue to dower their ancient institution with gifts The great majority of the girls continue to come from Pennsylvania, though many states are represented.

Work of college grade was undertaken in 1912. Dr Heath, clean cut, idealistic, born in the Virgin Islands of missionary parents, received his early schooling in England. After twelve years at Salem Academy and College, North Carolina, he came to Moravian in 1926 and his unusual breadth of vision and mellowness have added much to the atmosphere of the school BIRMINGHAM, PA. The large and efficient faculty and wholesome and sensible ideals of the founder have brought the school national patronage. The reputation for sound college preparatory work and the fact that nearly five hundred of its graduates have entered Bryn Mawr have more or less successfully counteracted the unattractive buildings and situation. Of recent years graduates have entered other colleges than Bryn Mawr, and a number of non-college girls have been enrolled. The largest and one of the most prosperous of the coeducational boarding schools maintained by Friends, much of its success since 1912 has been due to Mr. Walton, who has elicited the cooperation of members of the Society of Friends, and enrolled a considerable proportion of students of other denominations. The Quaker way of life characterized by "self control, sympathy, moderation, deliberation, inward peace, and faith in the power of God," is impressed upon the students. The school was established and endowed in accordance with the will of John M. George, providing for the education of the children of Friends and others. It is managed by Friends but there are no denominational restrictions. Nearly two hundred scholarships are granted by a committee of the trustees on the basis of financial need. George School is one of the group selected by the Progressive Education Association for its experiment in freeing certain schools from the restrictions of College Board Examinations. See page 921.

Founded by residents of the community, this college preparatory school is adjacent to Haverford College. For a time it was under private control, but is now incorporated. By the terms of its charter its income must be used wholly for the operation and improvement of the school. The Junior School of six grades, with its own building and campus, is for day pupils only. All boys who wish to prepare for college are required to take the College Board examinations, though the standard of the school is such that its work is accredited by any college accepting certification. Dr. Wilson, head master since 1912, has long played an important part in school affairs of the region. In 1934 he took on as assistant Cornelius Boocock, former head of Collegiate School, New York. The ownership and administration of this college preparatory school are vested in the board of trustees of Franklin and Marshall College. But the school has its own management, faculty, buildings and grounds, equipment, and life. The academy is sufficiently removed from the college to avoid too intimate intercourse, but its proximity secures the students many advantages. Originally the preparatory department of Franklin College, this school was the result of a plan for an academy first proposed by Benjamin Franklin as early as 1743. In 1872, nineteen years after the merger of Marshall and Franklin Colleges, the preparatory department became a separate institution. Dr. Hartman, principal since 1897, is supported by a strong faculty. A spiritual minded educator, he is devoted to his work and maintains close and intimate contact with the boys who come largely from the Middle Atlantic States. About forty boys each year enter some twelve or fifteen colleges, chiefly those admitting by certificate. See page 850.

In 1936 Mercersburg will celebrate its hundredth anniversary
It was merely a local academy when William Mann Irvine took it over in 1893 A Princeton graduate, he rebuilt the school, keeping in mind as a model Exeter, from which he had graduated, and some of the English schools The present Mercersburg is the result of his broad vision, shrewd business sense, genius for publicity, and indefatigable energy, but his work was ably supplemented by loyal alumni, efficient faculty, staunch friends and a Board of Regents with great faith, liberal gifts and trust in the institution and its management.

Dr. Edwards was called to Mercersburg in 1928 on the death of Dr Irvine, after six years as head master of The Hill School.
A graduate of Phillips Andover, of Williams, and the Union Theological Seminary, he came to Mercersburg as an old friend, for in his previous pastoral work he had been visiting minister to the school for almost a quarter of a century. He had been a close personal friend of Dr. Irvine's and brought to Mercersburg a personal knowledge of the school's problems and appreciation for the ideals and traditions of the Academy, together with wide acquaintance with leading educators, and several years service as trustee of Williams and Mount Holyoke Colleges.

Mercersburg has recently been sending a large proportion of its boys to college both by examination and certificate, most to Princeton although a hundred sixteen colleges and universities in this and other countries have accepted its boys. The rugged vitality of the school and its intensely democratic atmosphere have led Mercersburg boys to make enviable records in college athletics, Olympic games and the World War. In one year, at Princeton, they captained eight of the varsity teams
A great number of working scholarships are available to ambitious boys. The school now has approximately $3,000,000 invested in material equipment. Outstanding are the new Main Hall, Assembly Hall, Administration Building and new Gothic Chapel, designed by Cram, with its carillon of forty-three bells upon which two recitals are given weekly. See page 850.

The Quaker "City of Brotherly Love," third in population, claims the largest proportion of home owners They live in long rows of uniform dwellings, paying their dole to land owners, real estate interests, utilities, reading the Curtis newspapers, sharing the Satevepost with the nation. There are old, new old, and recent families in Philadelphia, and the political machine early reached a high development of ruthless efficiency Philadelphia lends its name to cream cheese, scrapple, capon and a certain type of lawyer

At the crossing of the principal thoroughfares, Broad and Market Streets, stands the City Hall, a political monument of a former generation About Independence Square center the pre-Revolutionary landmarks—Independence Hall, with the sacred cracked Liberty Bell, and Carpenters Hall, where met the First Colonial Congress North of Market Street are Girard College and Temple University Southwest of the City Hall about Rittenhouse Square the old aristocratic mansions are fast giving way to shops and apartment houses. At West Philadelphia, across the Schuylkill from Philadelphia, are Drexel Institute and the University of Pennsylvania which latter now enrolls about 15,000 students, its hundred acre campus adjoining manufacturing and faded residential districts.

To a greater extent than in any other large city, wealthier residents have abandoned their town houses and migrated to the suburbs. Private schools have naturally followed and many are found in the attractive suburban sections of the city itself. Overbrook, to the northwest, lies partly in Philadelphia and partly in Merion. Germantown, largest of the suburban districts, is seven miles northwest of the City Hall. Here are many fine old pre-Revolutionary houses. Chestnut Hill, most beautiful of the outlying parts of Philadelphia, stretching along the wooded slopes of the valley of the Wissahickon Creek, is four miles north of Germantown. Oak Lane, east of Chestnut Hill, lies at the northern edge of the city and has attracted various day schools.

The schools in the farther suburbs are treated under their own towns. Along the Main Line, one of the most beautiful series of suburbs in the country, well known schools, including many for defectives as well as for Bryn Mawr preparation, will be found at Wynnewood, Ardmore, Haverford, Bryn Mawr, Devon, Berwyn, Paoli and Malvern. North of the city, among the Montgomery county hills, there are private schools in Rydal, Meadowbrook, and Bryn Athyn. In the outlying southern districts, private schools are found at West Chester, Chester, Swarthmore and Landsdowne.

Fostered by the Houston family and occupying property owned by the Houston estate, this flourishing day school has renewed its hold upon the community in the last few years. From 1895 to 1923 it was under Dr James L Patterson who was succeeded by T R Hyde, formerly at The Hill. Rejuvenated as a country day and boarding school with a five day boarding department, Chestnut Hill has since 1930 been directed by Mr Fall, previously assistant head master and for twenty-five years a member of the faculty. The boarding department was discontinued in the fall of 1934.

Celebrating its hundred and fiftieth anniversary in 1935, this ancient institution was founded by the first Bishop of Pennsylvania, Rev. William White. The legislature in 1787 granted its first charter and ten thousand acres of land. In the last quarter century it has absorbed two other institutions, the Blight and the DeLancey Schools. More than four thousand boys of old Philadelphia families have attended the academy since 1850. Mr. Haslam came to the school in 1921 from St. Paul's, Concord. Definite minded and energetic, he has tripled the enrollment since he took charge.

This is one of the oldest and largest schools in the country William Penn gave it three charters, the first of the same date, October 25, 1701, as the Charter of Philadelphia, the second in 1708 and the third and final one in 1711. It is still conducted under the Charter of 1711 which established an independent and self-perpetuating body of fifteen overseers, and provided for "the good education of youth and their early instruction in the principles of true religion and virtue, qualifying them to serve their country and themselves, by breeding them in reading, writing and learning of languages and useful arts and sciences "

Under the dominating personality of Dr Richard Mott Jones, head master for forty-two years, the school prospered and Dr Jones attained a national reputation as one of America's foremost head masters Dr Richard M Gummere, classical scholar and translator, author of many school texts, and trustee of Bryn Mawr and Haverford Colleges, was an able successor. His administration resulted in the development of the school in numbers and influence, and to his leadership may be attributed the plant to which the school moved in 1925 On Dr Gummere's resignation in 1935 to become chairman of the Board of Admissions at Harvard, the trustees elected Dr Knowles. A lawyer, once a member of the Massachusetts State Legislature, he was for thirteen years master of modern languages at St Mark's and since 1931 head of Great Neck Preparatory School, Long Island.

Characteristic is the system in the upper school whereby under the guidance of instructors each boy may elect and concentrate in some field in which he does work beyond college entrance requirements. Initiative on the part of the masters is encouraged and latitude in selection of material and method is allowed. A cooperative individualism is encouraged in both faculty and student body and each boy above the sixth grade is expected to spend a fifth of his time on hobby subjects which harmonize with his interests and tastes. The school has been a training ground for country day school heads all over the country and more members of the Headmasters Association have served in this school than in any other. See page 852.

City of smoke and steel and huge wealth, Pittsburgh has also the world's largest glass, electrical machinery, and air brakes works. Carnegie benefactions have done much for Pittsburghers.

The business section is on the tongue of land between the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers. Back of the highlands to the east is Schenley Park, nearly 500 acres in area. At its entrance is Carnegie Institute, the main building of which covers an area larger than does the Capitol at Washington. The Department of Fine Arts is notable for its director, Homer Saint-Gaudens, who has a roving commission to bring annually the best work of two continents for exhibition. The University of Pittsburgh, coeducational, with over 14,000 students, dates from 1787 and is also in Schenley Park. Duquesne University, a Catholic coeducational college, was established in 1878 and has 2885 students. Pennsylvania College for Women, organized in 1869, has about 150 students. Most of the Pittsburgh private schools are in the hilly East End Section.

This prosperous preparatory school patronized by leading families of the city had its inception in a private school established as early as 1883 in Allegheny by the late Dr. W. R. Crabbe Two years later the school was transferred to a more central location in Shady Side Its patrons, prominent citizens, have always taken a keen interest in the school and their generosity is evidenced by annual gifts for new buildings and new equipment Through a gift of Mrs W. H. Rowe the school has an attractive site on which the model school plant was erected in 1922 Mr Nomer, formerly a master at Lawrenceville, was appointed in 1919. See page 854.

This school with all its traditions is today efficient, clean cut, modern, marvelously equipped to prepare boys for college, and to hold and develop the interests of the boy to whom college requirements are but incidental. Long regarded by its own discriminating clientele as the best preparatory school, The Hill has perhaps grown too large to justify the superlative. Founded by the Rev. Matthew Meigs, the story of how his son, John, coming to the school in 1876, at the age of twenty-four, in the following thirty-five years brought the school from an obscure venture starting with two teachers and twenty boys to an institution of forty masters and three hundred seventy-five boys, has been interestingly told by his biographer, Dr. W. Russell Bowie, in "The Master of the Hill." John Meigs was a genius for organization, with abounding vitality and a passionate zest for life, with extraordinary power over his fellow men. He deliberately put from him thoughts of material achievement and gave himself not to the bending or breaking, but to the making of men. Actuated by the highest ideals, with striking ability he surmounted the greatest difficulties in managing and financing. Twice within six years his school was burned and it was ravaged by typhoid and pneumonia, but his determination never faltered in misfortune. His fidelity to his ideals of education and character building inflexibly withstood the influences of the wealth and social position of his patrons. Mrs. John Meigs, familiarly known as "Mrs. John," played a great part in the futures of many men by her inspiring counsel in the "sky parlor."

"Mr. Rolfe of The Hill" is the title of a little book compiled by Dr. Boyd Edwards from the inspiring writings of Dr. Alfred G. Rolfe, who directed the school after Dr. Meigs' death in 1911 until Dwight R. Meigs, then in Oxford University, was ready to take his father's place. In 1914 the son entered upon his duties as head master and at once gave evidence that he had inherited his father's administrative genius. In 1920 the Alumni, recognizing the worth of the school and the present trend in educational institutions from private ownership to endowed corporate organizations, took over the control. Dwight R. Meigs resigned in 1922, and Dr. Boyd Edwards, formerly pastor of the Hillside Presbyterian Church, Orange, N. J., an old friend of the school and the Meigs family, became head master. Mr. Wendell, who has come up through the school, has been in control since 1928. A former Olympic hurdler, with a tremendous capacity for work he is ably aided by Mrs. Wendell, a woman of rare charm.

From The Hill faculty have come head masters for twenty-four other schools, but seventeen masters served the school for twenty years or more—men like John A. Lester who leavened the intellectual life of the school and whose breadth of vision is reflected in his publications, and Michael F. Sweeney who, in charge of athletics for thirty-eight years, influenced the lives of two generations.

Boys found not to be college material find in the new Hobbies Building opportunity for many interests and sustained activities. Much of the management of the school has been put upon the faculty through the formation of four committees on discipline, administration, curriculum and extra-curriculum activities. Student self-government has been promoted through the formation of a School Council. Standards of work have always been high and it is a matter of record that few Hill graduates have failed to pass their college examinations. They have been unusually successful, too, among college undergraduates. Hill is proud of her boys and the families from which they come. Hill boys are proud of their school, too, and all applicants for admission must furnish references to or endorsement by alumni or their parents. Their loyalty is shown by large gifts,—the two million dollar campaign conducted during 1929 and 1930 having been oversubscribed by $150,000. See page 853.

Ogontz grew out of The Chestnut Street Seminary, founded as early as 1850, which moved from Philadelphia to Ogontz, where it occupied the estate of the Civil War financier, Jay Cooke. It has since been known as the Ogontz School, and retains its post office address of Ogontz School, although moved in 1917 to handsome buildings in Rydal. Miss Sutherland, principal since 1908, has impressed something of her own forceful personality on the school and its life. Now an accredited junior college, emphasis is placed on social and family life and the study of art, literature, psychology, ethics and home making as well as college preparation. A summer camp, the Ogontz White Mountain Camp, near Lisbon, N. H., is under Miss Sutherland's personal supervision.

THE RYDAL SCHOOL, established in 1917, is the junior school of Ogontz. In 1927 it occupied new buildings on the estate and continues to have the advantages of the upper school faculty in addition to its own well trained lower grade teachers. Day pupils are received.

An outstanding modern progressive country day school with excellent equipment and skilful teachers, this was established by the duPonts when they decided that their children needed a new and better school, one that was not under the domination of any religious sect. With six duPonts and duPont in-laws among the trustees, the school not only supplies educational facilities for Wilmington families but cooperates with other schools in the state in furthering educational progress in Delaware. Since 1923 the school has been under the skilful direction of Mr Fowler who came here after successful public school work.

One of the few American cities of local color, Baltimore's distinctive customs extend even to its cuisine. It is famous for its markets, its good living, its terrapin. Here were born Poe's Raven, H. L. Mencken and the "Sun paper," in which both F. R. Kent and the above named boobiphobe have scintillated. And here on a British frigate, a native, Francis Scott Key, wrote his "Star Spangled Banner," the manuscript of which is in the Walters Picture Gallery.

Centering about Mount Vernon Place, from which rises the tall Washington Monument, are the Peabody Institute where the Peabody Conservatory of Music has its headquarters, and the Walters Picture Gallery. Between Mount Vernon Place and Mount Royal Avenue are a number of private schools. Eutaw Place leads through the residential section to Druid Hill Park, about which is another group of schools. In Roland Park, still farther north, is the new site of Johns Hopkins University, established in 1876 and enrolling over 2200 students. In this suburb also are the Gilman and Roland Park Country Schools, Bryn Mawr, Girls Latin, and Notre Dame of Maryland. In Mt. Washington are Mount Saint Agnes School for girls, Mount Washington Country School for boys, and St. Paul's School.

John McDonogh endowed this institution as a farm school and for the first half century courses in agriculture and mechanics were stressed. Since 1925 under Major Lamborn, long associate principal of the Friends School in Baltimore, the school has changed its emphasis. Practical handwork is still available for the boy of non-academic type, but more boys are now being prepared for college.

The original endowment, two and three-quarters millions, of Jacob Tome, a resident of Port Deposit, was to afford educational opportunities for local boys and girls. The plant of the boarding school for boys, developed in 1898, was at the time of its erection the most notable in the country. James Cameron Mackenzie who had organized Lawrenceville served for two years as director. He was succeeded by Thomas S. Baker, later president of Carnegie Institute, who in turn was followed in 1919 by Murray Peabody Brush who was succeeded by R. J. Shortlidge, head master from 1932 to 1935. Boys are adequately prepared for college. The well equipped shops afford opportunity for extra curricular interests. See page 855.

The first church boarding school of the English type in America, St James is the diocesan school of Maryland. Dr. William Augustus Muhlenberg, who had first introduced the English Episcopal school system at Flushing, L I, sent his chief assistant, Rev J B. Kerfoot, to be the first head master. Here, too, another pupil of Muhlenberg's, Dr Henry Augustus Coit, taught until he was called to organize St. Paul's at Concord, N H. In 1844 the school was chartered as the College of St. James. Closed during the war, it reopened in 1869 under Henry Onderdonk, who continued as head master until 1896. Seven years later when his son, the present head master, took charge, the name was changed to St. James School. Mr. Onderdonk is a strong and lovable personality, a great teacher and a hero to his boys. The personnel is of the best and "home life" and "individual attention" and the "honor system" in this school are not empty phrases. New and well equipped buildings evidence the loyalty of the alumni.

WASHINGTON, D C.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Alt 25 ft. Pop 486,869 (1930).

Each change of administration brings to Washington new elements,—Wilson's academic tinge and 'dollar-a-year' men, Harding's 'best minds' and 'Ohio gang,' Coolidge's coolness, the engineer Hoover's predilection for utility men and 'rugged individualism,'—have now given way to a smiling aristocrat who talks of a 'new deal' and endeavors to hold radicals, inflationists and plutocrats in leash. All play their kaleidoscopic parts on this stage, eventually disclosing new sources of plunder, new rottenness in democracy's timbers, but with boundless faith and hope, pointing a new future.

Few call it home except the minor or permanent government officials and employees, though many notable working scientists are permanently located here. Its citizens have no vote and take no part in its government. Even the petty details of its public school system are directed by a board appointed by the Supreme Court.

The government architecture reflects the development of national taste and constitutes a monument to the waste and graft of our representatives and contracting system. Hoover filled the center with an extravagant display of meaningless and costly pillars and quarrymen's work from influential Congressional districts.

Among the more beautiful buildings, outstanding are the Pan American Union, stimulating and refreshing in its architectural detail and arrangement; the Academy of Arts and Sciences by Bertram Goodhue, a remarkable example of purest Greek architectural design, and the new Folger Shakesporean Library, architecturally chaste. Lincoln Memorial, with its great display of Doric columns reflected in the water, stands almost in the shadow of the great white obelisk; and beyond, the Arlington Memorial Bridge, completed in 1932, leads across to Arlington and the Tomb of the Unknown.

The museum and collections are of growing importance. The Freer is a gem. Saint Gaudens' Grief, in Rock Creek Cemetery, was to Galsworthy the most memorable thing in Washington and perhaps in America.

The attractions of Washington have made it an educational center. The Catholic Church, with characteristic foresight, has taken advantage of this for its higher institutions of learning—the Catholic University, Trinity College and Georgetown University. George Washington University falls short of the hope and plan of the Father of his Country.

Recent trade invasion of the older residential region from Lafayette Square to Dupont and Thomas Circles has driven the costly new mansions and legations to Sixteenth Street, where they extend for miles to the north. Finishing schools have flourished on this soil and some still remain in the neighborhood of Dupont Circle. The more substantial college preparatory schools are rapidly deserting this region for the hills north and west of the city. Some schools have crossed the line and have such post office addresses as Forest Glen, Garrett Park and Takoma Park. The Chevy Chase Schools and The Washington Country School, although over the Maryland border, use the Washington post office. The Madeira School, long on 19th Street, moved in 1931 across the Potomac to Greenway, Fairfax County, Virginia, thirty minutes ride from the city.

About half the graduates of this Episcopal school enter college, although the academic and fine arts departments are well organized. The girls lead a simple, wholesome life spending much time out of doors. Established by the first Bishop of Washington in a building provided by Mrs Phoebe Apperson Hearst, the school was for fifteen years under the direction of Jessie C McDonald and Helen L Webster, both of whom died in 1928. Miss Turner, formerly in New York day schools, has been principal since 1929. A day school for younger boys is a recent innovation. See page 898.

What a marvelous place Asheville must have been before the white man arrived, with its glorious mountains clothed in the greenest of forests, aflame in the spring with rhododendron and azaleas—the Land of the Sky! Today thousands of visitors flock annually to the excellent hotels of this year round resort with its equable climate The 120 acre estate of Asheville School, through which Ragsdale Creek flows for over a mile forming a lake on the property, is five miles west of the city. In Grove Park is the school of that name From its extensive campus, Saint Genevieve-of-the-Pines commands a wide view.

Asheville School, the result of trials, tribulations and vigorous prunings, today bears the stamp of its head master who in 1927 came from The Hill School where he had been one of the great coterie that grew up about John Meigs From the first this has been a southern school for northern boys, directed by northern men with all the northern standards Always, scholastically and in altitude, it has towered above most of the surrounding schools. Because of the climate and the opportunities for year round outdoor life, it was established here by Newton M. Anderson and Charles A. Mitchell, formerly of Cleveland. Caught in the real estate expansion of the late twenties, the school was taken over by a controlling board, and later purchased by a wholesale grocer from Pittsburgh who had a Messianic complex. Reorganized by its alumni, Dr. Bement has since 1930 held firm control, laying down the principle that "the only real appeal to the boy is the appeal of interest," and offering some branch of natural science in each grade with opportunities for music appreciation and the fine and manual arts. Oh to be in Charleston when the azaleas are in bloom! The old plantations along the river, stretching inland, are filled with azaleas planted a century ago. Unbelievable is the mass of bloom. A city of fine old houses and charming gardens, Charleston retains much of the atmosphere of ante-bellum days. The opening shot of the Civil War was fired here from a Confederate battery on Morris Island against the Union troops at Fort Sumter. This is the largest city in the state, an important seaport, and one of the leading cotton manufacturing centers of the south. Adjacent to Hampton Park, on the banks of the Ashley river, is The Citadel, the military college of South Carolina. On Radcliffe Street between Rutledge Avenue and Smith Street, Ashley Hall is near the river.

This school was formed by the union of Ward Seminary and Belmont College, under the charter name The Ward-Belmont School. The former institution was founded in 1865 and the latter in 1890. John Deill Blanton, for twenty-one years president of Ward Seminary, continued in nominal control of Ward-Belmont until his death in 1933. But the active management has long been vested in Dr. Barton and A. B. Benedict who own the controlling interest. The entire faculty is college trained. The majority of the high school graduates enter college. More than half the students are enrolled in the accredited junior college and two-thirds of these annually enter four year colleges as juniors. The resident students, though largely from the south and middle west, represent thirty-six states. See page 931.

Originally laid out in checkerboard, Cincinnati extends fourteen miles along the Ohio river. To the German population, which settled here in the middle of the nineteenth century, is due much of the cultural development of the city. The city manager plan has made this formerly boss-ridden city one of the best administered in the country.

The University of Cincinnati is in Burnet Woods Park to the north of the city. Just beyond in Avondale is the University School, and still farther north at College Hill is Ohio Military Institute. Fifteen miles northeast on Indian Hill is the Cincinnati Country Day School. In Walnut Hills are the Schuster-Martin School and the Cincinnati Conservatory. South in Eden Park is the Art Academy. The College of Music is nearer the center.

General Gignilliat, made commandant in 1896 and superintendent in 1910, is a tactful and capable administrator with advanced ideas on some phases of secondary school education. Culver has won wide publicity for its progressive steps in guidance and measurement, in internal surveys and in carrying university consultants on its staff. Recent developments are a junior college and courses in motors. Cavalry, artillery, and infantry senior units of the R.O.T.C. have long been maintained. BLOOMFIELD HILLS, MICH. Alt 850 ft. Pop 1127 (1930).
G.T.R.R. Motor Route U.S. 10 from Detroit.

In the development of this region of suburban estates, George G Booth, newspaper publisher and patron of the crafts and arts, was the pioneer a quarter of a century ago. Ten miles north of the city limits of Detroit and five miles south of Pontiac, on the Woodward superhighway, its five square miles were incorporated as a village in 1927 as a step toward the preservation of its rural character. Here are the five educational institutions and the church established by Mr. and Mrs. Booth on the 300 acre tract which was their estate, "Cranbrook," named for Mr Booth's ancestral village in England. Reserving only their residence, they have given land, buildings, equipment and endowment funds to the development of Christ Church Cranbrook, Brookside School Cranbrook, Cranbrook School, Kingswood School Cranbrook, Cranbrook Academy of Art, and Cranbrook Institute of Science. The Cranbrook Foundation, created in 1926, was the recipient of virtually all of Mr Booth's fortune, as well as substantial gifts from Mrs Booth, totaling approximately $17,500,000. Masterpieces of sculpture and the decorative arts adorn all of the institutions, which, with the exception of the church and Brookside, were designed by Eliel Saarinen, distinguished architect and president of the Cranbrook Academy of Art, for whose work here he received the gold medal of the New York Architectural League.

An ancient settlement founded by Cadillac, Detroit had its rebirth with the automobile of which it is now the greatest industrial center. It has had a remarkable growth, risen to the height of prosperity and fallen deepest into the abyss. The home of Henry Ford and Father Coughlin, it was the scene of the wildest orgy of our period of prosperity. Here started the bank holiday which marked our financial and industrial nadir.

The motor industry has attracted a large foreign element and the interests of the people at large are indicated in the enrollment of the Cass Technical High School which has reached 16,000. Great wealth, citizens of public spirit and vision have given the city a notable system of parks, boulevards, municipal buildings and art facilities. To the north in beautiful country lie great estates. In Dearborn is Ford's huge trade school. In the Grosse Pointe district are the Grosse Pointe Country Day and Detroit University Schools.

Long one of the most successful and prosperous day schools in the country, this school developed under the management of the Misses Liggett from the Detroit Home and Day School, established by their father, the Rev. James D Liggett. An institution of first rank, well organized and equipped, with a large and resourceful faculty, it has been less affected than most Detroit schools by the cataclysm of the city's finances. The pupils represent the best families of Detroit. Over three hundred of its graduates have entered college, and the Alumnæ Association cooperates heartily with the school. A branch school known as "The Eastern Liggett School," 2571 Burns Ave., was opened in the eastern part of the city in 1913, providing for the growing patronage of that section. In 1925 a new addition to this was built and the older school moved over to the east side, the lower school being merged with it, making the new Liggett School. In 1928, Miss Ogden succeeded Jeanette M. Liggett who remains in touch as trustee and principal emerita.

Baldwin, a friend of Captain Godfrey, who was influenced by the ideas of Mary Lyon. In 1841 the school was incorporated and graduated its first class. In its long history it has played an important part in the education of young women of the section and is appropriately spoken of as the "Mount Holyoke of the West." The large body of loyal alumnae is organized in many associations throughout the west. The junior college department was greatly strengthened under Harnet R. Congdon, president for seventeen years from 1918. Mr Rohrbough, who takes charge in the fall of 1935, was formerly a master in the Newton (Mass.) High School. See page 932.

It was formerly administered by the same board of trustees as Lake Forest College and Lake Forest Academy and had its beginning as the "Ferry Institute for Young Women" founded by the Rev.

William Montague Ferry. In the past half century several thousand young women have been enrolled. College preparation is stressed, but various special courses are provided. The school has been fortunate in its principals. Miss Tremain had broad experience in girls schools east and west before coming to Ferry Hall in 1918. Under her able leadership money has been raised to construct new and beautiful buildings two of which were completed in time for the celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of the school in 1929. Three quarters of a century ago public spirited Chicago citizens purchased 1300 acres of land bordering on Lake Michigan and here built the academy whose Diamond Jubilee was celebrated in 1933. "Big Boy" Richards, who came to the school in 1913 from Hotchkiss and Yale, succeeding William Mather Lewis, now president of Lafayette, has greatly increased the importance of the academy among college preparatory schools of the country. Successfully he has maintained a modern attitude against the regional militaristic trend. Under his regime the school has achieved higher standards and has prepared for the great universities sons of western families who would otherwise have been sent to eastern schools. In 1930 Mr. Richards procured the necessary funds to put into operation a new plan which has since been adopted by other boys schools and has successfully met the college test. The effect of this plan has been to make the school work more interesting, more individualized, more economical of time and effort. But in addition, it has made education at Lake Forest more actual and more directly applicable to each boy's individual life. The visitor here is impressed with the aliveness, virility, and effectiveness of the educational process. Mr. Richards holds the unswerving devotion of his boys, patrons and trustees, many of whose names are among the most potent in Chicago. Recently there has been a broadening of the program for the mental and physical health of the individual boy. See page 861.

Today earnest parents sacrifice other things to live here that their children may benefit from the work of two brilliant educational attractions. Carleton Washburne has here developed and made practical a system of individualized instruction in the public schools, of which he is superintendent. In his books he has reported on education in Europe and on the educational ideals of rulers of countries round the world in a new, illuminating, and interpretive way. In contrast, the brilliant, accomplished head master of the Country Day School attracts and holds the personally discriminating Definitely progressive in its tendencies, this school was established primarily with the Francis W Parker School in Chicago as a model. It has developed independently, however, and is now one of the outstanding country day schools of the middle west, doing good college preparatory work and making a definite attempt through parent education to adjust its students to actual living conditions. The school is limited to an enrollment of three hundred fifty, and no students are accepted in the high school who admit plans to transfer later to boarding schools.

Notable among the schools of the west, Shattuck was the conception of the Rt Rev. Henry B Whipple, the first Bishop of Minnesota, who, familiar with such schools in England as Winchester and Rugby, saw the need of a permanent educational institution in this region. As early as 1858 the Rev James L Breck had established in Faribault a small day school which was later incorporated by Dr. Whipple as the Bishop Seabury Mission. Out of this have grown the three renowned schools; Seabury Divinity School, merged in 1933 with Western Theological Seminary, St. Mary's Hall, and Shattuck. The boys school was named for an early benefactor, Dr George Cheyne Shattuck of Boston In 1916 the Rt Rev. F. A. McElwain became rector and Dr Newhall, connected with Shattuck for over twenty years, head master There is a strong faculty of university graduates. During its long career more than three thousand boys have been trained in its halls. The students are drawn largely from well-to-do families of the great northwest. Classed by the government as 'essentially a military school' the students must always be in uniform and are constantly under military discipline. Military training is required of all, and the students are organized into a battalion of infantry. See page 864.

Established by the Baptist State Convention as Minnesota Academy, a coeducational institution, gifts from the great flour merchant resulted in the adoption in 1886 of the present name. Since 1920 the school has been for boys only with military drill part of the required physical training In 1934 Carleton College took over the management, strengthening an informal affiliation that had existed since 1916 Mr Sisson succeeded Milo B. Price in 1931.

The capital of Minnesota, St. Paul is built on a series of terraces rising from the east bank of the Mississippi. It is second only to Chicago as a livestock and meat packing center, and is also important for its manufactures. A recent fifteen million dollar civic improvement project includes a courthouse, a skyscraper bank building, a municipal auditorium and a hospital A new boulevard, named in honor of St. Paul's Frank B. Kellogg, has been created out of dingy old Third Street. Saint Paul Academy has two sites—its Country Day School, west of Snelling, and its Lower School in a new building at 718 Portland Avenue. Between St. Paul and Minneapolis are a group of church schools.

A wholesome home school for girls, Oak Hall is well adapted to serve its locality. A friendly atmosphere is maintained and about ninety per cent of the graduates go to college. Baldwin School, the first private institution of learning in Minnesota and the direct ancestor of Oak Hall, was continued as the preparatory department of Macalester College under the name of Baldwin Seminary until 1890. Mrs. Carrie H. Backus took control at this time and developed the school as Oak Hall. Mr. and Mrs. Moore, of New England backgrounds and experience in eastern schools, have been in charge since 1919.

An outgrowth of a day school conducted for thirteen years in the city, this modern country day school is unique among its kind in that the boys wear uniforms and devote one period a day to military drill. Since 1916 the junior and senior departments have been entirely separate. The Junior School, under the direction of Beulah Brown, in the fall of 1931 moved to a new building at 718 Portland Avenue. Mr Briggs, a son of Dean Briggs of Harvard, had previous experience in the Hill School and in the Kansas City Country Day School, and under his able and scholarly leadership this school has taken front rank in the College Board examinations. Every graduate from 1916 to 1933 has entered a reputable college, eighty per cent have gone to Harvard, Yale or Princeton, one-third have graduated from college with honors.

Once a frontier fort and still the world's greatest fur market, St. Louis is today the seventh city in population in the country. It is the most centrally located of our large cities — the center of population, manufacture, and distribution, with untold future possibilities.

A notable group of educational buildings has grown up in Forest Park, the site of the Exposition of 1904. To the west in the Wydown section is Washington University with about 7000 students, founded in 1853. Overlooking the University campus is Hosmer Hall. St. Louis University, a Catholic institution including some women's colleges dating from 1818, has over 3500 students.

In the northern section of the city is the David Ranken, Jr., School of Mechanical Trades. The Principia, long in the north-western district has moved its college section to Elsah, Illinois. North of Natural Bridge Road, in a remote section, is the fifty acre campus of the St. Louis Country Day School. In the suburb of Clayton are John Burroughs School, Chaminade College and Academy, Taylor School, the new Community School, and Mary Institute which the University controls.

The only Christian Science educational institution that has proved successful, The Principia is but one of scores that have been started Established by Mrs Mary Kimball Morgan, it has continued under her control as president of the board of trustees and that of her sons There is no direct connection with or financial support from the Christian Science Church, but Christian Science practices, ideals and standards prevail among faculty and students In consonance with these standards, team work between trustees, school executives and patrons is played up, and personalities are submerged However, it is apparent even to some Christian Scientists that the school owes its great success to the organizing genius and vision of the present director, in charge since 1920 Carefully laid plans for an endowment fund for a four year college resulted in the announcement, in 1930, of the raising of two million dollars and the purchase of a four mile tract of land along the Mississippi near the village of Elsah, Ill, where in the spring of 1935 buildings were occupied by the college group The A B degree was conferred in 1934 on the first graduating class See page 933.

An outgrowth of an Episcopal school established in 1852, this academy is the creation of Dr. J. W. Hill who until his death in 1930 continued in close touch with the school under the direction of his sons. The academy became well known through the national appeal it made for support, and the prominent part it played in opposing the Oregon enactment of 1922 requiring that all parents send their children to public schools beginning September, 1926. The pupils come largely from the Pacific Coast and the Rocky Mountain states. A summer camp is maintained. The school moved to its new site in Rocky Butte in 1931, leaving the original buildings for the use of the separate junior school for boys six to twelve.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. Alt 267 ft. Pop 576,673 (1920) 1,238,048 (1930).

The largest city on the American side of the Pacific basin, Los Angeles has become a great center of industry and commerce. The original Mexican settlement, midway between the mountains and the sea, centered about Olvera Street. Here still stands the Church of Our Lady Queen of the Angels, dating from 1818. The city limits embrace a great area from the San Fernando valley, over the Hollywood hills and the Santa Monica mountains, to the sea. The attractiveness of the climate to the retired farming class of the middle west, the discovery of oil, the development of harbor facilities, the cinematograph, and the airplane are among the factors contributing to the city's growth.

Private schools here spring up like mushrooms. Some of the girls schools have attained unusually high standards, but there have been so many fly-by-nights that in 1932 an Association of Independent Schools of Los Angeles was formed, to protect reputable schools and private school patrons. While the secretarial, trade and industrial schools are still in the business section and mainly on Figueroa Street, preparatory schools are found in all the residential regions. South, in the vicinity of Exposition Park with its new stadium seating 90,000, are the University of Southern California and a few private schools. In the tree lined old residential part to the southwest are many schools of local appeal, among them Miss Thomas', Martha Weaver and Harvard. Near Westlake Park, four miles west of Broadway, is Otis Art Institute. And in an older residential district, Hammond Hall and Miss Fulmer's Schools occupy the former buildings of the Westlake School for Girls. Page, Cumnock and Marlborough Schools, which a decade ago moved into the open country, are now surrounded by city blocks. The Hollywood schools make special appeal to the children of the movie colony. Black-Foxe occupies the former building of the Urban Military Academy.

Two great educational centers have developed hereabouts in the last few years. To the east, centering about Pomona, has moved the California Preparatory School from Pasadena to Covina. More recently, west of the city, a group of schools has sprung up midway between Los Angeles and Santa Monica Bay. In Westwood are Westlake and its Holmby Junior College which moved from the city in 1929, the frowning red brick buildings of the University of California at Los Angeles; and the imposing new Catholic institutions, Marymount for girls, St. Mary's College for men. Berkeley Hall School is in Beverly Hills. Further from the city on Beverly Boulevard, Urban School has a conspicuous site. Harvard School, St. John's Academy and the Culver Art Center plan future homes in this section.

The oldest and most widely known of Los Angeles schools, Marlborough is a monument to the administrative genius of Mrs. George A. Caswell, its founder and for thirty-five years its head mistress. Miss Blake, born and educated in the east and with wide experience in girls schools of the east and middle west, took over the school in 1924 after a year as associate principal. She has played a prominent part in school associations of the region and under her energetic and forceful direction the school has shown consistent development and new buildings have been erected. A practical all round education is still given, and a considerable number of the graduates are sent to eastern as well as to western colleges. See page 913.

Time, earthquake, fire, have not destroyed the local flavor of San Francisco. It still remains the quintessence of California and the golden west. Built on the sand dunes at the tip of the peninsula bounded by the Pacific, the Golden Gate and the Bay, its street cars must be hauled up the hill by cable. The Presidio, famous Mexican and United States military headquarters, facing the Golden Gate, is adjacent to the site of the Panama Pacific Exposition grounds, some of the buildings of which, now

J. H. Badley, who derived his early inspiration from serving with the late Dr. Cecil Reddie of Abbotsholme, out of his inheritance established this coeducational school—the first in England. The remarkable personality of its founder has resulted in his realizing his ideal, "the fullest individual development of each child." Much attention is given to music, arts and crafts. Boys and girls together are in two groups, junior and senior. The separate junior school for fifty children from four to twelve is conducted along Montessori lines. Much has been published about the school, including a book by Mr. Badley himself. Mr. Meier, former head of science at Rugby, takes over the head mastership in July, 1935.

Under Dr. Cecil Reddie, the founder, a notable figure in the school world, Abbotsholme was the first to break away from the conventional and the traditional. Out of it has grown the 'New School' movement of the Continent. The leaders of the Landerziehungsheim and the Ecole Nouvelle of France were trained here. Scores of schools have been directly influenced by Abbotsholme and its indirect influence has been world wide. In 1927 Dr Reddie handed over the school to a Council largely composed of his Old Boys, and appointed the present head master, late of St. Stephen's College, Delhi, and the University of Delhi, who has here developed an education suited to the needs of the twentieth century boy. Academic standards are maintained, together with a wide education through interest, appreciation and achievement. The proportion of staff to boys is exceptionally high.

PARIS. Pop 2,871,429 (1930).

The center of the art, educational, financial and industrial life of the nation, Paris is in every sense the capital of France. The modern city fills the limestone basin through which winds the Seine, radiating in a concentric ring from the Isle de la Cité. Montmartre and Mont Parnasse, with other heights, crown the rim while broad boulevards and parks, the Louvre and the Tuilleries, form a city acclaimed by many as the acme of magnificence and beauty in plan and architectural beauty. The earliest settlements were on the islands in the river about which the Roman and medieval cities were built. On the left bank, The Sorbonne has for centuries attracted students from every foreign country and has been the center of the Latin Quarter.

Schools in surrounding municipalities easily accessible to Paris are generally regarded as Parisian. North of the Bois are schools at Neuilly, and Colombes. South is Boulogne and, across the Seine, Saint-Cloud.

FLORENCE. Alt 180 ft. Pop 316,806 (1930).

Florence, proud mistress of Tuscany, is the quintessence of the Renaissance. Set at the crossing of trade routes, on the Arno, out of its commerce came its arts and wealth. Just as imperial Rome is masculine, Florence, surrounded by almond blossom misted hills, is feminine. Perhaps this is why the pensions and hotels are filled with art mad spinsters. The intellectual, esthetic and spiritual inspiration of the place, its palazzos and villas, formerly to be had for a song, have appealed to numerous resident schools. Ensconced in old villas on the slopes of the hills to the east and north, toward Prato and Fiesole, where Boccaccio told his tales, are a number of schools for American girls. Near San Domenico, in a villa centuries old, surrounded by its dependencies and chapel, is the Villa Collina Ridente. The Florentine School is in San Dominico, Eversholme in Rovezzano.

SUPPLEMENTARY LISTS

SUPPLEMENTARY LISTS

Here are listed, pp 619-720, under various classifications, schools about which we have inadequate information, unimportant schools, or those from which we have received no up to date statistics

Requests for information, addressed to each of these schools, brought response after thirty days from only those schools indicated by an asterisk. For the other schools the information given is in many cases several years old and probably out of date. Some are moribund, some have probably passed out of existence. So many schools have closed their doors in the past three years that we can give no guarantee.

Addenda to Supplementary Lists include Schools removed from descriptive text of this edition because not recently heard from, Schools not heretofore included in this Handbook and about which we have little information, and Schools in the Supplementary List (pp 619-720) from which information was received too late for change in that section.

Schools are listed under each classification alphabetically by towns under each state. States are arranged geographically from Maine to California.

Schools in the Classified List of Schools to Meet Special Needs, pp 721-798, for the most part are included in the main portion of the book in the critical and statistical text, pp 99-616.

Membership lists of various educational and accrediting associations are here given on pp. 799-806.

ADDENDA

These lists are made up of schools in the main Supplementary Lists (pp 633-720), from which corrections were received too late for change in that section, and schools not elsewhere included and about which we have little information.

DETAILED CLASSIFIED LISTS

SCHOOLS TO MEET SPECIAL NEEDS

These lists are intended to be helpful in finding the type of school desired. Occasionally arranged chronologically, the usual arrangement is geographical, enabling one to select immediately schools of the type desired in any particular section of the country. The lists are not intended to be exhaustive, but to include some of the more representative schools under each classification.

BOYS SCHOOLS

PREPARATORY TO THE LARGE EASTERN COLLEGES

Only those schools are listed which sent up at least ten boys from 1929 to 1932. For 1933-34 figures see statistical notices of the individual schools.

PROFESSIONAL AND VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS

MUSIC SCHOOLS

There are thousands of Music schools in the United States. They are estimated at 17,000. Many with impressive titles occupy a single rented room. Only a few of the better established and permanent institutions are here listed.

The conservatory system was established as early as 1853 by Eben Tourjee in Boston. Harvard was the first college to establish a music department—1862. Now almost every college and preparatory school has its department of music. Secondary schools with separate music departments are found in the Classified Lists of Secondary Schools.

ART SCHOOLS

The study of Art as an accomplishment for young ladies was an early 19th century development. As early as 1791 Charles Willson Peale endeavored to create a school of art in Philadelphia. The attempt, though unsuccessful, led in 1805 to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. Hundreds of art schools in the country now offer courses of from one to four years. Summer art schools are a popular recent development.

KINDERGARTEN TRAINING SCHOOLS

The first kindergarten for English speaking children was started in Boston by Elizabeth P. Peabody in 1860. The first in this country was conducted in German by Mrs. Carl Schurz in her home in Watertown, Wisconsin. The first kindergarten training school was organized in Boston in 1868 by Madame Matilde Kriege and her daughter. Miss Marie Boelte opened a similar school in New York City four years later.

SCHOOLS OF PHYSICAL EDUCATION

The development of interest in Physical Education in America dates from the middle of the last century. It is true that as early as 1823 Dr. Charles Beck introduced German gymnastics at the Round Hill School, Northampton, Massachusetts. But the important influence came twenty-five years later, in the intercollegiate contests in rowing, the calisthenics of Dr. Dio Lewis, and the educational journals. The college gymnasium was an immediate result—Harvard and Amherst being for first place in 1860.

There are at present fourteen independent, well established, and reputable schools of Physical Education. In addition practically all the large universities and many of the smaller colleges have well organized departments. These two types of schools supply many of the private and most of the public schools with trained directors.

SCHOOLS OF EXPRESSION

Schools of Speech Arts are developments of and take the place of institutions formerly called Schools of Oratory and Elocution. The modern Schools of Speech avoid these terms and designate themselves variously as Schools of Expression, Schools of Public Speaking, Schools of the Drama, and Schools of the Stage. Under Schools of the Theatre Arts are Schools of Stage Production, Schools of the Little Theatre. Closely affiliated with Schools of Expression and Public Speaking are those remedying defective speech.

SCHOOLS OF THE HOUSEHOLD ARTS

Under this classification are schools of Home Economics which train for institutional management, dietetics, and teaching. Schools of Homemaking prepare for the management of the home, and the one year course for prospective brides in such schools often enrolls the great majority of the students. Schools of the various Household Arts and Crafts and Cooking form a third group. Preparatory schools and junior colleges with special departments for the household arts are not here listed. Schools teaching other feminine crafts will be found under Practical Arts for Women.

BUSINESS AND SECRETARIAL SCHOOLS

The number of schools of this type reported by the United States Bureau of Education in a recent pamphlet was six hundred, a loss of some three hundred since the previous compilation, due to the great increase in the assumption by the public school systems of the functions once performed by private institutions. Of the more ephemeral so-called "business colleges" there are probably upwards of 2000 conducted under private initiative, but these seldom make reports to government questionnaires

Private business classes existed even in Colonial times. In the '30's and '40's of the last century private classes in bookkeeping increased rapidly, forerunners of the modern business schools. In the '50's and '60's chain schools were established, remnants of which exist today independently in many cities under the old names

The leading schools here described are also mentioned in the main body of the Handbook. Business departments of standard colleges are not included.

TECHNOLOGICAL AND TRADE SCHOOLS

In this grouping no attempt has been made to include the numerous local institutions that provide day or evening instruction. Institutes of technology or colleges requiring four years of high school preparation are likewise omitted. Technological and trade schools that provide residences for students, other than certain charitable schools, are yet to be established.

SCHOOLS OF NURSING

Professional nursing is a relatively modern development. It was Florence Nightingale who first uprooted the old notion of nursing as charity work. Nursing education in America had its start in the form of lectures, when Dr. Valentine Seaman introduced a lecture course in obstetrics at the New York Hospital, but no school of nursing existed until 1873. Three schools imitated at this time were independent organizations cooperating with, but not established by, the Bellevue Hospital in New York, the Connecticut Training School in New Haven, and the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

Hospitals immediately recognized the value of these training schools and, though in 1880 there were only fifteen schools, in 1890 there were thirty-five, in 1900, 432, in 1920, 1775, in 1926, 2155 and by the end of 1927, 2286. In 1928 new recruits to the ranks of graduate nurses numbered about 20,000. A committee from the Medical Association of America, the College of Physicians and Surgeons and several other important groups, including professional societies of nurses themselves, in 1928 investigated and reported that "most hospitals with training schools expect and require student nurses to carry the entire nursing load of the hospital." Since 1929 many hospitals have discontinued their training schools. Some of the larger hospitals still maintain a staff of graduate nurses and the nursing education which has found its place on the program of many colleges is of course on a high plane.

Only a few of the older and better established nurses training schools are presented under the following classifications.

FOR DEFICIENTS

Under this classification will be found schools for the mentally, physically and sensorily deficient. Defectives received no scientific care and education in this country until 1820, when idiots were admitted to the deaf and dumb asylum at Hartford, Connecticut. Dr Edouard Seguin, a young French physician, developed a method of training of the sense organs and in 1850 opened the Seguin Physiological School at Orange, New Jersey. Before that, however, his methods had been used in the first strictly private institution in the country, Elm Hall, Barre, Massachusetts, which dates back to 1848. Latterly schools for the slightly deficient have developed and many of these admit no low grade defectives.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES LIBRARY 1929

PHILLIPS ACADEMY, Andover, MassCLAUDE M FUESS, Litt D , Ph D , Head Master

Phillips Academy, founded in 1778 by members of the Phillips family, is the oldest incorporated academy in the U S

It is international in its representation and democratic in its life and spirit. Its essential appeal is to students of serious educational purpose and high moral standards

To be eligible for entrance, candidates must present satisfactory school records and evidence of good character, and must take examinations for assignment to classes.

Dormitory accommodations and supervision enable students to pass by gradual and natural stages from the paternalism of home life to the freedom of college.

Williams Hall and Rockwell House, with their close supervision, offer attractive and helpful surroundings to the young boy just leaving home for his school career

New buildings designed by Charles Platt include an Auditorium, Office Building, Science Building, Dormitories, Dining Hall, Library, and an Art Gallery A new Chapel was completed in 1932 A new and modern Inn is in operation, and a thoroughly modern Hospital has just been opened Extensive playgrounds and athletic fields are available for the use of students. All the boys are required to take regular gymnasium work or engage in sports The Gymnasium, Swimming Pool, and the Case Memorial Building, providing complete facilities for athletic activities during the winter, are in charge of a competent physical director.

Endowments and scholarship funds are available providing pecuniary aid for more than a hundred scholarly and ambitious boys of limited means.

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

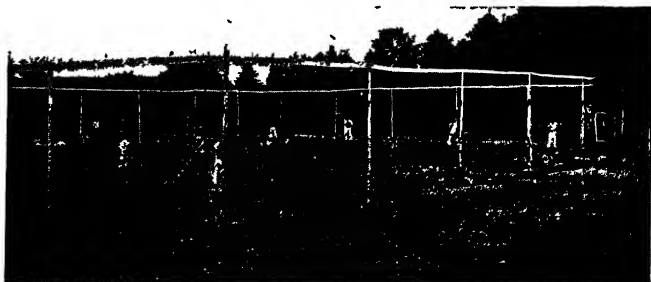

WASSOOKEAG SCHOOL, Bryant Hill, Dexter, Me.
LLOYD HARVEY HATCH, Head Master.

The Wassookeag Method has set a new standard — one teacher for every three boys.

Under Wassookeag's tutorial impetus the regular program of two academic years is completed in one calendar year. The SCHOOL and WASSOOKEAG SCHOOL-CAMP, which serves as the summer session, present an unusual record — no graduate has failed to enter College on scheduled time.

Wassookeag "results" have proved the thesis that boys from 14 to 18 are ready for College standards. The Wassookeag Method: The Tutorial System, Acceleration of Individual Progress, University Tutors and Standards, Continuity in the Educational Process, Junior College Transition Study, Orientation, Scholastic Attainment.

THE STEARNS SCHOOL, Mont Vernon, N. H.
ARTHUR FRENCH STEARNS, A. B., Principal

The Stearns School is located in a beautiful village in the foothills of southern New Hampshire. Mont Vernon has long been noted for its climate and has the endorsement of many eminent Boston physicians.

The boys live in the four houses known as Lincoln Hall, Andover Hall, Mitchell Hall, and The Lodge, which contain large, airy sleeping rooms, and are fitted with all modern improvements. The boys are under careful and sympathetic supervision, as home life is a special feature of Stearns School.

The Upper School prepares boys for any College or University while giving them, at the same time, the best possible all-round education. Its college record is excellent and its certificate admits to practically all Colleges.

The Lower School is under the direct supervision of an experienced teacher who thoroughly understands the preparation and training of younger boys. Lower School boys occupy a dormitory by themselves but enjoy the advantages in their classroom work of the strong teaching force of the regular school.

Each boy in both the Upper and Lower School is required to engage in some healthful recreation, under the supervision of some teacher, during his play hours. The campus affords excellent opportunity for outdoor activities and for all winter sports. It includes a well kept Golf Course, Tennis Courts, Athletic Fields and Skating Pond.

The excellent results attained are due to the intimate contact between teacher and pupil and to a teaching force that is unusually strong in proportion to the number of boys. Rate $1100.

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

TILTON SCHOOL, Tilton, New Hampshire.

This well equipped, progressive New England school for boys has graduates in fifty-two Colleges and Scientific Schools today, the stronger New England institutions of course being in the lead. There are General and Business Courses for boys not going to College. The classes are small, with ample opportunity for individual instruction.

An excellent Junior School for boys eight to fourteen provides for those who have not completed the Elementary Grades. It is separate from the Senior School, having its own school building and cottage dormitories with experienced and kindly house mothers.

Tilton has a spacious campus and a twenty-five acre athletic field which has ample facilities for every type of outdoor sport—Football, Baseball, Track, Tennis and Soccer. The environment is ideal for winter sports—Skiing, Skating, Tobogganing and Hockey. Golf is available without additional charge. A large Gymnasium provides for indoor exercise and Basketball.

The life at Tilton is happy and wholesome and more like that of a home than of a school.

THE CLARK SCHOOL, Hanover, N. H.

CLIFFORD PEASE CLARK, Ph D , Founder

FRANK MILLETT MORGAN, Ph D , Director

The purpose of The Clark School is primarily to prepare a boy adequately and thoroughly for College or Business, and to inculcate in him those basic principles and high ideals which tend toward the development of a manly character

Hanover, the seat of Dartmouth College, within sight of the Green Mountains and forty miles from the southern spur of the White Mountains, is an ideal location for a preparatory school. The proximity to Dartmouth offers many unusual advantages, and a certain inspiration is gained from contact with college men, a strengthening of a boy's purpose to acquire that development which he sees going on all around him.

Four distinct courses of study are offered—a four-year Preparatory Course preparing for the College Entrance Board Examinations and accredited to Colleges admitting by Certificate, a two-year Intensive Course for boys over sixteen who have lost time through sickness or who have attended a school where no emphasis was laid on the exacting details of preparation for College Entrance; a one-year Preparatory Course for high school graduates, and a Junior College Business Course

The enrollment is limited to sixty and, with an average of seven students to a class, much personal attention and direction are possible. Associated with the Director are able instructors, specialists in their subjects, chosen for their fitness to lead young men as well as for their scholastic ability

The School is represented in Football, Baseball, Basketball, Hockey, Golf, Tennis and Skating. Hanover is widely known as a home of winter sports. Under the supervision of the Athletic Director every student takes daily exercise. Riding horses are available at a nominal charge

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

NEW HAMPTON SCHOOL FOR BOYS,

New Hampton, New Hampshire

FREDERICK SMITH, A M , Principal

New Hampton, in the Pemigewasset Valley, is a place where a boy may live a wholesome, normal life much in the out-of-doors and where he will be taught how to study and be trained to think for himself.

Every boy enjoys some form of athletics, and all sports are carefully supervised. Hard work and hard play under careful guidance fit the New Hampton boy to enter College or Business with the mental, moral, and physical equipment to compete successfully and to work harmoniously with others

EMERSON SCHOOL FOR BOYS, Exeter, N. H.

MRS. MABEL H EMERSON, A B , Principal.

EDWARD E EMERSON, A B , Head Master.

The Emerson School for Boys 7-17 offers thorough preparation for Exeter, Andover and other leading Secondary Schools, and graduates entering Exeter have had marked success.

The School equipment includes spacious houses of Colonial design and a 12 acre Athletic Field Winter Sports include Skiing, Coasting, Skating, Hockey, and Tobogganing.

Next to sound scholarship, comradeship with instructors is emphasized The faculty has been discriminatingly chosen.

HOLDERNESS SCHOOL, Plymouth, N. H.

REV. EDRIC AMORY WELD, Rector.

On a 200 acre estate in the foothills of the White Mountains, Holderness offers College Preparatory and General Courses, including Art, Music, and Crafts. Thorough instruction in a homelike atmosphere is made possible by limited enrollment and small classes. There is opportunity for all team sports, as well as Skiing, Golf, and Riding. Each boy has charge of his own room and helps with the care of the buildings, thereby increasing his pride in his School and making possible a minimum tuition.

VERMONT ACADEMY, Saxtons River, Vt.

LAURENCE G. LEAVITT, B.S., A.M., Head Master.

Vermont Academy is a college preparatory school with a special cultural program for the non-college boy. On the thirty-six acre campus are eleven modern buildings, tennis courts, pond, and playing fields.

Athletics are coached by the faculty, who are chosen for personality and interest in boys as well as teaching ability. Winter sports and an outing club are especially emphasized, and expert instruction in skiing is given.

Work in dramatics and a school paper supplement the classroom English. The study and appreciation of Music are encouraged. A friendly social life is maintained between boys and faculty.

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

MOUNT HERMON SCHOOL, Mount Hermon, Mass

DAVID R. PORTER, M A , Head Master.

An adequate endowment, annual gifts and student participation in the operation of Farm and School enable Mount Hermon to offer earnest boys an exceptional opportunity for preparation for College at low rate

In the last five years, 86 per cent of the Graduates entered College Students come from 46 states and 36 countries

A comprehensive plan of intramural Sports in which every boy is urged to participate is supplemented by a modified inter-scholastic Sports Program (See also p 874)

THE HUNTINGTON SCHOOL FOR BOYS,

320 Huntington Ave., Boston, Massachusetts.

CHARLES H SAMPSON, B.S , Ed M., Head Master

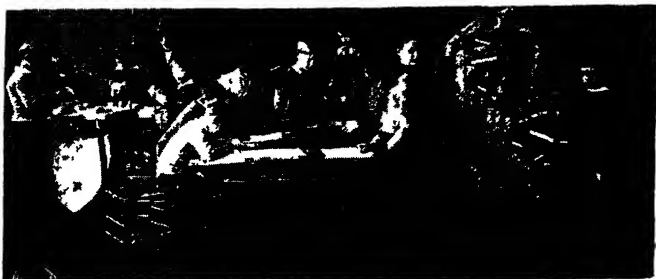

A well equipped Private Day School of the conservatively progressive type. The student body is divided into five forms. Boys enrolled in the School are preparing for the leading colleges not only in New England but throughout the country The School has the privilege of entering boys in College by the certificate method Complete preparation for the College Board Examinations is offered in all courses

While scholastic attainment is primarily emphasized, the School does not neglect proper attention to the complete development of the individual boy Every boy is expected to participate daily in some form of physical exercise, including organized play, sports and games

A coeducational summer session is for those who wish to make up conditions in grammar and high school subjects and for those who wish preparation for the September examinations

The equipment available includes Classrooms of standard size, Science Laboratories, a complete Gymnasium with three Basketball Courts, Swimming Pool, Running Track, and six acres of Outdoor Playing Fields.

36 Browne Street, Brookline, Mass.

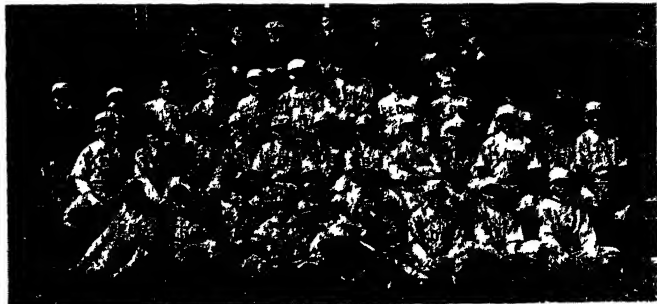

ROBERT LINCOLN CUMMINGS, Head Master.

The Longwood Day School offers young boys an opportunity to work and play under the influence, guidance and supervision of specially trained, sympathetic and understanding men and women teachers. There are men teachers above the Fourth Grade. Girls are admitted to the first four Grades.

There are classes from Kindergarten to three years from College. Boys are thoroughly prepared for the leading College Preparatory Schools and especially for the examinations of the Secondary Examination Board.

The Program includes many self-motivated, purposeful activities that grow naturally from the boys' interests and needs. Playground activities are carefully supervised. A special building is devoted to the Arts and Crafts. Music is included in the program, with opportunity for studying the piano and violin. French is given a prominent place in the curriculum.

Each morning the school meets for Chapel services conducted by a Clergyman who is also a member of the faculty, teaching History and Literature. Religious Education, interdenominational in character, is included in the Program.

GOVERNOR DUMMER ACADEMY,

South Byfield, Mass

EDWARD W. EAMES, M A., Head Master.

In 1761 the Royal Governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony, William Dummer, bequeathed his farm of 360 acres with the income therefrom, to establish a Grammar School for boys. This School, thirty miles from Boston in the beautiful, rolling North Shore country, retains much of the charm and tradition of old New England.

Governor Dummer is a genuinely small School of 100 boys and 16 masters. This makes it possible to give each boy personal attention, and to maintain a friendly, homelike atmosphere. The oil painting of Governor Dummer here reproduced hangs in the hall of the Mansion House, a beautiful and historic dwelling, built by the Governor about 1716 and now occupied by the Head Master.

BEACON SCHOOL, Wellesley Hills, Mass.

WILLIAM V. TREVOY, A.M., Director.

At the Beacon School 75 boys 13-19 live a wholesome, normal life while preparing for College. A general High School Course is offered and special courses in Business Training are available. An intimate home life with one teacher for every ten boys assures a careful study of the problems and progress of each boy. Character building is stressed and student participation in management is encouraged. Special opportunities in Art and Music are offered, the School Orchestra is directed by a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The large country estate, ten miles from Boston, is ideal in location and the city's cultural and recreational advantages are used as a means of educating the boys. All sports featured by secondary schools are given due attention,—Football, Baseball, Basketball, Hockey, and Tennis. Some suitable form of exercise is required of each boy.

Interest in international questions is stimulated by conferences of Foreign Students which have now, in their sixth year, become an important part of the School Life. Every effort is made to broaden the outlook and the contacts of the School Group.

DEERFIELD ACADEMY, Deerfield, Massachusetts.
FRANK L. BOYDEN, Amherst; Ped D, LL D., Director.

Deerfield, founded in 1797, is one of the leading Schools for boys. Several of its buildings date from Pre-Revolutionary days. Its ideals are true to the old traditions of scholarship and moral training, but the Academy of today is thoroughly modernized and completely in touch with the life of the times.

The four year Course of Study corresponds to that of the senior high school, and prepares students for any College or University. The School Certificate is accepted by all Colleges admitting without examination. The Boarding Department is exclusively for boys.

Dormitories are splendidly equipped, as are the recently completed Science and Academy Buildings and the Gymnasium.

Fields, hills, and streams are part of the School Campus, and each student participates in some form of daily athletic exercise and sport,—Baseball, Hockey, Football, Tennis or Basketball.

Glee Club and Dramatics are popular extra-curricular activities. Each year members of the Senior Class present a Shakespearean comedy as part of the regular Commencement exercises.

A Deerfield boy is offered thorough College Preparation and a wholesome social life with his fellows.

BERKSHIRE MEMORIAL BUILDING

BERKSHIRE SCHOOL,
Sheffield, Massachusetts.

SEAVER B. BUCK, A B , Harvard, Head Master

This college preparatory school occupies an estate of three hundred fifty acres, four miles from Sheffield, at an elevation of nine hundred feet on the eastern slope of Mt Everett, overlooking the valley of the Housatonic

Graduates enter the leading colleges of the east—Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Williams claiming the majority The course of study covers a period of five years in preparation for the C E. B examinations or for certification In addition to the regular college requirement, opportunity is offered for the study of music, art, dramatics and science.

A Council of eleven, chosen each term from among the older boys, cooperates with the faculty in matters of discipline where the general interest of the school is concerned.

The location among the Berkshire Hills has resulted in the development of two organizations somewhat unique in eastern schools The Berkshire Outing Club and the Berkshire Ski Club, each under a skilled director, have united in making many miles of trails over the Taconic Range, where hiking and sking in their respective seasons supplement the organized athletics of the school

Berkshire School exists for service only—not for profit It is conducted solely for the benefit of its pupils and, through them, of the nation Its charter exempts it from taxation Its trustees, a self-perpetuating body with alumni representation, serve without pay There are no profits and no dividends. Any surplus over operating expenses is used to improve the equipment and efficiency of the School

The school offers annually scholarships amounting to thirty thousand dollars, the amount of the individual awards varying from five hundred to one thousand dollars These awards are made on the basis of scholarship, character and financial need

In this community of interesting youngsters, lads of 7, 12, or 14 live and work together under the friendly guidance of experienced men and women who know and love boys

Each boy is one of a large family, learns to respect the rights of others, and finds some phase of Athletics, Art, or Study in which he can achieve success and develop self confidence and independence. He grows to feel a pride in his own achievement and a responsibility for the success of his group

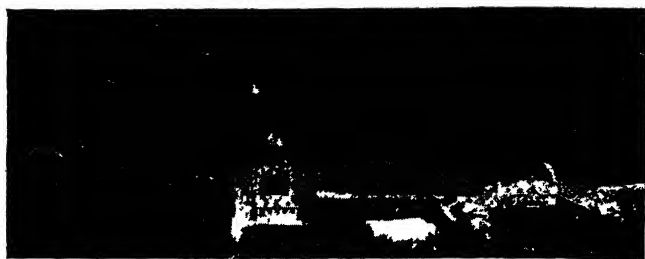

But the boy's major job is to become so thoroughly grounded in elementary subjects that he will be a credit to himself and his family at Andover, Exeter, Deerfield, Hotchkiss, St. Mark's, or the score of schools of similar standing.

Eaglebrook also offers fifty acres of playing fields, companionship of desirable boys of similar age, healthy care, and skilled instruction not merely in studies but in Swimming, Skiing, Skating, Hockey and countless other accomplishments that will mean so much to a boy in his Preparatory School and College life

Pictures of Eaglebrook in a school publication "The Young Boy and His School" will be sent on request.

PORTSMOUTH PRIORY AND SCHOOL, Portsmouth, Rhode Island

VERY REV. DOM J. HUGH DIMAN, O.S.B., Prior

Portsmouth Priory School, opened in 1926, is attached to Portsmouth Priory, which is a house of the English Benedictine Congregation

The School aims both to train boys in the Catholic Faith, and to give them a liberal education for the leading Colleges and Universities. The curriculum covers six years, Grades VII and VIII, and four years of high school. At the end of the sixth year boys take the C. E. B. Examinations under Plan B.

In the organization of instruction, careful attention is paid not only to content but also to such questions as proper methods of study and individual differences in ability. Classes are small, organized in sets which group boys of similar advancement and capacities. Unsupervised study periods are few and short. Hours in class are correspondingly more numerous, it is expected that most of the work will be done there and faulty habits of study eliminated.

Situated in the country on the shore of Narragansett Bay, the campus of 120 acres with its abundant equipment for athletics makes possible a wide variety of outdoor activities—Football, Basketball, Baseball, Ice-skating, Hockey, Tennis, Golf, Swimming, Boating.

In an effort to enrich and develop boys' interests during their leisure hours and to create an agreeable social environment, organized hobbies are pursued under supervision—Art, Music, Dramatics, Natural Science, Photography, Typewriting, and numerous others. Under the "House Plan" the School is divided into two houses, each with its own library and common rooms, and all that provides a natural and pleasant center of daily life.

Canterbury School, founded in 1915, is a College Preparatory Boarding School for Catholic boys. It is conducted by a Corporation composed of prominent Catholic laymen among whom are Henry O. Havemeyer, Clarence H. Mackay, James A. Farrell, and Terence F. Carmody. It maintains the highest standards of discipline and scholarship, and gives a sound training in the doctrines and practices of the Catholic religion.

The Head Master and all the teachers are laymen. The chapel and religious services are under the direction of a diocesan priest appointed by the Bishop. The boys, from eleven to eighteen years old, represent the best type of American youth.

The school grounds, 135 acres at an elevation of 500 feet, are beautifully and healthfully situated, and provide space for Football, Baseball, Hockey, Track, Tennis, and Golf. There are three dormitories: North, built in 1928; Middle, renovated in 1926; South, built in 1927. A Gothic Chapel was finished in 1928. The Gymnasium (1924) contains locker-rooms, basketball floor, squash courts, and a 75 foot swimming pool.

Enrollment is limited to 95 boys. The School is remarkable for its excellent spirit of discipline and study, its pleasant and home-like atmosphere, its fine equipment, the character of its boys and masters, and its success in the College Board examinations.

THE ROXBURY SCHOOL, Cheshire, Connecticut.

A. N. SHERIFF, Head Master.

Roxbury has attained marked success in College Preparation by emphasizing the individual importance of each student. Following are the salient features

FLEXIBILITY OF ORGANIZATION

Instruction is in small classes, usually approximating six students. When advisable, boys may be taught alone or in groups of two or three. Students' Programs are arranged and revised to fit their individual requirements and capacities, as determined by careful study. The aim is thoroughness, and speed; the methods employed, by elimination of aimless effort and by stimulation to intellectual initiative, resourcefulness, and enthusiasm, result in rapidity of progress.

WELL-ROUNDED TRAINING

Daily supervision of each boy is painstaking, but such as to encourage self-reliance, manliness, and self-respect. Close contact with masters of understanding is used to arouse students to a sense of their own inner power and to a willingness to assume responsibility. An important goal is the development of each boy's potentialities of mind and body.

Although non-sectarian, the School, in cooperation with parents, practices a sympathetic attitude toward the maintenance of each boy's religious observances, whatever his faith.

Physical Training is provided by the use of an adequately equipped Gymnasium and Athletic Fields. Students all participate in healthful recreation, and a great majority engage in Competitive Sports under the instruction of competent coaches.

Extra-curricular activities are maintained for the promotion of a generally healthful spirit.

Write Mr. Sargent, 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

THE CHOATE SCHOOL, Wallingford, Connecticut.

GEORGE C ST JOHN, Head Master

The underlying purpose in the foundation of Choate was the desire to prove that the life of a family and the life of a school may be effectively combined, that a boy, while gaining the benefits that any good school must provide—efficient teaching, manly discipline, systematic exercise, and association with boys of purpose—need not lose the intimate, personal influence that should characterize his home—a genuine interest in his individuality, a friendly and compelling contact with maturer points of view, and an unconscious development in appreciation of all that “culture” stands for. Through the growth and organization of thirty-nine years (twenty-seven of them under the present Head Master), this has been the distinguishing ideal of Choate, and the School of today is planned, and the personality and character of its masters hard sought, to give to its larger number of fellows both the same training and the same “atmosphere” that the Founders created for the four boys who made up the original school.

Above all, the School is unsparing in its efforts to strengthen in the boys’ minds high motives which shall control their lives

THE MAIN BUILDING

THE TAFT SCHOOL, Watertown, Connecticut.

HORACE D. TAFT, Head Master.

The object of the School is to give boys a sound training, physical, mental and moral, and to make them strong, manly and healthy men. A thorough preparation is given for any College or Scientific School.

The course of study covers five years, and it is very desirable that a boy enter as early as possible in the course. Twelve is the minimum age for the lowest class. Admission examinations are required in all cases.

The number of masters makes it possible for them to be in close touch with all the boys. A decided difference is made between the discipline of the younger boys and the older.

Religious exercises are held each day in the new Bingham Auditorium. Sunday morning school service is conducted in Christ Church, Watertown.

The School instruction aims at more than thorough College Preparation. Classes are small enough to enable instructors to judge of the thoroughness of each boy's preparation of the day's work, to insist upon his best efforts, and to give him such supervision as is necessary.

Physical development is in charge of a regular master of the School, who has had special training and devotes all his time to it. All boys are expected to take vigorous part in athletics, unless parents request to have them excused. Football, Baseball, Basketball and Hockey, in each of which the boys form three teams, are part of the regular exercise of the School.

Recent endowment has made possible several additions to the school plant. A new Infirmary and Service Building, the Charles Phelps Taft Hall containing Library, Common Room, Upper School Study Hall, Classrooms, and Dormitories, and the Bingham Auditorium have recently been constructed.

POMFRET SCHOOL, Pomfret, Conn

HALLECK LEFFERTS, Ph B , Head Master

Pomfret School holds one of the foremost places in the field of Secondary Education. It furnishes sound learning and Christian education by instruction in all studies required for admission to University or College, but this particular objective is not its sole purpose. It develops throughout its Course thorough training for those planning to enter into active work upon graduation.

The Five Year Course of Study corresponds to the work offered in Junior and Senior High Schools. Applicants to the first form should not be under twelve years of age. Small classes, directed by able instructors who are all specialists in their subjects, make possible a maximum of personal attention and direction.

The extensive School Grounds have an ideal site in the country town of Pomfret. Full athletic and recreational equipment provides for all Sports, Games and Physical Exercise in which each boy takes a vigorous part.

Friends of Pomfret School have recently provided generous means for its growth and equipment, making possible a beautiful Auditorium Building, Chemical and Physical Laboratories, a central Heating Plant and a rehabilitated Gymnasium.

Pomfret continues to carry out the ideal of its founder, that of fitting boys to enter College or Business with the most sound background—mental, moral and physical.

THE LAWRENCEVILLE SCHOOL,
Lawrenceville, New Jersey.

ALLAN V HEELY, B A , M A , Head Master.

Lawrenceville is an endowed, non-sectarian boarding School for Boys, established in 1810 by the Reverend Isaac V Brown and reorganized in 1881 on the John C Green Foundation. It is controlled by a Board of Trustees. The student body are all engaged in college preparation, and alumni of the School have entered all the more important Colleges and Universities.

The plan of operation is an American adaptation of the English house system. The house is the centre of social life and of a program of intra-mural competition in all forms of activity. By dividing the student body into small groups, the system permits a high degree of individual guidance and unusual opportunity for each boy to contribute his special aptitudes to the common good. The one hundred boys of the Lower School are accommodated under special supervision in the Alumni War Memorial Building. The Upper House, for eighty members of the highest Form provides dormitory life and greatly increased self-reliance as a natural transition from school to college. The twelve residence houses, all under the supervision of experienced resident masters, accommodate five hundred boys.

A faculty of over fifty masters permits instruction in unusually small sections, to which boys are assigned according to their aptitude. The curriculum gives a prominent place to art and music.

The School property comprises more than four hundred acres. Physical training, supervised by masters, is required of all boys.

A number of scholarships are available. Parents and boys should visit the School before making application.

CORNELIUS B. BOOCOCK, B A, Associate Head Master.

A Boarding and Day School for boys, nine miles west of Philadelphia, on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Haverford is in an exclusively residential suburb and educational center. The Haverford College campus adjoins the school campus. Bryn Mawr College is a mile distant.

The boarding department is limited to seventy-five, insuring to the pupils the advantages of individual attention and the guarded home life so difficult to secure except in a small school.

While the School aims at thorough general training it is distinctively a College Preparatory School, and practically all its graduates enter College. They have had remarkable success in passing the admission examinations, and in maintaining high standing in the leading Colleges and Universities.

There are Six Forms in the School. The average age for admission to the First Form is twelve years. There is a Junior School of six grades, attended by day pupils.

The classroom instruction is in small groups and is supplemented by individual teaching for those who require it.

The School encourages and requires every pupil to engage systematically in some form of outdoor athletics. The open country about Haverford and the ample grounds afford opportunity for all sports in season. Football, Soccer, Tennis, Swimming, Hockey, Basketball, Squash, Skating, Track and Baseball.

The illustrated circular will be sent on application.

Philadelphia, Pa

RICHARD KNOWLES, LL B , Ph D , Harvard, Head

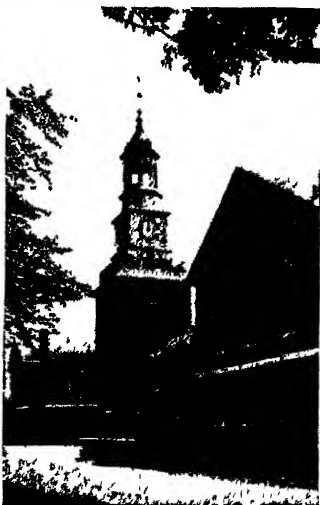

Founded upon the traditions of early Colonial Days, since 1925 this has been operated as a Country Day School. It aims to combine the finish of a Private School with the democracy of a Public Institution, and to satisfy the vocational element needed by the American boy of today without diminishing the standards of a Liberal Arts course. To the Colonial school building were added in 1932 a biological laboratory, an art studio, a spare classroom, a study hall, four squash courts and a Junior School extension to the gymnasium.

Five, four and three years respectively are required to complete the work of Junior, Middle and Senior Schools. The latter prepares for Universities, Colleges, and Scientific and Engineering Schools.

Art, Manual Training, Nature Study, Visual Geography, Museum visits, Music Appreciation, Literary Experimentation, are part of the curriculum.

Two Gymnasiums, Indoor Play Space, Track, Jumping Pits, Football Gridirons, Baseball Diamonds, Soccer Fields, Tennis Courts, Squash Courts, provide for the exercise and training of 600 boys.

THE HILL SCHOOL, Pottstown, Pennsylvania
JAMES I. WENDELL, M. A., Head Master.

The Hill School began its eightieth year in 1930, as an endowed institution, conducted not for profit and administered by a Board of Trustees, composed of alumni and friends, through a Head Master appointed by the Board.

The School aims to combine with scholastic efficiency, consideration of each boy's individual needs, correction and direction of physical tendencies, the formation of right habits of study, and maintenance of social and moral conditions favorable to the development of clean, vigorous character.

Applications for admission must bear the favorable endorsement of, or satisfactory reference to, alumni or parents of present or past members of the School. Generous scholarship aid is available.

Special stress is laid upon the careful direction of extra-curricular activities. Debating, Musical, Dramatic and Literary Clubs, and three School publications.

Physical Training is required of all. Complete equipment, providing unusual opportunities for recreation and physical development, includes a modern Gymnasium and Games Room, two Swimming Pools, a Golf Course, Tennis, Basketball and Squash Courts, Baseball Diamonds and Cage, Football Fields, Cinder and Board Running Tracks, Rifle Range and Traps for clay pigeon shooting. A preventive medicine program instituted in 1922 has produced unparalleled health records.

ST. ALBANS SCHOOL, Washington. D. C.

BISHOP OF WASHINGTON, President

REV ALBERT HAWLEY LUCAS, B.S , M A , Head

St. Albans, the National Cathedral School for Boys, was established in 1909 by the gift of Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnston, niece of President Buchanan and hostess of the White House during his administration. It is part of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia.

Four miles northwest of the Capitol, in the Close, with its 67 acres of meadows and woodland, St. Albans overlooks the City of Washington and beyond to the hills of the Potomac.

College Preparation is stressed in both Lower and Upper Departments,—not by cramming for examinations in the last few years, but by laying a broad and generous foundation in the early Forms and insisting on accuracy and thoroughness.

The Lower School building contains Classrooms, Art, Manual Training, Music and Play Rooms, Lockers and Showers, and Masters' Apartments.

On the 10 acre athletic field are Football and Baseball Fields. In addition to Tennis and Outdoor Basketball Courts, the younger boys have their own Playing Field.

JOHN WAYNE RICHARDS, Head Master

In a beautiful residential suburb of Chicago, this School prepares for leading Universities

The New Plan in Education was put into practice in 1930. The results are amazingly gratifying. Each subject is given ninety minutes in the daily schedule, the first half for class work, the second forty-five minutes for directed preparation of the next day's work.

Each day a new subject comes first on the "staggered, rotating schedule" so that no subject has precedence or preferred position. Every fifth period is given over to independent written review and research on the pupil's own responsibility. The Study Hall Library is equipped to interest boys, who have completed their class work, in good reading outside the curriculum.

Afternoons are spent at Golf or Tennis, on the Athletic Fields or in the Gymnasium with its Swimming Pool. Scientific physical training and opportunity for team competition for every boy. Real work is available in Physical and Health Education.

Culver was founded in 1894 by Henry Harrison Culver. In June 1932 it was transferred by his family from their private ownership to The Culver Educational Foundation in perpetuity.

Without thought of profit, Culver has devoted its energies and resources to the Education of the Whole Boy. Its training is broad enough to prepare a boy for any college or for entrance into the business field upon graduation. Emphasis is placed on the development of the individual and his capacity to think. Each boy's program of studies is designed to meet his individual needs according to his aptitude, interest and future plans. Junior College work of Freshman year is available for 1935-36.

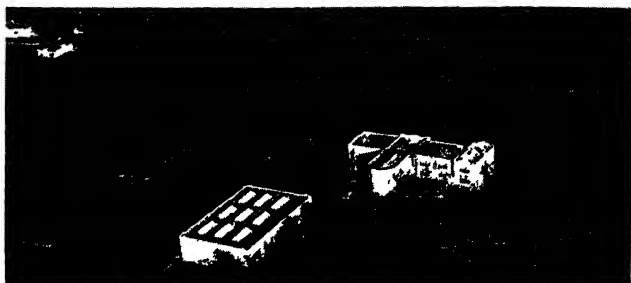

The educational features of military training have been utilized at Culver since its beginning in developing character and in teaching the value of discipline and cooperation.

The enrollment of the school is national in character. As a result of the flexibility of the curriculum, 459 Culver graduates are enrolled during the current year in 115 colleges and universities in 37 states.

Culver, located in Northern Indiana, on 1000 acres along Lake Maxinkuckee, has unusually complete facilities for every phase of a boy's growth and happiness through the pre-college years.

This Outdoor School is for boys who need added strength during their growth and for those who desire a broader outdoor life rather than one limited to campus athletics

The combination of altitude, dry atmosphere and abundant sunshine makes the climate of New Mexico particularly healthful. The School is thirty-five miles northwest of Santa Fé, in the belt of big pine timber in the Jemez Mountains

The Course of Study covers six years previous to College Entrance. The boys progress by subjects rather than by years and may be retarded or advanced in one subject without affecting other courses. The work is planned to give a background of cultural knowledge and discernment, to develop methods and intellectual interest in further study

Riding is the chief extra-curricular activity. Each boy is assigned a Saddle Horse and equipment on arrival. On Saturday the boys ride by patrols, each with a master, to some point of interest in the country. Camp May, the School Cabin near the crest of the Jemez, makes a convenient base for weekend trips to higher peaks, to trout streams, to the "Valles"

Athletics are intramural, and suited to the entertainment and development of the boy

Founded by William Whiting Nolen in 1886
Incorporated in 1924

Manter Hall is one of the oldest and best known unendowed schools in America. An exceptional course of study is offered, preparing both boys and girls for College Entrance Examinations.

The work is planned for the individual and is adapted to the demands of each student's problems.

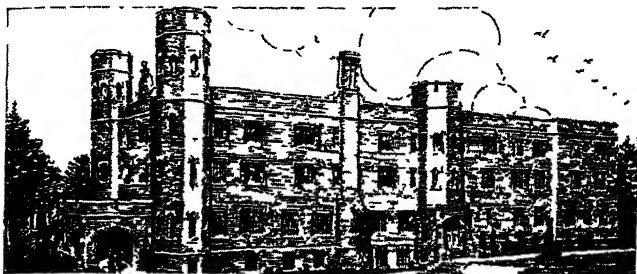

Each instructor is a specialist in his particular subject and has an exhaustive knowledge of the requirements of the College Entrance Board in that subject. Of the thirty-eight thoroughly competent instructors, each of the following has taught in the School twenty years or more: John C Hall, B S , Charles A Hobbs, A M , Charles H Mergendahl, Ed M , James A Reeves, A B , Charles M Underwood, Ph D , Hollis Webster, A M , and J Rowe Webster, A B.

The new School building, designed with a view to the unusual purposes of Manter Hall, offers dormitory accommodations. The classrooms and laboratories are small, well lighted and ventilated, intended for the small group teaching which has always been Manter Hall's method.

Social and athletic diversions are taken in stride at Manter Hall. Because of the School's exacting scholastic standards, no organized teams which require intensive application and exhausting practice are allowed to represent the School. Facilities for exercise comprise tennis, squash, swimming, track. Condition comes first, proficiency second.

The School year begins on the Monday following the last Wednesday in September and ends with the final day of the College Entrance Examination Board's June examinations. The Summer session begins on the Monday following July 4 and ends with the final day of the College Entrance Examination Board's September examinations. TENACRE, the Junior School department of Dana Hall, is for young girls between eight and fifteen years of age. The curriculum corresponds to that required in the last four years of Grammar School and the first year of High School.

On the beautiful country estate, about ten minutes from Dana Hall, are several well equipped, modern homes providing accommodation for sixty pupils. The individual needs of the girls are carefully met. A Gymnasium, Outdoor Sports and Horseback Riding under trained teachers provide for physical welfare.

DANA HALL offers thorough preparation for all the leading Colleges for Women, and a broad General Course for those girls who do not wish to enter College. The School stands for thorough scholarship and general culture.

Located in a New England college town, fourteen miles from Boston, and possessing extensive grounds, Dana Hall affords to an unusual degree the advantages of both city and country life. The School offers opportunities for the leading outdoor sports including Tennis, Field Hockey, Basketball, Archery, etc. The Dana Hall stables provide fine horses for cross country riding, under an experienced master.

Under proper chaperonage the pupils enjoy the rare opportunities Boston offers in Music and Art. (See also p 927).

EMMA WILLARD SCHOOL, Troy, New York

MISS ELIZA KELLAS, LL D , Principal

Emma Willard School, organized 1814, is for girls of High School age. In an outlying residential section, on a plateau 400 feet above sea level, it is insured pure invigorating air and commands an extensive view of the Hudson and Mohawk valleys, the Catskills, and the lower Adirondacks.

About ninety per cent of the girls prepare for College and the majority of the graduates enter College or University either by the College Entrance Board Examinations or by Certificate. The General Course offers a wider choice of studies with special opportunities in Music and Art.

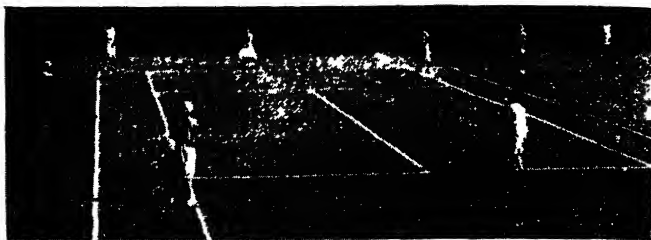

The School Grounds, covering over sixty acres, include Hockey Fields and Tennis and Basketball Courts and make possible free out of door life during the entire school year.

The School Buildings, six in number, are of gray stone and thoroughly fireproof in construction. They are furnished with all provision for the comfort of a well ordered home and a well equipped School. Schoolrooms, Laboratories and Gymnasium have been planned and equipped under the direction of experts. The Residence is separated from the main School Building, thus making it possible to have there a free, natural life and an atmosphere of quiet and rest.

College trained teachers of excellent experience and forceful personality have charge of the work. Each student is considered individually, and when occasion demands, special arrangements are made for her. Emphasis is placed on work well done and the gain in power to think and to do, as well as on ability to meet the requirements of College Preparation.

The government of the School is based on mutual understanding between teacher and pupil, the honor of the students being relied upon rather than arbitrary restrictions.

FOXHOLLOW SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, Rhinebeck, New York.

AILEEN M FARRELL, M.A., Oxon, Principal.

Foxhollow School is on the Hudson River about ninety miles north of New York City. The loveliness of the property and the charm of the house provide a perfect setting for the cultural aims of the School. The genial homelike atmosphere maintains for the student a continuity of social existence that is so often broken in upon by four years passed under institutional conditions.

Suiting the best traditions of country life, a simple tone pervades everything at Foxhollow. The girls have certain household duties to perform each week in connection with the care of their own rooms and few possessions. To supplement this incidental training, there are regular classes in cooking, sewing and dressmaking.

With a limited enrollment, Foxhollow looks carefully to the needs of each student who is in no way hampered by the usual ills of competitive class work. In accordance with the most important trend of Progressive Education, the interests of the School are centered upon the integration of subject matter.

In the Upper School, certain periods of civilization are studied in sequence through their history, literature, art and music with the aim of drawing from such correlated work the basic principles of culture and ethics that measure up to the demands of any age.

The separately housed Lower School for girls twelve years and over, has its own extra curricular and athletic interests quite apart from the upper grades.

NICHOLS JUNIOR COLLEGE,Dudley, Massachusetts*JAMES LAWSON CONRAD, B B A , President

The old Nichols Academy, founded in 1815, but inoperative for the last twenty years, was reopened in September, 1931 as a Junior College of Business Administration and Executive Training. From the start its place in the educational world has been assured.

The first Junior College in the East exclusively for Men, this is also the first in the East to offer Business Administration Courses with full campus and dormitory equipment.

A mid-year course commencing February 1 is especially for mid-year High School graduates and for those Men who are not attracted by the four year courses of the Liberal Arts College. Students entering at this time will continue work at the School through the summer, completing the two year course in one and a half years.

Attractively situated in the Dudley Hills section of Massachusetts, Nichols is readily accessible but apart from the distractions of the large cities. The spacious 75 acre Campus makes possible the full development of college life with every opportunity for Athletics.

The exceedingly practical course, under the direction of men of proven ability, provides the required subjects of the ordinary four year College of Business Administration with a few essential electives and cultural subjects.

Students are fitted for positions of trust and responsibility as Business Executives and yet have a cultural background without the necessity of spending two extra years in the study of unrelated subjects.

THE KATHARINE GIBBS SCHOOLS,

New York, Boston, Providence and Bermuda

JAMES GORDON GIBBS, President

These well established Schools were organized to prepare young Women for Business or the Management of their Personal Affairs. Two and One-Year Courses are open to graduates of approved secondary schools. The Two-Year Course is designed for those not wishing to go to college but desiring a cultural as well as a business education. The One-Year Course provides a thorough mastery of secretarial methods, with supplemental courses in business subjects.

A Special Course for College Women offers unusual preparation for greater opportunity. A six weeks summer course is given in the Providence School. Bermuda sessions (5 weeks) are optional.

Delightful resident accommodations in the New York and Boston Schools. The Schools are under the same administration with individual staffs of college trained men and women in both academic and technical departments.

The New York School is at 247 Park Ave.; the Boston School at 90 Marlborough St., the Providence School at 155 Angell St., and the Bermuda School at "Rosedon," Hamilton.

THE EXPERIENTIAL GROUPS,

353 West 57th St., New York City.

MRS MARION COATS GRAVES, Chairman

The Experiential Groups are planned to meet the problems of the girl today, to meet the needs of families who are interested in helping girls from eighteen to twenty-five to stand on their own feet. The Groups offer a new type of education, a flexible curriculum.

New York is used by the Groups as their laboratory. Here are being worked out daily problems in industry, in merchandising, in government, in social welfare, in the fine arts with which young women should be familiar.

The girls who share the work of the Groups feel a pride, an independence. They know that they are working in a real world—that they are sharing in discovery and adventure. They live at the Clubhouse of the American Woman's Association, in contact with older women who are doing the world's work.

The name "Experiential" is used, meaning that the curriculum grows out of everyday experience and is not merely a matter of theory as to what a student ought to know. Girls, in the interim between school and the making of their own home, crave experience. The answer lies in introducing them to the growing world in which they must live.

THE GARLAND SCHOOL OF HOMEMAKING,
409 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, Mass.

MRS. GLADYS BECKETT JONES, M S , Director.

The Garland School of Homemaking, a Junior College, offers to Secondary School Graduates a two-year course which includes the practical and theoretical work of Foods, Cookery, Marketing, Nutrition, Sewing, Textiles, Costume Design, Applied Art, Household Management and Budgeting, and related subjects, Psychology, General Science, Child Study Literature

For the more mature student who has had some college experience or other similar educational background, there is a one-year course stressing practical work in the fields of foods and cookery, clothing and textiles, household management, family relationships and child training

The School is progressive in spirit giving as much freedom as the student is prepared to use constructively. Classes are small and methods of instruction include class and laboratory exercises, informal discussions and individual conferences

The School occupies a large building. Each of the three residence houses is supervised by an advisor and is maintained as a separate unit. The resident students have practical training in the administration and in the social and economic activities of a modern home

THE DANFORTH-DUNBAR SCHOOL,

Worcester, Massachusetts.

GLADYS M. DUNBAR, Director.

The Art of Living as expressed in the various phases of a Woman's life is thoroughly covered here

The curriculum enables the Students to acquire the grace of true hospitality, to know the foods a family requires and how to buy and prepare them, to learn how to entertain in the accepted modes of the day, the science of motherhood and the care and training of children, to understand art and the period to which it belongs, to discriminate the books on one's reading list, to be able to choose and appreciate a play, to listen to music and understand its message. The background of the School is in keeping with the air of gracious and informal living which the Director desires to maintain.

FELLOWCRAFTERS SCHOOL,

165 Newbury Street, Boston, Mass.

EDWARD T. HALL, Director.

Associated with Boston University, the aim of this Progressive School is to fit the instruction to the needs of the Student rather than to force the Student into a preconceived system of training

The classes are made up of small groups which afford opportunity for individual instruction. When desired, class work may be arranged to fit the convenience of the Student.

The curriculum covers a wide variety of courses including work in Batik, Block Printing, Bookbinding, Celluloid Etching, Iron Forge Work, Design, Jewelry, Leather, Marionettes, Metal, Modeling, Stained Glass Windows, Tapestry Weaving, Weaving, Wood Carving

Simple forms of Hand Work, Camp and School Crafts, special courses for Workers in Settlements and Institutions, and a special class in Toy Making are also available

The tuition depends on the subject, the length of the course and the size of the group. In most instances it figures about $1 per hour, though some courses are much less. The Student pays for materials used

VILLA COLLINA RIDENTE, Florence, Italy.

Miss EDITH MAY, A B, Director.

This International Study Centre appeals to two groups: graduates of preparatory or finishing schools who wish the broadening experience of a year abroad, college graduates who feel the need of advanced study of contemporary civilization.

This work is unique in Europe, in offering work under university professors, in bringing the students into social contact with European men of distinction who are guests in the Centre, in offering an extended tour throughout Europe, in the fact that the group is composed of students from other countries than America, by the fact that special opportunities are offered through members of the Italian government.

French is the language of the household. The "Institut Francais" in Florence, a branch of the University of Grenoble, makes possible the study of French under conditions not usually found outside of Paris.

The mild climate, the weekend trips, travel, round out what the director hopes will be a year combining first-hand observation in history, and art with leisure to know one of the most beautiful centers of the world.

POLYGALA, Gstaad sur Montreux, Switz.

MME I DE BONSTETTEN, Principal.

INDEX OF SCHOOLS

INDEX OF SCHOOLS

Here are indexed all schools described or listed in this 19th edition of the Handbook, with page reference to the Critical Text, the Supplementary Lists and the Illustrated Announcements

The names of the directors and the post office addresses of those schools on which we have authoritative and up to date information make this a complete mailing list

Names of directors and complete addresses, so far as we know them, of schools in the Supplementary Lists will be found by referring to the page indicated. In this Index will be found the names of directors and addresses received too late for inclusion in the body of the book

No page reference is given for the schools as they appear in the Classified Lists of Schools to Meet Special Needs, pp 721-798. The various classifications of these Lists will be found by referring to the Table of Contents, pp 7-10

EDUCATIONAL COUNSEL FOR PARENTS

What School? What Camp?

1200 parents annually call on Mr Sargent for help in solving their educational problems.

Five members of staff assist, each in his own field,—Boys, Girls, Special Schools, Summer Camps, etc

Private Schools for Boys and Girls — information and catalogs supplied.

Summer Camps for Boys and Girls—those who run them and the ideals that actuate them are equally well known to Mr Sargent

Inquiries by mail which do not entail extensive investigation can usually be answered gratis

To facilitate complete understanding of the case, and make possible diagnosis and helpful advice, a blank form will be sent on request.

For consultation or extended correspondence and investigation, a suitable professional fee is charged those who are able to pay.

No Fee or Commission is ever accepted from a School or a Camp for any boy or girl registered through the influence of this office. Consequently we are free to render unprejudiced advice
